11 FROM U. S. ON SUSSEX MISSING

INQUIRY BARES DR. ROBERTSON AS "JOB KING"

Lampblack Smears Up the Whitewash at Sachs Merit Hearing.

OUSTS GOOD WORKERS.

Whitewash and lampblack smeared the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium yesterday.

As the result of an investigation in behalf of the mayor made by the city civil service commission Dr. Theodore Sachs, who resigned from the superintendency of the hospital after the mayor termed him his "worst appointee," found himself quite snow white.

REGULAR JOB HAVEN.

The lampblack intended for him showed up in large, dusky spots among the sanitarium job holders appointed by the city administration through Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner. The sanitarium was a regular haven, apparently, for Dr. Robertson's job hunting henchmen. Testimony was presented that the health commissioner put no less than twenty-seven of 'em in positions in the institution since Jan. 1, and that, of those who got jobs a number displaced regularly certified civil service employés.

In addition to the disclosures revealed by the investigation, information was obtained by THE TRIBUNE from Dr. Coon that on March 15 a man suffering from tuberculosis was admitted to the sanitarium in preference to sixty prospective patients on the waiting list, "because he was a friend of Jim Pugh." Dr. Coon said he was ordered to admit the man by Dr. Robertson.

NANCE ASKS INQUIRY.

In the meantime, while the investigation was in progress, Ald. Nance presented in the meeting of the city council a resolution directing the council finance committee "to make a thorough inquiry into the management" of the sanitarium.

The basis of Dr. Nance's resolution was that "Dr. Sachs has resigned, declaring as a reason that he does not believe in the political management of hospitals, sanitariums, and similar institutions."

Apparently the administration's supporters believed the administration's inquiry, as represented by the civil service boards, was sufficient, and though the vote was 33 to 26 in favor of the resolution it failed of passage because of a necessary two-thirds. Even this, however, did not prevent Ald. Nance from having the resolution "referred" to the finance committee, a technical distinction which will not prevent the committee from investigating.

SURGEONS TO INVESTIGATE.

At a secret meeting held in the afternoon in the Union League club a committee was appointed to investigate conditions at the sanitarium which led to the resignation of Dr. Sachs.

Dr. Frank Billings and Dr. William Allen Pusey were placed at the head

U. S. WOMEN ON TRAIN SHOT UP BY VILLISTAS

Carranza Troops Save a Box Car Load of Americans.

Monterey, Mexico, March 25.—A special train from Torreon, bringing women and children of the American colony there, passed through here tonight. The women were seated on the floor of a box car, protected by a barrier of trunks.

The guard on the train engaged in a running fight with a large number of bandits who rode alongside for several miles from Prevenci to Santo Nino. Wires were cut on both sides and attempts made to burn the bridges.

CARRANZA CAVALRY TO THE RESCUE.

There were fourteen women and children on the train, which was compelled to move slowly. The attack of the bandits was foiled by the prompt arrival of cavalry under Gen. Matias Ramos, who left San Pedro immediately upon learning the wires had been cut.

Bandits are becoming more aggressive in this section following the arrival of couriers from Villa urging the leaders here to imitate his methods against "gringoes" and exterminate all they find.

An all day battle at San Marcos, five miles south of San Pedro, was fought today by the troops of Gen. Ramos against the main body of Villistas under Canuto Reyes. Fears are expressed for the ninety Americans left in Torreon and Durango. Hunger and want of employment, apart from any political tendency, is aiding the Villistas in getting recruits, it is said.

ANOTHER TRAIN IS FIRED INTO.

Laredo, Tex., March 25.—Americans arriving here tonight from Torreon said their train was fired into by 500 bandits, supposedly Villa followers, near Viesca, between Torreon and Saltillo.

The passenger train was followed and preceded by a Carranza troop train. When the rear military train drew up the Carranza soldiers fought the bandits off. There were no American casualties.

BAND SPLIT IN FLIGHT.

BULLETIN.
BY H. D. JACOBS.
(United Press Correspondent.)

With the American Army, Colonia Dublan, Mexico, via radio to Columbus, N. M., March 25.—American troops engaged in an encompassing movement with Carranzistas near Namiquipa today got their first sight of Villistas.

There was no fighting between the bandits and the United States forces, but the Carranzistas had two brushes with other bands, reports to Gen. Pershing's headquarters stated. The pursuit was continued in a snow storm.

The bandits sighted by the Americans were a small body, and it is not known whether Villa himself was among them. The reports to headquarters gave their location as 120 miles south by southeast of Dublan.

This was the first word that the American vanguard was so close to the Villistas, and reports of fighting were expected momentarily.

BY WALTER NOBLE BURNS.

El Paso, Tex., March 25.—[Special.]—Villa is being driven into the open country eastward from Namiquipa by a semi-circle of American and Carranza troops.

He has escaped from what seemed to be a trap at El Oso, five miles from Namiquipa, and is heading for the plains country lying along the Mexican Central railroad.

This information was given out by Gen. Gabriel Gavira, Carranza commander at Juarez today.

CUT OFF FROM MOUNTAINS.

Though Villa escaped, the American and Carranza forces accomplished a coup at El Oso. Villa was headed off from the high Sierras on the west.

While the jaws of the trap set for him at El Oso did not close upon him, his present situation seems to presage his speedy capture.

That he slipped through the fingers of his pursuers when crowded against the western ramparts of the Sierra Madres is overshadowed by the fact that he was prevented from getting among the mountain fastnesses where he could have hidden for a long time.

The troops of his pursuers are now so disposed to the north, south, and west of him that there is only one direction in which he can flee. That is toward the open plains to the east, and the chances today look more favorable for his capture than ever before since the American invasion began.

VILLA FORCES ARE DIVIDED.

Gen. Gavira explained the position of Villa and of the troops closing in on him by means of a detail map hanging on the wall in his headquarters in Juarez. The map was stuck with pins with different colored heads. The pins were crowded closely together in the neighborhood of Namiquipa.

Purple pins represented Villa's forces. One purple pin was stuck midway between Namiquipa and Santa Clara. That particular pin represented Villa. A second purple pin was stuck at San Lorenzo.

"What is the meaning of this second purple pin?" Gen. Gavira was asked.

"Villa's forces have been divided," replied Gen. Gavira. "His principal command has 250 men. It is hemmed in the Santa Clara canyon and is being forced eastward.

CANYON 150 MILES LONG.

"The cañon is 150 miles long. It begins in the neighborhood of Namiquipa and debouches into a prairie country along the Mexican Central railroad. Its eastern mouth is near Ojo de Aguas.

"The walls of the cañon are low in

All Records Smashed Today

Today The Tribune prints more "Want" Advertising than it has ever printed before in a single day in its history.

For years The Tribune has far outdistanced all other Chicago newspapers in "Want" Advertising, and today it exceeds all its own previous records.

There's never been a time when the public could get such big returns from advertising in The Tribune's Classified Section and there's never been a time when The Tribune received (and deservedly) such an enormous patronage.

Turn to the Classified Section of this paper now and see the largest "Want Ad" Section (not Special Edition) that ever came off a printing press in Chicago—and probably the largest that the world has ever seen.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—The weather bureau's forecast for the week beginning Sunday says:

"Comparatively mild weather will prevail throughout the coming week generally in the Mississippi valley and in the districts east thereof, although there will be a reaction Sunday and Monday from the abnormally high temperatures that now prevail in the great central valleys and the gulf states. This change to cooler weather will be of short duration, however, and temperatures will again rise in these regions by Sunday.

"A disturbance that is now over the Mississippi valley will advance northeastward and be attended by general rains Sunday over much of the country east of the Mississippi river.

"Another storm will advance inland from the Pacific Monday or Tuesday, pass eastward to the middle plains states and the upper Mississippi valley the middle of the week and to the eastern states about Thursday. This disturbance will be preceded by a general change to warmer weather."

NO ARMS SENT TO MEXICO.

Collector of Customs at El Paso Asserts Nothing Has Crossed the Border.

El Paso, Tex., March 25.—"Not a pound of war material of any sort has gone through this port into Mexico for many weeks," said Collector of Customs Cobb today in regard to the report that the United States was investigating the shipments to Carranza's army.

"This covers guns, ammunition, and explosives," he continued. "Nor have we any knowledge that some have been smuggled across the border. Of course, the border is carefully watched."

Juvenile Theater to Stop Movies Craze Planned

Chicago is to have a children's theater, the only one of its kind in the country. It will open next fall with some new productions for children which have resulted since the agitation for such plays was started by the Drama League of America.

Announcement of the project was made yesterday at the meeting of the Drama league in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's club. Plans have not been completed, but they have gone far enough to assure Chicago that it will have a children's theater.

Newton H. Carpenter of the Art institute is coöperating with the directors of the Drama league, who hope to secure Fullerton hall, Art institute, in which to give the plays. Children will not be the players. Professional actors and actresses, who retain the "spirit of youth," will be engaged. About ten persons will compose the Children's Theater company.

Plays Every Saturday.

It is planned to give productions every Saturday morning. A charge of 10 cents will be made. The plays will appeal to children between the ages of 7 and 16 years. "Snow White" and "Hans und Gretel" are examples of the dramas to be shown.

"The Drama league felt that unless it reached the children at an early age they would get the movie habit so thoroughly that they would not care for other plays," said Theodore B. Hinckley, president of the Drama League of Chicago. "The league will advance whatever funds are necessary. It is expected the theater will become self-sustaining, at least after the first year.

"There have been numerous attempts to establish children's theaters of various kinds, but all have failed. We believe that success will come to ours. We are not going to start out on an expensive scale we might find ruinous in maintaining. By giving the plays in the Art institute we hope also to be able to help children to an appreciation of good art."

Hope to Get MacKaye Play.

At the meeting of the league announcement was made also of the effort to have the "Masque of Shakspeare," by Percy MacKaye, which is to be given in New York late in May, brought to Chicago. A chorus of 1,000 Chicago singers will be added to the professional players who will give the performance in New York. An effort is being made to secure a guarantee fund of $15,000 before arrangements are completed.

PLAN RELIEF SHIP TO GO AFTER LIEUT. SHACKLETON.

British Making Every Effort to Get in Communication with Aurora —Worry Over Explorer.

LONDON, March 25.—Hasty arrangements for the fitting out of a relief ship to go in search of Lieut. Shackleton's Antarctic expedition were being made today, though the fate of Shackleton and other members of his party was in doubt.

The New Zealand authorities were urged by cable again to attempt wireless communication with the ship Aurora, which first reported the Shackleton party in peril. The Aurora's wireless message was badly garbled in transmission.

Lady Shackleton and the explorer's friends profess confidence that Lieut. Shackleton and his men will return alive. They believe Shackleton by this time either has abandoned his attempt to cross the Polar seas from the South American side and is returning to Buenos Aires or that he is already safely over the south pole and will soon join Capt. McIntosh and his men at Cape Crozier. Antarctic fowls will supply the party with food if their rations run short, polar experts declare.

WELL, WELL, THEODORE! YOUR BIRD'S NOT NEW.

We've Had One of Your Guacharos in Our Field Museum for a Whole Year.

It may be of interest to Col. Theodore Roosevelt to hear that the guacharo, or oil bird, which he discovered in his South American trip, has, in an embalmed state, been a resident of Chicago for more than a year. The bird the colonel claims to have discovered is not new to science, according to Prof. Charles B. Cory, curator of zoölogy of the Field museum.

On the other hand, the bird was discovered by Von Humboldt and is so civilized and distinguished as to bear the name "steatornis carpipensis."

The description by the colonel and Prof. Cory tally. The bird is known as the oil bird because it is very fat and the natives render much oil from its body. It is a night bird and lives on nuts. And the Chicago specimen is in a glass case at the museum, and has been for a year.

The Children Went Along, Too, When Divorce Parents Were Remarried.

It was only a breath of spring, but it was enough to start things with Fred H. Harker of the American Color Print company. Also it coined an audible tune on the æolian harp that plays in the window of Mrs. Romura Harker's soul. And let us also count in Evelyn and Master George, aged 8 and 10, respectively, for they all went to Crown Point yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Harker separated a while ago—but that was a while ago. And if the Harkers are twice married—well, twice as much luck.

'DOGS OF WAR' MUST WAIT TILL CONGRESS FEEDS 'EM.

U. S. Army Provisions Include No Food for Gift Puppies Sent to Fort Ethan Allen.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Army men endeavoring to introduce some of the features of the European armies which have been found extremely useful during the war are glad that they have a sense of humor. They are able to laugh over the plight of the dogs which were presented to the medical department of the army, and, being a litter from a pair of the highly trained Red Cross dogs, were immediately sent to join ambulance company No. 6 at Fort Ethan Allen.

The dogs have good appetites; hence there came the request for authorization to charge up to miscellaneous expense six quarts of milk and four loaves of bread a day.

Now the controller has discovered after long study that dogs are not included in the appropriation for subsistence supplies, nor for the medical department. The dogs therefore must restrain their appetites until congress gets time to pass some special legislation allowing them to eat at the expense of the government.

KILLS SELF IN MASONS' HALL

Aurora Tyler, with Wide Acquaintance, Found Victim of Accidental Bullet.

Frank P. Engleston, a veteran Aurora Mason, who called by his first name almost every Mason in northern Illinois, yesterday was found dead in a chair in a smoking room of the Masonic temple in Aurora. There was a bullet wound in his right temple. A revolver lay at his feet. A coroner's jury examined the revolver, heard two witnesses, and returned a verdict of accidental death on the theory that he was examining the revolver when it discharged. Mr. Engleston, who was 63 years old, had been ill recently and suffered from a growing cataract of the eye. For fourteen years he was tyler of lodge No. 90 in Aurora.

HE CLEARS HIS CONSCIENCE.

Shabby Man Returns $20 Stolen from City Years Ago to Treasurer.

A poorly clothed middle aged man slipped into the office of the city treasurer just before the closing hour yesterday. He laid an envelope before W. D. Pugh, assistant city treasurer. Then he hurried out.

Inside the envelope was a $20 bill. Pinned to the bill was a bit of paper on which had been written:

"Obtained fraudulently years ago. Please put it in the proper fund and apply it to the board of education account."

The money will be placed in the municipal "conscience fund."

FAIL TO REPORT AFTER ATTACK BY SUBMARINE

Death List May Total 50; Four U. S. Citizens Are Killed on Another Boat.

OTHERS OF CREW SLAIN

LONDON, March 25.—Eleven of the twenty-five known Americans on the channel steamer Sussex, which was torpedoed while crossing the English channel from Dover to Calais yesterday, have not been located at a late hour tonight.

The official report from the French ministry of marine does not attempt to state how many persons lost their lives, but it is estimated that at least fifty were killed by the blast or drowned in attempting to gain safety in lifeboats and on rafts.

FOUR AMERICANS DEAD.

The disappearance of these twelve Americans follows closely the known death of four others on the freighter Englishman, which was sunk yesterday. Fifteen or sixteen horse tenders and members of the crew perished when the boat went down.

The dead Americans on the Englishman are:

BUCKLEY, P. MacDONALD, G.
BURKE, M. A. McDONALD, F.

FRENCH OFFICIAL REPORT.

The French official report on the Sussex disaster follows:

> The British steamer Sussex, which carried about 380 passengers, was torpedoed in the channel on the 24th by an enemy submarine.
> The captain observed a torpedo about 100 meters from the side and immediately maneuvered to avoid it, but the vessel was struck in the forward part, which was destroyed.
> The vessel, however, remained afloat. The fall of the mast destroyed part of the antennae of the wireless; moreover, when an aerial wire was improvised, the operator by an error, reported an incorrect position, which misled the torpedo boats and patrol boats, and as a result retarded the arrival of help.

PATROL BOAT TO RESCUE.

The patrol boat, Marie Therese, nevertheless, managed to find the distressed vessel and brought back to Boulogne a majority of the passengers. Others were taken to England by British torpedo boat destroyers, which had arrived at the scene of the disaster at about the same time as the Marie Therese.

The Sussex was towed to Boulogne by a steamer from that port, and now is there in security.

Unhappily, the explosion and the beginning of a panic among the passengers resulted in some victims. The exact number at this hour is not known, but it is estimated to be about fifty.

BALDWINS ARE MISSING.

Prof. J. Mark Baldwin, formerly of Lake Forest college, Illinois, with his wife and daughter, are among those reported missing.

There is some doubt about the daughter, one report having her in a Boulogne hospital with a broken leg, while another says she was killed by the explosion.

Survivors who reached London tonight are a unit in declaring the Sussex was torpedoed and without warning.

That survivors at other points are of the same opinion is evidenced in a Paris dispatch from John H. Hearley, a newspaper man aboard the Sussex, who says three American passengers agreed they saw a torpedo.

Another Paris dispatch quotes Samuel S. Bemis of Bedford, Mass., who was en route to France to join an ambulance corps, as stating positively that he saw the wake of a torpedo just before the explosion.

Important evidence was handed the admiralty tonight by British naval officers who were aboard the Sussex and were landed at Dover. They picked up fragments of steel after the explosion, which indicate the presence of a torpedo.

ACTUAL LIFE LOSS UNKNOWN.

There is no way at present to confirm the estimate of fifty dead, but that estimate was considered conservative, because the explosion was under the women's and children's saloon.

A single narrow companionway led from this saloon. There were only five private cabins on the boat, four on the deck and one between decks, hence the public saloons were crowded. These cross-channel steamers always are full, because there are only three crossings each way weekly.

The officers of the Sussex warned the passengers quickly not to be alarmed, but a number of persons, mostly women, are said to have jumped overboard.

In Water Four Hours.

Some were drowned and others with life preservers were picked up after considerable delay, in a few cases as much as four hours later. Many of the passengers were taken off by a British torpedo boat which stood by the damaged passenger ship.

The Sussex, notwithstanding the hole in its bow, was able to make port at Boulogne. One hundred and forty-three survivors have arrived in Paris. Many of them wore bandages.

Additional interest was lent to the Sussex disaster when it became known that a high English personage was aboard the packet, bound for France. This person, whose name cannot be made public at this time, took command of one of the lifeboats and went to the rescue of an Italian woman, who went raving mad when the explosion occurred and jumped overboard.

[Premier Asquith, Lord Kitchener, and other members of the British cabinet were expected to go to Paris late this week or early next to attend the allied war council. It is possible the "high English personage" referred to was one of these.]

Fear for Americans.

PARIS, March 25.—Scarcely any doubt exists at the American embassy tonight that some American lives have been lost in the disaster to the steamer Sussex.

The American ambassador, William G. Sharp, sent Naval Lieut. Bernard L. Smith by automobile to Boulogne this afternoon to investigate the cause of the disaster and assist any Americans who may need help.

The depositions of some of the American survivors who have arrived at Paris are being taken by the embassy. They will be forwarded to the state department at Washington.

From thirty to fifty persons, according to the estimates here, out of 3ou passengers and the crew of fifty-six, were lost. The weight of testimony is that the Sussex was torpedoed by a submarine without warning.

Baldwins Not in Paris.

Three Americans, Prof. James Mark Baldwin, his wife, and daughter, Elizabeth, were not among the American survivors of the Sussex disaster arriving in Paris tonight.

A dispatch received here said that Elizazeth Baldwin was in a Boulogne hospital suffering from a broken leg and other injuries. It is possible that this may be true and that her father and mother remained behind with her at Boulogne, though none of the Americans reaching Paris could recall having seen the Baldwins after the explosion. The fear is growing that they may have been lost.

Saw Girl in Wreckage.

P. W. Culbertson of Pittsburgh, one of the American survivors, who was en route to France to join an ambulance corps, reported to the American embassy tonight that he last saw Miss Baldwin lying in the midst of wreckage aboard the Sussex, bleeding from a wound in the head. A woman was attempting to stanch the flow of blood.

Ambassador Sharp obtained affidavits from several American survivors tonight.

Passengers Badly Hurt.

BOULOGNE, March 25.—At least fifty persons must have been killed or drowned on the Sussex.

Others were mangled and hurled wounded into the water. How many of these perished before the boats reached them could not be learned accurately in the confusion existing tonight.

Women survivors, separated from husbands or children, are running about frantically, seeking to learn if their relatives are among those reported landed at Dover.

Several dozen passengers, taking advantage of the clear weather, were on deck, despite the sharp atmosphere. It is inconceivable that many of these could have escaped in the terrific blast that broke and splintered the forepart of the Sussex.

Scared Man Starts Panic.

A man dived overboard a moment after the explosion. That started a panic. Several women jumped, carrying children with them. Boats were put over on either side and began picking up those that had jumped, but officers said they were certain several were drowned. It was reported that one of the rescue boats capsized, causing further loss of life, but this report could not be verified tonight.

Although the wireless house was wrecked, the operator escaped serious injury. He rigged up a temporary apparatus after several hours' work and sent out the distress signals that finally brought the Maria Therese, a French trawler, and a British destroyer to the rescue.

The three Americans who declare they saw a torpedo approaching the Sussex will make affidavits for presentation to Ambassador Sharp at Paris.

Survivors at Dover.

DOVER, March 25.—Four American survivors of the Sussex mishap have arrived here. They are G. H. Crocker, Charles T. Crocker, Edward Marshall, and Wilder G. Penfield. G. H. Crocker and Mr. Penfield are in a hospital with fractured skulls. Charles Crocker and Mr. Marshall are uninjured.

Reports received here say that Mrs. Hilton, Daniel Sargent, and T. W. Culbertson were seen aboard a French trawler. It is feared, according to the same reports, that Miss Hilton was drowned when a lifeboat capsized. Another report says Miss Hilton was saved and is in Paris.

As to the cause of the disaster, Mr. Marshall, a newspaper correspondent, said: "I have no doubt the steamer was torpedoed."

ONCE AT LAKE FOREST.

Prof. Baldwin spent two years in the early '90s, I believe, in teaching at Lake Forest college," said Mrs. R. P. Davidson, wife of Col. R. P. Davidson, superintendent of the Northwestern Military academy, at Lake Geneva.

"Col. Davidson is a cousin of Prof. Baldwin—the colonel's mother, Mrs. H. P. Davidson of Highland Park, being a sister of Prof. Baldwin's mother.

"Prof. Baldwin's specialty always has been psychology. He left Lake Forest for the University of Toronto, where he stayed for some years. Then he went to Princeton. After a few years at Princeton he became a member of the Johns Hopkins university staff.

"I do not think he has entirely severed his connection with Johns Hopkins. For a number of years he has been doing research work in Paris. I believe he has a sort of leave of absence from Johns Hopkins."

Francis E. Drake, brother of Dr. Homer A. Drake, 915 Buena avenue, one of the passengers aboard the Sussex, has been reported safe. A cablegram was received from him yesterday by Dr. Drake explaining that he escaped and is now safe in Paris, where he is in business.

ANOTHER SHIP SUNK.

LONDON, March 25.—Lloyd's report says the British steamship Salybia has been sunk and the passengers and crew were saved.

[The Salybia, of 3,352 gross tons, 342 feet long, and 46 feet beam, was built in 1904 at South Shields, and was owned by Scrutton Sons of London. In the last available shipping records the vessel is reported as having left Barbados on March 3 for London.]

SURVIVORS DESCRIBE HORROR ON SUSSEX AFTER BEING HIT BY A GERMAN TORPEDO

LONDON, March 25.—Edward Huxley of New York, who witnessed the Sussex catastrophe from beginning to end, tells a remarkable story of the manner in which the vessel was sunk, and describes the scene on the ship after the explosion as horrible. He could give no estimate of the number of persons killed, further than to say that many lives were lost.

"We left Folkestone at 1:30 p. m.," Mr. Huxley said. "The sea was smooth, the sun was shining and the steamer made good time.

"I was standing on deck, just aft of the captain's bridge, chatting with Mr. Francis M. Drake of New York. I had just looked at my watch and noticed that it was 3:05 p. m., when suddenly there was a muffled explosion. The whole forward part of the ship seemed to rise in the air, and was torn away completely from the rest of the steamer. The Sussex had been cut in two at the bridge as cleanly as if it had been done with a knife.

"For a short time there was pandemonium. Shrieks of women mingled with cries of the wounded. Some fifteen or twenty persons were drowned by jumping overboard.

Panic Finally Subsides.

"It soon became apparent that the after part of the ship, which was maintaining an even keel and holding steady, was in no immediate danger of sinking, and the panic virtually ceased. Passengers then set about giving first aid to the injured and helping to get the boats lowered.

"A number of injured persons were buried in the debris near the bridge. Seven persons, all terribly injured, were dug from the wreckage, and several badly mangled bodies were found. Undoubtedly other bodies were torn to pieves.

"It was the most awful thing I ever witnessed. There must have been passengers in the forward part of the ship, which was blown away, and I believe a large number of the crew were below in this section, as few of them were seen. All those on the forward part of the ship undoubtedly perished.

First Aid to Wounded.

"The passengers did everything possible for the wounded. The American woman doctor, (name unknown) did fine work and Mr. Penfield, although suffering from a badly shattered leg, directed the first aid for others. His heroism was magnificent. He now is among the injured in the Dover hospital.

"Miss Baldwin was standing near the bridge with Penfield and a young American who was on his way to join the Red Cross when the explosion occurred. Both she and Penfield miraculously escaped death, but their companion, whose name is not known, has not been seen since the disaster so far as I have learned.

"As to the cause of the explosion, I would not venture an opinion. As we were leaving Folkestone we passed a transport at its pier. If a submarine was responsible for damage to the Sussex it is possible the undersea craft mistook us for this transport."

Says He Saw Torpedo.

Samuel F. Bemis of Medford, Mass., a passenger on the Sussex, said today that he saw, plainly and unmistakably, the wake of a torpedo coming toward the steamer.

Mr. Bemis, who is a Harvard research man, said:

"I was on deck at the time. The weather was clear and beautiful. I saw a torpedo coming toward the steamer. The wake was plainly and unmistakably visible.

"The moment it reached us there was a terrible explosion. Many persons were blown into the water. I saw some killed before my eyes.

"Rafts and boats were lowered. I climbed upon a raft. Some persons were drowned about me. I was picked up by a lifeboat. Many persons were injured."

Flooded with Water.

M. Chatroux, inspector of the Orleans railway, who was on the Sussex, today telegraphed the following account of his experiences from Paris:

"We left Folkestone at 1 p. m. The weather was fine and the sea calm. Almost all the passengers were civilians. There were many women and children on board and a number of Belgians.

"I was lying on a lounge in the dining saloon when, at about 3 o'clock, we were shaken by a violent explosion forward.

"I hurried to the deck and the passengers there were putting on life belts and lifeboats were being lowered. Two seamen were lying unconscious, perhaps dead, on the forward part of the deck.

"The first boat to be lowered upset. The second one also turned over. However, we succeeded finally in getting almost every one into boats and we fished out of the water a number of passengers, especially women.

"Several of those on board thought we had struck a mine, but about twenty passengers with whom I talked said they had seen distinctly and had pointed out to others the wake of a torpedo."

Curiosity Saves Many Lives.

PARIS, March 25.—John H. Hearley, the American newspaper man who was on the Sussex, in describing the disaster, said:

"Yankee curiosity saved the lives of at least a dozen Americans aboard the ship. An aeroplane hove in sight just before the explosion. With a dozen other Americans, I was standing at the prow of the boat, but rushed to the stern to watch the circling birdman.

"We heard a muffled roar. I ran forward and saw the whole front of the Sussex crumpling away as a huge spurt of water threw debris upon the deck.

"Every one grabbed for a life preserver and then ran for the upper deck. Four civilians launched a lifeboat and dropped it over the side.

"Our boat had just struck the water when we heard a scream on the upper deck. The next instant a woman jumped from the third deck, landing squarely in the middle of our boat. Several of us threw out our arms and broke her fall, so that she was practically uninjured.

"She was Miss Hilton of New York. Her mother, Mrs. Edward Hilton, was also among the survivors landed at Boulogne and included in our party, arriving in Paris tonight.

Pick Up Survivors.

"Meantime passengers were jumping by the dozens. We picked up several around us and so did other boats that had been lowered. Our boat sprang a leak and despite our efforts to plug the seams threatened to sink at any moment.

"Samuel Bemis of Medford, Mass., was the real hero of the Sussex disaster. A woman, floundering in the water near our boat, screamed loudly for help and then sank beneath the waves.

"Bemis leaped into the water and swam to her rescue. He brought her to our boat and we dragged her in. The sides by this time were so nearly nevel with the water that to drag Bemis into the boat was to insure disaster.

"With a wave of his hand Bemis rolled over on his side and swam away as carelessly as if he were playing in the waves at a summer resort. Certainly few men have faced possible death with a lighter heart."

BALDHEADED MEN, OUT! THE ARMY NEEDS YOU NOT.

Your Uncovered Top Might Get Scorched by Hot Sun Down in Mexico.

Baldheaded men, you can't get into Uncle Sam's army—not in the Villa hunt, anyway.

It's a hot country down there and a soldier needs a good crop of hair for protection.

And don't try to slip by with a wig, either, for that ruse was tried yesterday and now all recruiting sergeants have been warned to become wig spotters.

Stanley Twooney of Syracuse, N. Y., got the war fever the other day while in Chicago and applied at the central recruiting office at 505 South State street for enlistment. But he was baldheaded.

"We can't accept you," said Sergt. Shupert, to whom he applied. "We don't take baldheaded men."

Twooney left and was forgotten. But he returned and gave his description.

"This description tallies with some man who was in here the other day," Sergt. Shupert mused. "Let me see. Come here," he called to the man whose record he held, and, taking hold of a lustrous black shock of hair, he pulled and pulled off a wig!

ROBERT J. WYNNE TARGET IN SUIT FOR ACCOUNTING.

Former Postmaster General and Foe of Grafters Defendant in Action of Chicago Man.

Reversing the tables on former Postmaster General Robert J. Wynne, who, during President Roosevelt's first administration, sent postoffice grafters to jail, Fred Cold, a Chicago flour dealer, and other shareholders in the First National Fire Insurance company, have filed suit for accounting in Washington, D. C., accusing Wynne and his associates of reducing the assets of the company by $2,000,000 and appropriating to themselves more than $500,000. Mr. Wynne is president of the company.

Mr. Cold, owner of the Standard Flour company, 2322-24 North Seeley avenue, says he invested $500 in the insurance company three years ago.

The bill, filed in the Supreme court of the District of Columbia, demands accounting and restitution. Defendants named are the First National Fire Insurance company, its officers, the Southern Realty company, and its officers.

The shareholders assert that President Wynne and his associates made a secret profit of $500,000 in the transfer of the Southern building, a Washington skyscraper said to be worth $2,000,000, to the Southern Realty company.

Clifford Case Again Delayed.

Disposition of Dorothy Clifford, 6 years old, who is now a ward of the Probate court, was continued until April 8 by Judge Horner yesterday. The court said that owing to the illness of Mrs. Ellen Fay, the grandmother, of Roundhead, O., the case would be postponed. Mrs. Fay was unable to come to Chicago because of her illness.

U-BOAT ACTIVITY REVIVES DISPUTE WITH GERMANY

U. S. to Demand Explanation if Official Reports Bear Out First Dispatches.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—As a result of the reported torpedoing of the British Dominion steamer Englishman and the channel liner Sussex, with the loss of American lives, the revival of the submarine controversy with Germany in an acute form is now an immediate possibility.

These incidents, following closely upon the sinking of the Tubantia and the attack on the Patria, have served to increase the apprehension of administration officials that the United States faces a new chapter of complications growing out of submarine warfare.

New Note to Austria.

It also became known tonight that the state department intends to dispatch to Vienna early next week renewed demands for satisfaction in the case of the Standard Oil tanker Petrolite, which was shelled by an Austrian submarine and compelled to deliver food supplies to the war craft.

In this note the United States will ask an indemnity for the wounding of an American seaman and injury to the vessel and will demand an apology and the punishment of the submarine commander.

An explanation of the conduct of the submarine commander was asked of Austria several months ago. Austria replied with a request for more information. The United States has obtained affidavits from all members of the Petrolite crew and will furnish the information with the demand for satisfaction.

Ask Report from Consul.

The state department cabled American Consul General Skinner at London to forward at once all available details of the fate of the Englishman and Sussex. Until additional information reaches the department the administration will take no steps in regard to the loss of American lives.

If the vessels were torpedoed, the administration, before taking action, will seek to determine whether they were armed, whether they were warned by the submarines, and whether they offered resistance.

State department officials are inclined to believe that the Englishman, although in the service of carrying horses to the British army, was neither armed nor an army transport. This belief is founded on the fact that the vessel was bound to Portland, Me. The British government has agreed not to permit the arming of merchantmen plying between American and English ports.

No Pledge on Freighters.

The case of the Englishman is likely to bring to the fore the fact that Germany never has given the United States any assurances that freight vessels will not be torpedoed without warning, except in the Mediterranean.

As a result of the Lusitania and Arabic cases Germany promised that submarines would not sink liners without warning and provision for the safety of passengers. After the Persia was sunk in the Mediterranean Germany stated that its submarine commanders had instructions to sink no merchantmen in that sea without warning and providing for the safety of persons aboard.

In this way Germany reserved the right to sink freight vessels without warning in Atlantic waters, and particularly within the waters surrounding the British isles, which Berlin proclaimed a war zone.

TWO REFUGEES FROM WAR TO APPEAR AT DOG SHOW.

Joseph R. Morris of Deerfield Brings German Police Hounds Out of Battle Zone.

We have with us, ladies and gentlemen, two little war orphans. What? Two more?

They are guaranteed perfect behavior, have been well brought up, are beautiful to look upon, and have in their own rights an independent fortune. One is a boy and the other a girl. They will be on exhibit March 30 at the First Regiment armory, and no one is asking a cent of charity for them.

Yes, they are only dogs, but straight from the war zone, brought over last month by their owner, Joseph R. Morris of Deerfield, Ill. War has no terrors for Mr. Morris. What are submarines, or bombs, or arrests compared to bringing two perfect specimens of German police dogs out of the war zone and back to the quiet calm of the Analostan kennels at Deerfield?

Mr. Morris' fad is the raising of these German shepherd dogs. The two new ones are Roland von Wupperstrand, winner of five European championships and never beaten. Anni is a trained police dog from Dusseldorf, where she did police duty for two years. The rest of her aristocratic name is Von Elfenhorst.

CLOSE WET RESTAURANTS AT 1 A. M., JUDGE SAYS.

Jarecki Rules Adversely on Motion of Arsonia Cafe to Vacate Judgment for $20.

The Arsonia café, 1654 West Madison treet, must close at 1 a. m. The fact that the café has a license to operate as a restaurant makes no difference, Judge Jarecki held yesterday when he overruled a motion to vacate judgment against M. J. Fritzel, the owner, for $20 and costs for violating the 1 o'clock closing law. Attorney Melville will appeal the case.

Similar cases are pending against the Elite café, 3030 South State street; The Gardens, Cottage Grove avenue and Thirty-first street, and the Blatz café, 3451 Indiana avenue.

Judge Jarecki held that a cabaret or place where intoxicating liquors are sold is a dramship and cannot lose its identity by operating under a restaurant license after 1 o'clock.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS WILL DRILL AT REUNION.

Annual Encampment of Former Soldiers Will Be Held in Chicago Early in September.

Announcement was made tonight that at the annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans to be held in Chicago Sept. 4, 5, 6, and 7, not less than 25,000 veterans of the Spanish and Philippine wars will be in attendance, together with their wives and thousands of their friends. One of the features of the reunion, it was stated, will be a competitive drill, maneuvers, and a sham battle in Grant park by two brigades of the United States Veterans' legion, the military branch of the organization, which was formed here recently to "prepare against war."

RUSSIANS STORM MORE POSITIONS OF THE GERMANS

Petrograd Reports New Gains in Offensive—Slavs Repelled, Berlin Says.

PETROGRAD, March 25.—The official statement issued by the war office today is as follows:

On the Riga front there have been exchanges of artillery and rifle fire. In the Jacobstadt sector our troops continued to follow up their successes southeast of Augustinhof, and, after a fierce conflict, reached the fortified ground around Lepuyn. They were subjected to furious German counter attacks.

On the left wing in the Jacobstadt region south of Livenhof, there also was fighting. On the front of the Dvinsk region our forces at some points consolidated the ground won and are continuing to advance.

Overcome German Obstacles.

In the region of Widsy our troops attacked an enemy position in the sector northwest of Lake Sekly. Notwithstanding a heavy fire from the enemy, our troops successfully broke through several obstacles placed in their way by the Germans. The Germans employed explosive bullets. Northwest of the position we stopped, by the well timed fire of our batteries, enemy attempts to repair, under cover of a snowstorm, damage done to his works by our bombardments.

Farther to the south, as far as the Rokitno marshes and the region of Rokitno itself, there was an exchange of fire. In certain sectors the artillery duel was heavy.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, March 25.—The German war office today issued the following statement:

West of Jacobstadt the Russians again opened an attack after having brought forward fresh Siberian troops and after strong artillery preparation had been made. The attack broke down with heavy losses to the Russians.

Minor enemy advances southwest of Jacobstadt and southwest of Dvinsk were easily repulsed. All the enemy's efforts, even those repeated during the night against our front north of Vidsey, were completely unsuccessful.

Further to the south, in the region of the Narocz lakes, the enemy yesterday limited his activity to artillery bombardments.

PETROGRAD, March 25.—Russian torpedo boats have sunk sixteen Turkish sailing vessels in the Black sea, it was announced tonight.

TWO SHIPS SUNK, 254 LOSE LIVES, IN BATTLE IN NORTH SEA

2 SHIPS SUNK; 254 DIE; FIGHT IN NORTH SEA

British Alcantara and Raider Greif Send One Another to the Bottom.

LONDON, March 25.—The story of one of the most thrilling naval fights of the war was told in an admiralty statement this afternoon, announcing the sinking of the German commerce raider Greif, and the British auxiliary cruiser Alcantara in the North sea, with a loss of 254 lives. The British loss was seventy-four men.

The engagement occurred Feb. 29. The admiralty withheld the news, though 120 German prisoners were taken, in order that the word might not reach the German admiralty. The story was made public today when a wireless message from Berlin, picked up by English stations, revealed the fact that the sinking of the Greif was known there.

STARTED OUT LIKE MOEWE.

The Greif attempted to run the British blockade the day the German cruiser Moewe returned. Evidently it was expected the patrol squadron would be engaged in hunting for the Moewe, but the cordon of auxiliaries left no loophole.

Seeing itself in a tight hole, the Greif turned eastward, proceeding toward home in a leisurely manner so as not to attract too much attention when it sailed by the Alcantara.

The two ships lay almost side by side while the captain of the British steamer inquired by megaphone for particulars of the strange vessel, which, according to the official report, had the Norwegian colors painted on its sides, but which flew no flag. The inquiries from the Alcantara were answered in perfect Norwegian, but the actions of the raider aroused the suspicions of the British auxiliary.

GREIF, SINKING, FIRES TORPEDO

The Alcantara was lowering a boat to send a searching party aboard when the Germans opened fire. The action is described as one of the hottest of the war, recalling duels between evenly matched frigates in the days before the time of ironclads.

According to the British account, the German raider was put out of action by a few broadsides. It was followed to the bottom a few minutes later by its victorious adversary, which evidently fell victim to a torpedo launched from the Greif's tube a moment before the raider disappeared.

Other British warships soon appeared on the scene and rescued many members of the crews of the two fighters.

GERMAN OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

BERLIN, March 25.—The following statement on the engagement in the North sea on Feb. 29, in which the German auxiliary cruiser Grief was sunk, together with the British Alcantara, was issued today by the admiralty:

The admiralty staff states that, according to news from various places, which has been confirmed, an engagement occurred on Feb. 29 in the northern part of the North sea between the German auxiliary cruiser Greif and three British cruisers and one destroyer. In the course of the battle the Greif sunk by a torpedo shot a great British cruiser of some 15,000 tons and finally blew herself up.

About 150 men of the crew of the Greif, whose names are not yet known, now are prisoners of war to the British.

GREIF 2,028 TON SHIP.

The Greif carried 300 men, though its normal complement was less than 180. The prisoners explained that it was doubly manned in order that they might put prize crews aboard captured steamers.

The Greif was an unprotected German cruiser, displacing 2,028 tons, 317 feet long, and with a 32 foot beam. Its armament, according to naval lists issued before the war, consisted of eight 3.4 inch guns.

The Alcantara was a former Royal Mail liner displacing 15,300 tons. It was built in 1913 and was 570 feet long, with a 67 foot beam. It had four decks and was one of the finest of the Royal Mail Steam Packet company's liners. It was registered at Belfast.

BRITISH SURPRISE ATTACK WINS IN MESOPOTAMIA.

Turkish Post on West Bank of Tigris River Captured, Official Report Chronicles.

LONDON, March 25.—A surprise attack by British forces in Mesopotamia on March 15 resulted in the capture of a small Turkish post on the west bank of the Tigris, it was officially announced this afternoon. Bombardment of Kut-el-Amara by Turkish air craft and artillery also is reported in the official statement, which is as follows:

Our forces on the right bank of the Tigris seized a small Turkish post at Felahiyeh by a surprise attack on the night of March 15-16. Our casualties were four.

On March 23 Gen. Townshend reported his camp at Kut-el-Amara bombarded by enemy air craft and guns at intervals on March 21-23. His casualties were slight.

'DAY OF THE BAG' IN WASHINGTON

Micareme to See Climax of Women's Red Cross Fund Raising Campaign.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Micareme is going down in Washington history as the "Day of the Bags." Miss Mabel P. Boardman, Mesdames Robert W. Patterson, Richard Townsend, Marshall Field, E. H. G. Slater, F. A. Keep, and Joseph Leiter constitute the general committee which for three months has been working to bring together the gigantic "bag sale" for the benefit of the American Red cross, which will be held on March 29.

The patroness is Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Patronesses for special contingents of women include Mrs. Thomas Riley Marshall and Mrs. Champ Clark, who have rallied the congressional women of the whole country to the cause of getting together bags for dresses, veils, shoes, fans, slippers, opera glasses, powder puffs, bathing suits, laundry, clothespins, balls of all sorts, strings, sachets, handbags, vanity bags, and, to cap the climax, "sand bags."

Gather Sewing Bags.

Under the personal direction of Mrs. Edward Douglass White, the women of the Supreme court circles have assembled thousands of sewing bags, for guest rooms, dressing rooms, for bachelors, for maids, for knitting, mending, and for fancy work.

Mrs. Lansing heads the cabinet list who have gathered a thousand or more different sorts of bags for travelers, the changes being rung on sponge bags, soap bags, week end bags, etc., etc.

Mrs. Hugh L. Scott, Mrs. Josephus Daniels, and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in charge of the women of both branches of the United States military service, have assembled comfort bags for soldiers and sailors of the United States and foreign service.

There is an assortment of several thousand bags, and one may have a bag not only for the baby but for the bottle—any sort of bottle—and the prices range from 25 cents to $25.

California Bag Tiptop.

The most interesting bag of the entire assortment came from San Francisco; it is called the California bag. Of pale lemon colored satin brocade, it has for decoration huge bunches of velvet oranges, hand made, in natural colors. There is a dash of green and gold metallic braid to touch it off, and the interior is gorgeous with its lining of orange colored satin.

There are bags to hold coin and bags to drag it away from reluctant "bag men and bag women." The phraseologists are working overtime trying to incorporate the word effectively in the advertisement features.

"It's a mere bagatelle," remarked a contributor of one of the most extravagant bags in the collection.

"Just So We Bag the Coin."

"No matter about the publication so we will bag the coin," returned a debutante.

The whole affair will wind up in a micareme ball which will open with a "bag dance." The participants are rehearsing secretly and there is to be a grand guess as to who is inside the eight or ten "white bags." The dancers shuffle through the first measures of a dance with only the feet showing. When the bags are dropped they will reveal gayly costumed dancers.

The girls in the oriental dance, also a feature, will wear "baggy trousers" in their "Bagdad dance" and their Scotch dance pipers will come over from New York to play the bagpipe accompaniment.

CHICAGO BOYS AT HARVARD OFFER SERVICES AS AIRMEN.

Six Youths from This City Among Those Who Will Study Aviation for War.

Cambridge, Mass., March 25.—[Special.]—Enrolled in the Harvard aero corps of eighty men, organized today, were six Chicago students who are going to become military aviators in the United States army flying corps in time of war.

The Chicago men are: Owen B. Jones, '16; John S. Swinson, '17; Frederick T. Fisher and Denison B. Hull of the freshman class; Henry D. Jordan, '18, and Nahum Morrill, a second year student in the law school.

The men will begin their study of aviation in New York this summer under the tutelage of Frazier Curtis, who was recently invalided from the French air service.

U. S. WAR CRAFT DISABLED.

Two Destroyers Collide at Dock in Key West, Fla.—One Is Badly Damaged.

Key West, Fla., March 25.—The destroyer Monaghan was rammed and badly damaged by the destroyer Roe here today. The Monaghan was tied up at the government wharf with its stern projecting out of the dock when the Roe attempted to make a landing. The Monaghan was damaged about forty feet from the stern and below the water line. Through prompt action at the pumps the vessel was kept afloat. No one was hurt. The bow of the Roe was stove in for a distance of about six feet.

PLEA FOR PEACE PUTS REICHSTAG IN AN UPROAR

Socialist Says Germany Can't Win War—Tumult Causes Abrupt Adjournment.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

[Copyright: 1916: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, March 25.—"There will be neither victors nor vanquished in this war. We cannot bring our enemies to their knees any more than they can Germany. Europe is steering in the direction of utter impoverishment and bankruptcy. What sense is there in a continuation of the war?"

With these words Herr Haase, successor to Herr Bebel as chairman of the German Social Democratic party, but himself a member of a small minority in the reichstag, created one of the wildest storms in that body today just before adjournment that the German national parliament ever has seen.

Herr Haase stole a march on his own party and not only took the house completely by surprise, but for the time it looked as if it would come to fisticuffs between a few Haase followers and a majority of the wing of Socialists, who became furious at the trick which they shouted Haase had played on them.

Emergency Budget Comes Up.

An emergency budget, which had nothing to do with the main budget, had just been read. Scheidemann, leader of the majority wing of the Socialists, announced that with reservation this could not be construed to have any bearing on the Socialists' attitude toward the main budget. He declared that his party approved this special budget.

Minister Helfferich electrified the house with an announcement that the fourth German war loan had brought 10,600,000,000 marks, making a total of 30,500,000,000 marks for four war loans. This was received with cheers when Herr Haase took the floor.

"Because of the favorable military situation of the war it is possible for the government to offer a hand in peace, thereby serving the will of the peoples of all countries, which are manifesting that desire more and more," Herr Haase declared. "There will not be victor nor vanquished, but only impoverished nations and peoples."

House Stirred to Uproar.

Bedlam broke loose as Herr Haase started to paint the military and economic situation in the blackest colors. Heine and Keil of his own party shouted that he was talking without their approval, and that the Socialist members of the reichstag therefore had no right whatever to speak for them. Herr David, one of the principal Socialist leaders, shouted:

"Your words tend toward a prolongation of the war and serve the purposes of the enemy."

Sacse, another Socialist leader, declared: "You coward, you did not have the courage to give your views in party conference. It is a contemptible trick."

Members of his own party pressed forward to the speaker, and with the shouting, wild gesticulations, and infuriated faces, it seemed as if they were about to rush Haase off his feet. Hisses came from the rest of the house. Through it all the president's bell kept sounding for order.

Declares War Was Mistake.

Haase finally succeeded in making himself heard again, but he did not get far.

"You don't want to hear the truth," he cried. "That long ago it was demonstrated the war was a great miscalculation is not disputed by the capitalists of any of the countries. One could assume that only complete fools and conscienceless persons would strive for world dominion."

President Kempf declared Haase out of order and asked the house to decide whether he should be given permission to continue. The house overwhelmingly voted that the privilege of the floor be withdrawn. Herr Helfferich, the only minister present, took the floor.

"I can only express my deepest regret and strong resentment before the house and the German people," he said, "that a man who is representative of the German people can utter words which in this grave hour can have no other effect than to strengthen the heart and backbone of our enemies.

Says Germany Is Confident.

"If there is any one today, after all of the heavy burdens, but also after all of the big successes and victories we have acheived in the field, who contends that the German people lack confidence that we will be victorious, there is nothing strong enough in which such person can be characterized. If you want to know how the German people think about it ask those who have just subscribed to the 10,600,000,000 mark war loan, who include many workmen and small savers. The German people show thereby that the views and sentiments of Herr Haase are not their views or sentiments."

Herr Scheidemann, one of the principal leaders of the majority Socialists, said:

"I want to declare, and I presume to speak for the majority, that we will not forsake or abandon the fatherland in its hour of need."

This declaration was received with great applause, except in the corner of the minority Socialists.

House Forced to Adjourn.

Herr Haase again got to his feet and tried to defend himself against Herr Helfferich's utterance.

"I want to say that those are the best patriots who, after twenty months' of carnage, can stand for the reconciliation of the people and for the ending of this war," he said. The tumult again broke loose. Numerous Socialists, including David, Scheidemann, Heine, Sachse, and others, surrounded Haase. In the midst of this scene, being unable to restore order, President Kaempf announced an hour's recess. During the recess the row among the Socialists continued, loud, bitter, intense.

Herr Haase, who is one of the oldest members of the party and belongs to a small radical wing, was severely assailed for not keeping the party conference agreement and for precipitating a row in the party, the possible consequences of which may be far reaching for the solidarity of the Socialists.

VERDUN BURNING UNDER STORM OF GERMAN SHELLS

Berlin Reports That French Troops Are Being Driven Out of Their Defenses.

BERLIN, March 25.—The city of Verdun has been set afire during artillery exchanges, the war office reported this afternoon. It quotes military authorities as saying numerous fires have been observed.

Return of crisp, spring weather to the Verdun front signals the renewal of heavy German infantry attacks, which are slowly squeezing the French out of their strongly fortified positions.

The Germans are raking the French front northwest of Verdun, in the Malancourt region, with a destructive fire. Little doubt is felt here that the French, under combined infantry and artillery assaults, will be forced to evacuate the whole Bethincourt-Malancourt salient and fall back toward Fort de Marre.

The text of the official statement follows:

There have been no actual changes in the situation since yesterday. In the Meuse district artillery duels were especially lively and in the course of these engagements Verdun was set on fire.

Heavy German Losses.

PARIS, March 23.—Heavy losses were inflicted on German defenders of a trench near Courte Chausse by a concerted French attack last night.

The official communication issued by the war office tonight follows:

In Belgium we bombarded the enemy trenches to the east of Boesinghe and in the neighborhood of Het-Sas.

In the Argonne the artillery actions have been violent in the sectors of Four de Paris, Courtes Chausses, and Haute Chevauchee.

Intense artillery activity has been displayed to the west of the Meuse against our second lines, to the east, in the region of Cote du Poivre and Douaumont, and in the Woevre in the sectors of the Meuse hills. There was no infantry action during the course of the day.

British Official Report.

LONDON, March 25.—The following official statement was issued tonight:

Last night the enemy sprang a mine near the Hohenzollern redoubt and entered one trench, but was driven out again by our bombers. Today we bombed the enemy's trenches near Bois Blancs and damaged 100 yards of the parapet. The reply was feeble.

The enemy artillery was active today near Berthouval, Neuve Chapelle, Voormezelle, Ypres, and Wieltje. Our artillery retaliated.

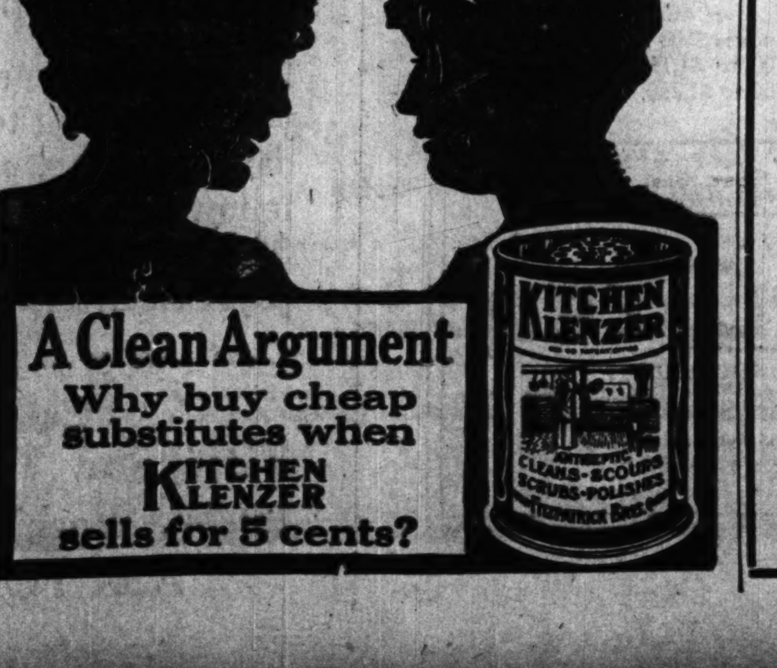
ITALY REPORTS REPULSE OF ALL AUSTRIAN ATTACKS.

Official Statement Issued in Rome Tells of Fighting at Several Points.

ROME, via London, March 25.—The official communication issued from general headquarters today reads as follows:

In the Rovereto zone on Thursday there was an artillery duel, followed by small attacks against our positions at Mori-Vecchio on the Rio Cameras, Adige valley, and at Potrich in Terragnolo valley. All were repulsed.

Yesterday there were merely artillery actions on the Isonzo, which were of severe character only around Tolmino and on the heights northwest of Goritzi.



A Clean Argument
Why buy cheap substitutes when KITCHEN KLENZER
sells for 5 cents?

When a reliable piano has been successfully manufactured and sold for nearly three-quarters of a century it is generally supposed to be excessively high in price.

Contrary to the opinion shared by some, the

is not a high priced instrument, especially so when quality, tone, action, durability, reputation, etc., are taken into consideration.

For example—The illustration above shows one of our most popular styles—M—an artistic effect in beautifully figured mahogany. Its price is

In Circassian Walnut, $375.

Compare the Vose with instruments of the better grade. You will then realize the sterling value offered in this time tested, time honored instrument.

AMBITIOUS CHICAGO WOMEN never let a morning pass without a careful reading of THE TRIBUNE. They know they can't afford to.

VILLA DRIVEN INTO CANYON; NEAR CAPTURE

American Troops and Carranza Men Nearly Surround the Bandit's Forces.

places, and there are many places at which Villa might climb out of the cañon and take his chances in the hills. But I do not believe he will be able to do this. The pursuit is too close and too hot.

"Troops to the north and south of him and behind him are herding his band like so many beeves being driven to slaughter toward the open country to the east. I do not believe, now that he has been forced into the Santa Clara cañon, that he can escape from this long and narrow trench that bisects a part of Chihuahua."

DIVIDED IN RUNNING FIGHT.

"And the second purple pin to the northward?" Gen Gavira was asked "means what?"

"That is a band of fifty of Villa's followers which were separated from him in the running fight that ensued when Col. Apolonio Cano first struck Villa near Namiquipa. As far as I know it is without a recognized leader. There seems no doubt this bunch will be run down and captured or annihilated in short order."

This is the first time that any news has come over the border that Villa's band has been divided. This is recognized as one of the most serious handicaps that could have befallen the bandit in his efforts to wriggle clear of the military net that is being gradually drawn around him.

Disposal of Pursuers.

The story of the vari-colored pins on Gen. Gavira's map was eloquent of the closeness of pursuit by American and Carranza troops. According to the pins the troops engaged in the international man hunt are disposed in the following order:

Gen Gavira's troops are at Las Cruces, Santa Clara, Babicora, Sant Ana, Temosachic, and Tpehuanes.

The combined commands of Gen. Bertani and Gen. Gutierrez are at Madera, Casas Grandes, and Pearson.

The American forces are at Cumbre, Colonia Dublan, Las Cruces, Namiquipa, and ten miles north of Las Cruces.

A glance at any map of northern Mexico will show at a glance the desperate straits Villa is in.

Dodd Is Moving Eastward.

"Col. Dodd is at Mamiquipa," said Gen. Gavira, "with a strong American column. That is, he was there late yesterday. He doubtless is quite a distance to the eastward now. The entire campaign is shifting eastward rapidly.

"I have a force at Santa Clara under Gen. Benjamin Garza. It is directly in the path of Villa's flight. I expect Gen. Garza t strike Villa at any moment. It is possible he has already engaged him.

"I have had no dispatches from the front since yesterday. The telegraph wires along the Mexican Northwestern railroad are down south of Pearson and west of Chihuahua. I think it is possible they were cut by the Carranza and American troops to prevent any news leaking out that might hurt the chances of capturing Villa.

Gen. Gavira was asked if Gen. Pershing was with the American troops at Namiquipa.

"No," he replied. "I do not understand that Gen. Pershing has left his field base at Colonia Dublan. Col. Dodd is in command of the American flying column which is threatening Villa's rear and which may have forced the bandit into battle before now."

Confident Capture Is Near.

"Do you expect Villa's capture?"

"I was never more sure of it," was Gen. Gavira's answer.

Gen. Gavira said he had heard nothing new regarding the negotiations between the United States and the de facto government of Mexico regarding the use by the American military authorities of the Mexican Northwestern railroad for the shipment of supplies from El Paso.

"That matter has not been settled as yet," he said. "I have received no word from my government regarding it. Gen. Pershing was given permission to use the railroad south from Casas Grandes for the movement of troops. This movement occurred last Sunday. And the troops were detrained near Madera and marched across country to join Col. Dodd at Namiquipa."

When Gen. Gavira was asked if he knew how many Americans were in the field in the Santa Clara cañon country he declared he did not. It is estimated in El Paso that 10,000 American troops are now in Mexico, but how many are actively in pursuit of Villa under Col. Dodd is not known.

No Danger of Quarrel.

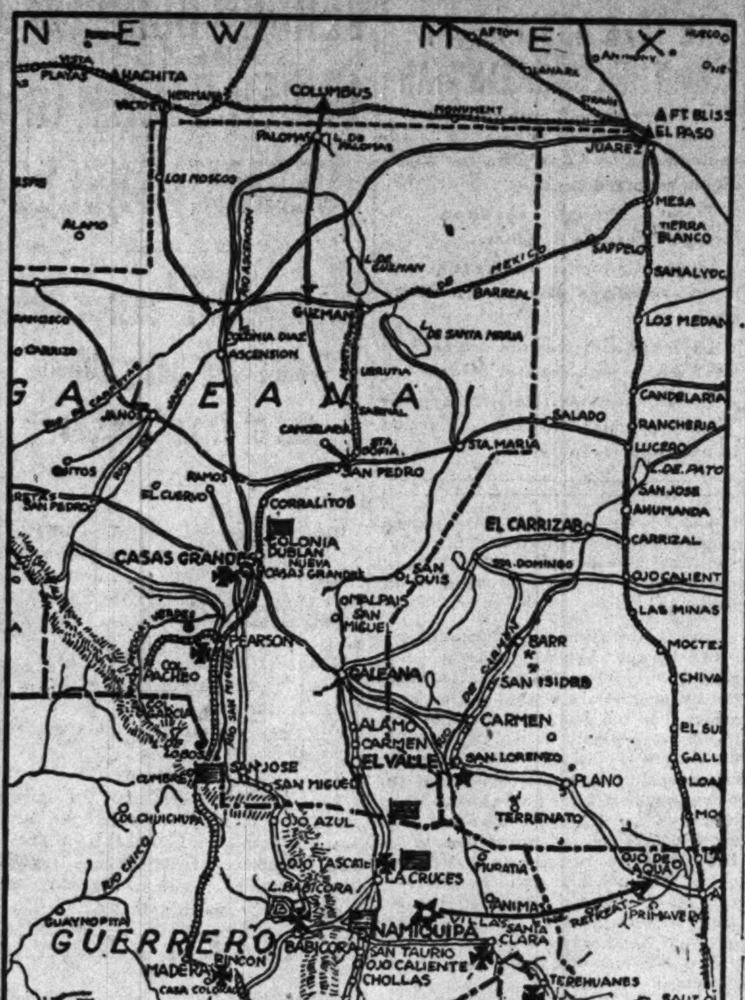
"How do you regard the international situation?" Gen. Gavira was asked.

"I see no reason for excitement or alarm," he responded. "The American and Mexican governments are acting together in good faith and perfect harmony.

"When the invasion of Mexican soil by American troops was first broached, the proposition seemed delicate, if not unwise. However, since the Americans have come across the border and we have become better acquainted, I think the whole thing will work out smoothly to the end.

"This constant talk of war between the two countries is the agitation of a certain class of Americans who want intervention by the United States in Mexico to further their own selfish interests. I do not think the level headed people on either side of the border want war, and I do not think this present crisis in international affairs will result in war."

The Chase After Villa in Chihuahua



The above map was drawn from the detail information given to Walter Noble Burns, "The Tribune" correspondent, by Gen. Gabriel Gavira, the Carrancista leader, at Juarez, yesterday. It shows the approximate location of Villa and his only way to escape left him to the east through Santa Clara canyon. The location of the United States troops and the Carrancista garrison, hemming in Villa from the north, south, and west, also are shown. The latest reports give the American column near Namiquipa as in touch with Villa's rear guards.

Dyer of Missouri Offers Resolution Asking Big Force for Use in Mexico.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—A call for 100,000 volunteers to be used along the Mexican border is proposed in a resolution introduced today by Representative Dyer of Missouri. He asks that militia men be preferred in calling men to service.

I. N. G. SIGNAL CORPS READY.

It is announced that field company A of the signal corps of the Illinois national guard, with a full complement of men, is ready to take the field. An inspection of the company will be held next Tuesday by Lieut. Burt W. Phillips, of the United States army.

TRAVELERS SAY VILLA ESCAPED TO MOUNTAINS

Claim That He Outwitted Pursuit and Now Is Hiding in Wild Heights.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

El Paso, Tex., March 25.—Villa has outwitted his pursuers by splitting his forces, leaving one body to hold in check the Carranzistas in the neighborhood of Namiquipa, while he himself, at the head of a picked force, is trying to break through the lines of his enemies south of Madera, according to information brought here today by Americans arriving from Pearson and Casas Grandes.

This information redoubled the interest with which word is awaited from Gen. Pershing that the American troops have clashed with the Villistas. According to reports from usually reliable sources, coupled with what is officially known as to the progress of the punitive columns, American cavalry reached Madera yesterday, and should be close on the heels of the fugitive bandit today.

Only Trail Perilous One.

From Madera south as far as Tutuaca, a distance of about thirty miles, a mountain trail winds through the Sierra Madres. At Tutuaca it bends sharply to the southeast until it is lost in the wild and barren country south of Minaca.

This trail was known for years as "Pancho's road." It was popularly believed to have been broken by the bandit, and its intricacies are known to few except him. No wagons can possibly pierce the desolate mountain region through which the road runs.

Scout Sees Great Task.

Few Americans are known to have penetrated the district. Ben Harris, a veteran scout who is now living here, declared today that if Villa succeeded in reaching Tutuaca the task of finding him would be a hopeless one.

"Only Mexican ponies can take that road," he said, "and even they must be lightly loaded. The trail skirts the edges of cañons 3,000 to 4,000 feet deep and winds over bleak mountain tops, where the cold and rare air makes living almost unbearable. I could defy 1,000 soldiers to catch me in that country, and Villa knows every nook and cranny in it."

MAYOR OF DOUGLAS DENIES MEXICAN MENACE TO CITY.

Says Statement Sent to Senator Ashurst Regarding Massing of Mexicans Is False.

Douglas, Ariz., March 25.—C. O. Ellis, mayor of Douglas, issued a signed statement today branding as an "unqualified falsehood" a report sent from here yesterday to Senator Ashurst to the effect that large numbers of Mexican troops were concentrating within a few blocks of the business section of the city.

TROOPERS OF U. S. SHIVER IN COLD, BLINDED BY SAND

BY FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]

IN Camp Near Colonia Dublan, March 24, via courier to Columbus, March 25.—[Special.]—A terrific sand and dust storm, which blinded men and animals, is abating after raging for twenty-four hours. The wind, which blew a gale out of the southwest, started Wednesday night and brought with it the whole category of weather, even a flutter of snow this morning.

The men suffered during the night from the temperature, which dropped to a few degrees above the freezing point. No fires were permitted on account of the dry condition of the bunch grass and the danger of a prairie fire, which could have wiped out the camp.

An expedition left this morning with a high army officer in command for the purpose of establishing communications with one column in the southeast, which has not been heard from for two days.

United States troops have now pushed 250 miles south of the border in the hunt for Villa. As the cordon about the bandit leader and his men tightens, prospects for a clash between him and our troops increases.

It is known here that Gens. Bracamontes and Servantes, who were dispatched on horse raids by Villa, have rejoined their chief, presumably with a supply of fresh horses.

It is believed that Villa is preparing to make an attempt to break the steel circle and escape, or slip through the hands of his pursuers by using some of his secret mountain passes.

The latest report reaching here concerning him was that he had rushed a small Carranza garrison to the south and had been defeated.

DENIES A FIGHT AT EL OSO.

Message to Gavira Says Villa Men Escaped, but Are Being Closely Pursued.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

El Paso, Tex., March 25.—The Villistas who were reported two days ago to be engaged in battle with Col. Cano at El Oso, five miles south of Mamiquipa, escaped without real fighting, according to a message to Gen. Gavira, made public here tonight by Consul Garcia. The message said the Villistas were now at San Geronimo, a ranch some miles south of El Oso, and that five columns of American troops were coöperating with the troops of Carranza.

Enlist at Many Stations.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—Forty-four enlistment stations out of fifty-four reporting to Adjt. Gen. McCain today announced the acceptance of 710 candidates out of 2,876 applicants. Ten of the stations in the west have not canta. Ten of the stations in the fest have not reported. The report covers the last five days.

TRIBUTE TO VASSAR GIRLS PAID BY DR. MAC CRACKEN.

College President Praises Work of Alumnae in Raising Funds for Alma Mater.

High tribute to the Vassar college graduates in Chicago and other cities, in their work to raise $1,000,000 for the college, was paid by Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, recently elected president of the college, in an address at a luncheon of the Vassar Alumni association of Chicago in the Congress hotel yesterday.

"The women graduates of Vassar," he said, "are doing a noble work in raising $1,000,000 for their alma mater, all of which, I believe, has been subscribed excepting about $200,000. It has been through local efforts of such associations as this of Chicago that the money has been raised, and as the money is given the message of the desirability of a college education for women is thus emphasized."

He was introduced by Mrs. Kempster Miller, president of the association. The luncheon was in charge of Mrs. Edwin T. Johnson. Among those assisting in the entertainment were Mrs. William H. Bush, Mrs. Mason Bross, Mrs. W. H. Kehler, and Mrs. Clark Kinsey.

DOUBT REPORT OF MURDERS.

El Paso Has Heard Nothing of Mexicans Crossing Border Close to Columbus.

El Paso, Tex., March 25.—Reports of Villistas again crossing the border into New Mexico and killing two American women and one man near Columbus were unconfirmed and uncredited here. The story was brought to Douglas by an automobile party who received the report from an American soldier.

WILSON CHARGES PROPAGANDA FOR STRIFE IN MEXICO

President Asserts Effort Is Being Made to Force Intervention by U. S.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—President Wilson tonight charged American owners of Mexican properties with direct concern in spreading false stories of Mexican internal conditions in order to bring about intervention.

It is the climax of his charges that certain persons, whom he did not describe definitely, were seeking to embroil the United States in a prolonged armed intervention.

The charge is contained in a statement issued tonight from the White House calling on the newspapers of the country to scrutinize carefully the rumors of difficulties and anti-American feeling. The statement had been preceded by a declaration from the war office that there has been no massing of Carranza troops along the border and a related declaration from the state department that quiet prevails in Mexico so far as hostility toward Americans is concerned.

The Wilson note was telegraphed to all American consuls in Mexico and to the Carranza government to reassure them.

Text of Wilson Note.

"As has already been announced," the president's statement says, "the expedition into Mexico was ordered under an agreement with the de facto government of Mexico for the single purpose of taking the bandit, Villa, whose forces had invaded the territory of the United States, and is in no sense intended as invasion of that republic, or as infringement of its sovereignty.

"I have therefore asked the several news services to be good enough to assist the administration in keeping this view of the expedition constantly before both the people of this country and the distressed and sensitive people of Mexico, who are very susceptible, indeed, to impressions received from the American press not only, but also very ready to believe that these impressions proceed from the views and object of our government itself. Such conclusions, it must be said, are not unnatural, because the main if not the only source of information for the people on both sides of the border is the public press of the United States.

Urges Care Upon Press.

"In order to avoid the creation of erroneous and dangerous impressions in this way, I have called upon the several news agencies to use the utmost care not to give news stories regarding this expedition the color of war, to withhold stories of troop movements and military preparations which might be given that interpretation, and to refrain from publishing unverified rumors of unrest in Mexico.

"I feel that it is most desirable to impress upon both our own people and the people of Mexico the fact that the expedition is simply a necessary punitive measure, aimed solely at the elimination of the marauders who raided Columbus and who infest an unprotected district near the border, which they use as a base in making attacks upon the lives and property of our citizens within our own territory.

Forces to Co-operate.

"It is the purpose of our commanders to coöperate in every possible way with the forces of Gen. Carranza in removing this cause of irritation to both governments and retire from Mexican territory as soon as that object is accomplished.

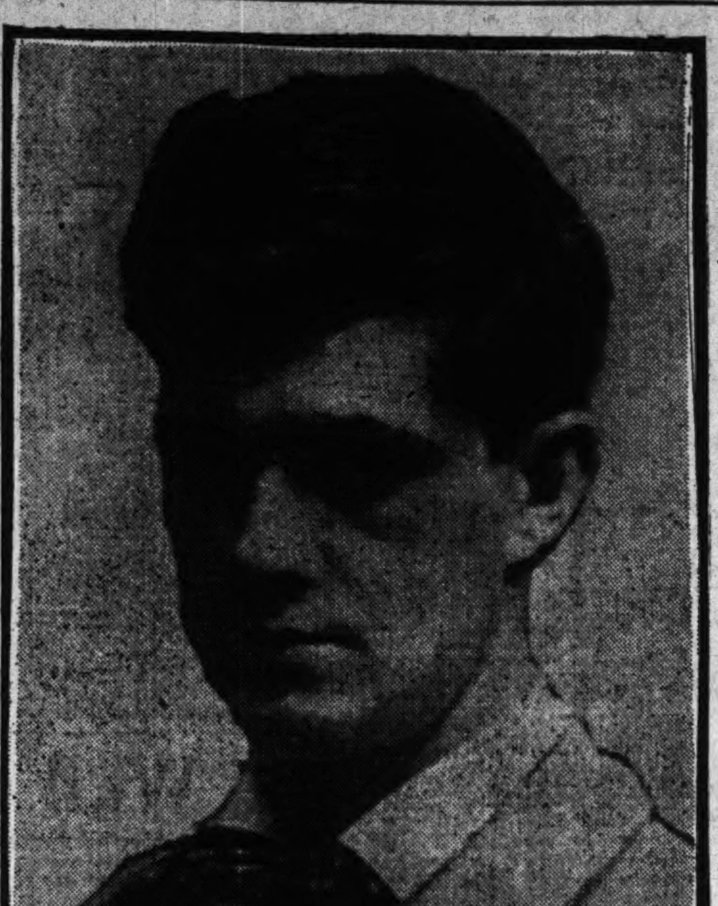
"It is my duty to warn the people of the United States that there are persons all along the border who are actively engaged in originating and giving as wide currency as they can to rumors of the most sensational and disturbing sorts which are wholly unjustified by the facts. The object of this traffic in falsehoods is obvious.

"Seek to Create Friction."

"It is to create intolerable friction between the government of the United States and the de facto government of Mexico for the purpose of bringing about intervention in the interests of certain American owners of Mexican property. This object cannot be obtained so long as sane and honorable men are in control of this government, but very serious conditions may be created, unnecessary bloodshed may result, and the relations between the two republics may be very much embarrassed.

"The people of the United States should know the sinister and unscrupulous influences that are afoot and should be on their guard against crediting any story coming from the border; and those who disseminate the news should make it a matter of patriotism and of conscience to test the source and authenticity of every report they receive from that quarter."

SCULPTOR CALLED BY DEATH



Charles J. Mulligan, Chicago Artist Renowned Throughout the Country, as He Appeared in His Studio.

JUDGE RAKES SALOON MAN.

"You Are Unfit to Keep a Barroom —You Have a Brutal Temper."

"You are unfit to keep a saloon. You have a brutal, ungovernable temper."

Judge Heap yesterday reprimanded John McDonough, owner of a saloon at 1030 North Franklin street, and fined him $200 and costs and sentenced him to sixty days in the county jail on two charges of assault.

John B. Healey of 675 North Clark street and Thomas McFadden of 1202 North La Salle street, testified McDonough beat them.

Death Due to Exposure.

A man about 35 years old, found dead in a shanty about a mile from Worth, Ill., Thursday afternoon, died of exposure, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury.

C. J. MULLIGAN, SCULPTOR, DIES

Chicagoan, Noted in World of Art, Succumbs After Operation.

Charles J. Mulligan, one of the noted scultors of America, died last night at St. Luke's hospital. He had been ill a month. Less than a week ago he was taken from his home at 1521 East Sixty-first street to the hospital for an operation. His three sons and his wife were at his bedside when death came.

Mr. Mulligan was a native of Armagh, Ireland, and came to Chicago in 1885. Soon after coming to Chicago he began the study of art with Lorado Taft.

He steadily grew into prominence as a sculptor and architect, and twice served as a delegate abroad for the American Institute of Architects and Sculptors. Numerous works of Mr. Mulligan have been placed in the parks of Chicago and other cities of Illinois and Indiana.

Among the prize winning figures designed in recent years by Mr. Mulligan are "The Three Sisters," at the entrance of the Supreme court building at Springfield; "The Rail Splitter," "The Fourth of July" figure, and the statue of "Col. Finnerty," all of which were purchased by the west park board.

The most noted work of Mr. Mulligan was the group figure called the "Spirit of the Mines." During the last ten years he was prominently identified with the movement for a "Chicago Beautiful."

G. O. P. SENATORS MEET; TALK OF MEXICO POLICY

Charge "Double Cross" by Administration in Stone's Attack on Sherman.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—A meeting of Republican senators was held this morning to consider the Mexican question and the G. O. P. policy with reference to it. It was clear they are opposed to the administration methods of dealing with it.

The conference was called by Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire at the request of several Republicans who resented the manner in which the administration yesterday attempted to discredit Senator Sherman of Illinois. The attack on Senator Sherman by Senator Stone of Missouri, chairman of the foreign relations committee, was made after the Illinoisan and Senators Weeks of Massachusetts and Kenyon of Iowa had promised the president not to speak on Mexico, because he felt that talking at this time might precipitate trouble with Carranza.

Feel They Are Double Crossed.

Republican senators hold the opinion today that the administration deliberately "double crossed" Senators Sherman, Kenyon, and Weeks. At the conference this morning it was practically decided to take action on Monday which will let the country know that, while they are willing to do everything in their power to insure the success of the expedition into Mexico, the Republican senators believe the president is not handling it in such a way as to attain success.

Several resolutions were introduced and discussed at the conference. The principal one was offered by Senator McCumber of North Dakota. This stated that the Republican senators stand ready to vote money, troops, or munitions for the expedition. One or two senators counseled delay of a few days in order to see whether Pershing has any chance to get Villa immediately.

Want Force Increased.

Others insisted, however, that delay is dangerous and that the president should act immediately to increase the armed forces there for the purpose of preventing further raids into American territory and hastening the capture of Villa.

Every Republican senator who spoke at the conference insisted that partisanship should not be indulged in at this time, but they contended that Senator Stone had made the matter a partisan one yesterday.

According to statements made by the various senators, when Senator Sherman of Illinois introduced his resolution offering 50,000 additional troops, the senate administration leaders sought him out and begged him not to speak on it.

All Mexico Against U. S.

President Wilson's spokesmen in the senate, in urging the Republicans to keep quiet, said that the administration had information that practically all Mexico is ready to turn against the United States unless Carranza is able to carry out his part of the agreement to coöperate with this country. Doubt that Carranza has sufficient power to do this was expressed. An immediate anti-American outbreak was predicted if the senators insisted on speaking on the Mexican situation in the senate.

In view of these representations the Republicans said they would hold off long enough to give the president a fair show. Then, to their surprise, Senator Stone yesterday made a bitter attack on them, accused them of attempting to drag the country into war, and while he was doing this the White House and the state department were giving out statements to the effect that there was evidently a conspiracy to force the country into war.

CARRANZA DELAY CAUSE OF WORRY

American Army Officers Eager to Begin Use of Railway.

MAY NEED NEW ROUTE.

San Antonio, Tex., March 25.—Carranza's delay in permitting the movement into Mexico over the Northwestern railway of supplies for the American troops has created an impatience at army headquarters that today was hardly disguised. The quartermaster's department has expressed the assumption that finally Carranza will authorize the use of the railroad and has sent to El Paso a quantity of stores for immediate shipment. Officers here did not credit the unofficial report that Gen. Alvaro Obregon, Carranza's secretary of war, had said that no permission for use of the line would be given.

Further reference to difficulties he is having in getting his supplies was contained in messages from Gen. Pershing to Gen. Funston today. The messages were brought by aeroplane to Columbus for transmission by wire to headquarters here. Gen. Pershing said that the roads were so heavy along his line of communication that only a small percentage of the volume of supplies the auto trucks should carry was being moved.

Would Not Stop Campaign.

Failure to send supplies through Juarez over the railroad into the country where the troops are operating would not stop the campaign, but it was admitted that it would materially retard Gen. Pershing's activities.

Already there has been so much change in the positions of the mobile forces dispatched from Casas Grandes that the logical railroad to use for getting supplies to a part of them would be the National Central, which goes straight from Juarez to Chihuahua instead of making the wide swing to the west that the Northwestern does.

The Northwestern is the logical line for supplying troops near Casas Grandes, but since many of them are more than 100 miles farther south Gen. Funston believes that time could be saved by routing the stores over the National, especially since many repairs would have to be made on the Northwestern south of Casas Grandes.

Depends on First Answer.

Whether Gen. Funston requests the government to get permission to use the National, however, will depend upon the answer to the request already made, he said. He admitted the desirability of using the direct route, but recognized also the inadvisability of compounding his request.

The utilization of the flying corps for transmission of reports from the field was regarded at headquarters with keen satisfaction. The wireless has not been a success, and in the absence of telegraph wires Gen. Pershing has not been able to make detailed reports, and for days at a time no report of any character.

SOLDIER AIRMAN IN GRAVE DANGER AFTER ACCIDENT

Pure Bluff All That Saves Him from Mexican Peons After Forced Landing.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

El Paso, Tex., March 25.—[Special.]—Lieut. Thomas L. Bowen of the United States army aviation corps, who was injured in a fall in an aeroplane near Casas Grandes while scouting before Gen. Pershing's columns, arrived here today with a thrilling story of his experience.

On the same train, which came through Columbus, was Will Crosby, who acted as scout for the First squadron of the Thirteenth cavalry on the expedition after Villa. Crosby said the army was suffering from lack of food and was experiencing great difficulty in getting in supplies.

"My flight had taken me far to the south," Lieut. Bowen said. "I was on my way back to camp at an elevation of several thousand feet when my engine went dead. I volplaned to the ground and made a safe landing on a sage brush desert.

Peons Swarm About Him.

"As soon as I had reached the earth the peons came swarming and looked at me in alarm, at first. When they saw that I was only a man and an American they gathered around me menacingly. Some shook their fists at me, some drew revolvers, some cursed me. Several fired rifles in the air.

"I knew my life would not be worth a penny if I showed fear. I put on a bold front and went on tinkering with my motor, as if I did not know any one was near me.

"A great shout went up as I arose. I looked down at the Mexicans. They seemed swept with fury. A dozen of them shot at me. I could hear the bullets sing.

His Second Accident.

"I was far from camp when I had my second accident on this unlucky flight. I struck a 'hole in the air' and my machine almost turned turtle and then it fell. I must have been a few seconds in reaching the earth, but it seemed a long time. I was busy all the while I worked to adjust the wings. I tried to right my machine. I saw the earth coming nearer. The phenomenon had a sort of detached interest for me. Then it seemed a soft cushion struck me in the face. The sensation was rather pleasant. I remembered nothing more till I awakened in a field hospital."

Peril on Swift Journey.

Columbus, N. M., March 25.—Narrowly escaping death on a 165 mile flight against dangerous, puffy winds, Lieut. Dargue of the aeroplane squadron arrived here today with dispatches from the correspondents at the front and messages from Gen. Pershing.

Keeping Fresh

is one of the special points about Sulzer's Honey-Rice Bread. It is made of pure, wholesome ingredients; it is properly baked and carefully wrapped to preserve its goodness. That's why it stays fresh so long. Another reason is that it is really "fresh" when you get it. It has only been out of the oven long enough to cool before it is wrapped and rushed to your grocer. So you can always get good white bread and get it absolutely fresh, if you'll insist on

CHICAGO'S BEST BABIES AWARDED HONOR RIBBONS

Fifty-five of Them, All Super-normal, Decorated as Mothers Gloat.

Fifty-five gurgling, crying and laughing babies were held in the arms of as many proud mothers in the Boston store yesterday, while fifty-five blue ribbons were pinned on their little white frocks.

They represented the cream of Chicago's baby crop, the fifty-five super-normal prize winners of the recent Better Babies contest, in which more than 4,000 babies took part.

The only thing in which the babies resembled each other was their general plumpness and dimpled, chubby faces. It was hot and the program was forty-five minutes late in starting. Some of the babies were unhappy and cried. Others devoted all their attention to a bottle or a cracker munched with toothless persistence.

Papas There Likewise.

And there were almost as many papas as mammas, for it was Saturday afternoon. Robert Marvin Pilot and Harriette Amos, both 3½ years old, recited and sang while Dr. A. Lindsay Wynekoop, who had charge of the contest, Miss Harriet Vittum, Miss Mary Campbell and Dr. Sadie Bag Adair, president of the Chicago Medical Woman's club, told of the good that accrues from baby contests and characterized Chicago babies as the "best ever."

A municipal bureau for mothers was advocated by Miss Campbell, who said that judging from the number of babies in the contest found to be super-normal physically or mentally, there are approximately 10,000 super-normal babies in Chicago. These, she said, should be given special instruction in the schools in order that their possibilities may be given the freest range.

Bureau for Mothers.

"A super-normal can be made subnormal if given the wrong training," she said. "A bureau of mothers in which they could be instructed in the science of analyzing and training their children properly would be a great help.

While the ribbons were distributed among the winners impartially, some of them are competitors for the highest honors. Robert Pilot and Mary Hortense Omer have been recognized unofficially as the best boy and girl in the contest.

The scoring, according to Dr. Wynekoop and Miss Campbell, shows only relative supremacy. It means much more, they said, for a child to be super-normal in its first two years than in the next two, when both the mental and physical development are faster. Thus, a year old baby, although scoring lower on both points than one of 3 or 4, may be more unusually developed and deserving a higher rating.

Among the admired babies was Marie Vetter, one of the ribbon winners. She is 48 months old, but her physical age is 52 months and her mental age 78 months.

AGED WOMAN LEAPS IN LAKE.

Mrs. Mary Glova Rescued by Policemen—Believe She Is Deranged.

Mrs. Mary Glova, 72 years old, of 3237 North Ridgeway avenue, jumped into Lake Michigan at the foot of Belmont avenue yesterday. The water was shallow, and she was rescued by Policemen John Kelly and Victor Johnson of the Town Hall station. She was unable to explain her act, and the police were inclined to believe she was slightly demented.

WEEKLY REVIEW of the WAR

by CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY

FRENCH FRONT.

The Germans have continued their attacks on Verdun. While there have been some minor attacks in the region of Vaux, to the northeast of Verdun, the main attacks have been west of the Meuse. Here they have succeeded in taking possession of both hills included under the name "The Dead Man."

Further to the west they have advanced in front of Malancourt and towards Avocourt. As a consequence they are now less than four and a half miles from the Paris-Verdun railway.

The French have made a number of counter-attacks which have failed to produce any substantial results. Along other parts of the line there have been artillery duels and along the British front several successful small German attacks.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

There have been a number of violent Russian attacks along the northern part of the line. The fighting is reported to cover a front of 150 miles. The Russians report successful local attacks, which the Germans deny. Along the Bessarabian front the Russians have made a number of attacks and in some places have succeeded in making local gains.

ITALIAN FRONT.

There has been reasonably heavy fighting along this front. The Italian attacks have broken down and have been followed by successful local Austro-Hungarian advances.

THE BALKANS.

The situation remains unchanged. The allies are in possession of Saloniki and Avalona, with the central powers and Bulgaria in possession of everything else with the exception of Greece and Roumania, which continue neutral.

CAUCASUS.

The Russians are reported to be laying siege to Trebizond. Along the rest of their front in Asiatic Turkey everything is apparently tranquil.

PERSIA.

The Russians have continued their advance into Persia, and have now occupied Ispahan. This is of great importance because well within the British sphere of influence and only 30[illegible] miles from the Persian gulf.

MESOPOTAMIA.

The situation remains the same as las week, the original British expeditionary force still being shut up in Kut-el-Amara and the relief force still unable to advance.

SUMMARY.

The Russian attacks on the German Austro-Hungarian front in Russia and Galicia are undoubtedly for the purpose of causing the Germans to withdraw troops from the French front to meet them and thus stop the attacks on Verdun. In the fall of 1914 the Russian advance in Poland and Galicia compelled Germany to stop her drive on Calais.

It is to be doubted if Russia has sufficient troops at the present time to again compel Germany to abandon her campaign in the west, particularly if she is to continue her successful advance in Asiatic Turkey and in Persia.

The entry of the Russian troops into Ispahan is significant because this town is well within that part of Persia assigned to Britain a number of years ago, when she, to obtain Russia's help against Germany, agreed to the division of Persia into a Russian sphere in the north, a British sphere in the south, and a neutral one between.

It would indicate that either Russia feels herself strong enough to approach both the Indian frontier and the Persian gulf, regardless of Great Britain, or else that the latter country has agreed to this move in order to hold Russia to the entente alliance.

The principal event is still the attack on Verdun, where the Germans have made steady progress. The pauses between attacks each time reported as indicating the end of the German attempt have each time turned out to be periods of preparation before another successful attack.

ARGO SUPERINTENDENT SAYS STRIKE IS OVER.

Reports Two-Thirds of Men Back at Work and Praises Conduct of Guards.

"More than two-thirds of the men have returned to work and the Argo strike is ended."

These were the words yesterday of Superintendent F. L. Jeffries of the Argo plant of the Corn Products Refining company, from which 1,000 men walked out on March 13.

"I have nothing but praise for the action, taken by every one interested," continued Mr. Jeffries. "The sheriff, the city authorities, and the private detectives we hired as guards all worked well together. I understand the strikers were told that the hiring of guards for the plant would make for violence, but our guards never went outside the company's property."

"The strike was settled with very little violence, due to the coöperation of the authorities and our own men, and we are taking back all the old employés as rapidly as possible."

WANT SUGAR FREE TO 1920.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—The Democratic members of the senate finance committee, after many conferences and deliberations, have determined to report the house bill repealing the free sugar clause of the Underwood tariff law with an amendment which puts off until 1920 the day when sugar is to go on the free list.

Fined for Carrying Pistol.

Thomas Spiro, 2247 Wentworth avenue, a barber, was fined $100 and costs yesterday by Judge Caverly on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Spiro was carrying a revolver and his companion a razor, detectives testified.

BISHOP DEFINES TRUE FISHERMAN AND HIS CATCH

Anderson, Before the Anglers' Club, Also Admits He Has Hooked a Few Himself.

The true fisherman of today, according to Bishop Charles P. Anderson, is the man who has caught the true spirit of brotherhood and of true democracy; who loves God's outdoor world; who is unselfish, patient, imbued with perseverance, and is law abiding.

These ideas he expressed at the ninth annual dinner of the Fisherman's club of Chicago, in the Auditorium hotel last night.

Admits He Caught Fish.

"I have caught fish," he said, and the four hundred real fishermen laughed, "but I know that from the profession to which I belong you do not accept such statements without visible proof of such an assertion, and I can show you that I caught a five and three-quarters pound bass (groans and whistles). Yes, you may whistle, and whistle more when I say I have caught a thirty-six pound muskellunge (more groans) and can show proofs.

"This fish used to hang in the roof garden of the University club. Now it hangs over the bar. You ask how I know this. Friends and members of the Episcopal church have told me that they have seen it there, but I would not lead you to a place of that character, for fear I might be leading you into places with which you are not familiar.

Hears Call of the Wild.

"I am hearing the call of the wild. And in answering that call we must exclude the man known as the fish hawk who nets and dynamites the fish, also the man whose tackle box is filled with certain spirits and poker chips, and the man that buys his fish, takes them home, and tells every one what a time he had catching them. These are all barred."

John D. Shoop spoke of coöperation and concentration and Guy Guernsey spoke of the proposed municipal aquarium for Chicago, urging the members of the club to "boost the movement for all you are worth."

WAR SUFFERERS' KIRMESS READY

Workmen Start Tonight Installing Old World Fair in Coliseum.

HOLD BABY SHOW.

The kirmess for the benefit of war sufferers opens at the Coliseum Tuesday afternoon. The last committee meeting has been held, the last costume for the girls has been finished, and the last booth has been completed.

Tomorrow at midnight 100 men will be put to work setting up the big show. The plan provides for an old world market fair. Through the center of the picture runs a miniature Unter den Linden. Off this will be side streets upon which the booth will front.

Otto C. Schneider, president of the executive committee, announced yesterday that the finance committe had $42,000 in hand. It is expected that the proceeds from the kirmess will raise the total to $100,000.

Archbishop Is Expected.

On the opening afternoon at 2 o'clock Mr. Schneider will be introduced to the crowd by Charles H. Wacker. Mr. Schneider, in a brief talk, will introduce Mayor Thompson. Archbishop Mundelein will be a guest of the executive committee during the afternoon, it is announced.

Everything from popcorn to pianos and an automobile will be on sale. There will also be a baby show for which the entries are still being received at the committee headquarters, 154 West Randolph street.

One hundred dancing girls will be in the dancing pavilion to see that no one is without a partner at a dime a dance.

Celebrate Bismarck Day.

One of the big days of the kirmess will be April 1, the one hundred and first anniversary of the birth of Bismarck. Special music and a memorial program have been arranged.

A model of the famous sea raider Emden will be on sale and a continuous vaudeville and a popularity contest are also expected to attract largely.

ACCUSED OF MAIL FRAUD.

Clayton I. Ward of 1347 Columbia avenue was arrested by Postal Inspector R. L. Mundelle in the rotunda of the federal building yesterday. He is the fourth man arrested in an alleged conspiracy to get money from Montgomery Ward & Co. by writing and demanding refunds on goods which the officials say never were purchased.

Wall Paper

IN the above decorative suggestion, the wall paper design is not a mere abstraction, but is based upon the character of the room. In our suggestions one would expect to find, and does find, a strong sense of character.

To inspect our displays is to find the essential elements of design and character—or one or the other—remarkably present.

Our illustration might be taken to represent character and design respectively. It suggests the objective truth of decoration and the associational interest of individuality.

CADILLAC MOTOR CAR CO.

75 Miles Per Hour Made by a New Cadillac Standard Roadster at Chicago Speedway Amateur Trials

The biggest surprise at the amateur trials at the Speedway was the performance of the Eight Cylinder Cadillac. We had no intention of entering a car. We took a roadster which had just come in and sent it out to the track for Mr. Fred Stone, of Montgomery & Stone, to use in moving pictures. It had been driven just 24 miles when it reached the track.

All the supposedly speedy cars were there—the ones that are advertised to accelerate the quickest, beat everything in sight, and otherwise do the impossible. There was even a famous racing car there which has a wide reputation for speed. The amateur drivers wanted to compare their cars with the Cadillac, and the driver of the Cadillac was taunted into joining the trials. And out of all of these "speedy" cars the only one which could beat the Cadillac was the famous special racing car which only beat the Cadillac by 2-5 of a second.

If you want a car that has in it just as red blood as yours, a car that you can be sure of in any speed brush on the road, choose an Eight Cylinder Cadillac. Even when new and stiff and not tuned up, it beats the best of the cars supposed to be built for speed.

Just Received a Special Train-load of Cadillac Eights

Over $80,000 worth of cars in one shipment, specially arranged to come on flat cars on account of freight car shortage, and still we cannot meet the demand for the world's finest motor car.

Our business in Eight Cylinder Cadillacs has been constantly away ahead of last year. And our lead over last year's sales is increasing every day. There seems to be no end to the demand for this wonder car which revolutionized automobile standards a year and a half ago. We are meeting the situation as best we can in spite of freight car shortage. But this special shipment won't last long.

Every man who owns and drives a Cadillac Eight is telling every man he meets that no car in all the world can beat the Cadillac. Hundreds of Cadillac owners have said to us, "There is no car I would trade my Cadillac Eight for. I do not see how there can ever be a better car."

Whatever car you may own you cannot help but envy the Cadillac owner the smooth, dependable performance of his car; you cannot help but envy him the swift pick-up, the easy handling in traffic, the conquering of hills on high, in which the Cadillac Eight has no equal. Whatever car you own lacks something the Cadillac Eight would give you; whatever car you have thought of buying you know the Cadillac is the car you really want. It is the one car completely satisfying, the one car which always reminds you of your wisdom when you bought it.

Judging by conditions today, there never will be enough Eight Cylinder Cadillacs to satisfy the demand. A year ago there were many disappointed buyers, and this year there are going to be more. With 26,000 Eight Cylinder Cadillacs in use the Cadillac is the only modern car which has proved itself right. Wise buyers know this and know the folly of taking chances. They are taking all the Cadillacs we can get. So if you want to own the car that everybody copies, that other owners envy, this week is none too soon to place your order to be sure of June delivery.

At $2080 the Cadillac Touring Car is the one unmistakably leading value on the market. Everybody knows that if you pay less you will get much less, and no man can show that if you pay more you will get any more.

CLUBWOMAN NOW IN ELGIN ASYLUM SAID TO BE SANE

Her Friends Tell Hoyne's Aids She Is Her Brother's Victim.

Mrs. Cora Willis Maddox, formerly active in women's clubs on the south side now an inmate of the Elgin asylum for the insane, became the object of a new legal agitation yesterday, when a number of Woodlawn women demanded an investigation of her commitment.

Application was made to Assistant State's Attorneys Michael Sullivan and Eugene Quirk for her release on the ground that she has been illegally committed and defrauded of $11,000 by a relative.

Mrs. Maddox is said to be a cousin of Gov. Frank B. Willis of Ohio. She was sent to the Elgin asylum on complaint of her brother, Fred Willis, 617 Dole avenue. Her husband is employed by the Erie railway.

"Paradoxical Psychologist."

Concerned in the affairs of Mrs. Maddox is one Royal Reed, who is an inmate of the county jail. He is accused of abusing the United States mails. Reed calls himself a teacher of "paradoxical psychology," and Mrs. Maddox is said to have been one of his students.

The women who called on the state's attorney's staff yesterday declared they had evidence that Mrs. Maddox did not write a letter to the Rev. John Willis, an uncle, which was the primary cause of her incarceration. This statement was supported by Reed, who also has been active in Mrs. Maddox's defense. Reed declared he wrote the letter and Mrs. Maddox's name was signed to it. A specimen of his writing seemed to be identical with that of the letter.

Say Will Was Changed.

According to Assistant State's Attorney Quirk, Mrs. Maddox inherited some money from her mother in Ohio. According to the testimony, Fred Willis, the brother, called on J. B. Lovan, an attorney of Springfield, and told him that, inasmuch as his mother was very ill and Mrs. Maddox had married a man much beneath the Willis station, it would be proper to make a will to his (Willis') benefit giving Mrs. Maddox $10. This, it is said, was done.

Mr. Quirk said he would pay a visit to the Elgin asylum today and obtain from Mrs. Maddox a full statement of her case and that he would proceed either to obtain her release or verify the ruling of the County court.

'GRASS WIDOW' POLICEMAN TURNS FLORIDA FARMER

Sergt. Charles Maronde, Who Traces Erring Husbands, Quits to Develop His Fruit Orchard.

Police Sergeant Charles Maronde of the Twenty-second street station, who once had the reputation of knowing more grass widows in Chicago than any other man, has resigned from the department and on April 1 will take his wife and move to Fieldsmore, Fla., where he owns a 160 acre fruit orchard.

Sergt. Maronde formerly was in charge of the "department of broken homes" in the detective bureau, which was maintained for finding husbands who had deserted their wives.

Maronde has been a member of the police department since the world's fair and has the record of never having received a rebuke from a commanding officer or of having missed a day on duty.

BOY JOB DAY.

Mayor Issues Proclamation in Answer to Brotherhood Republic's Suggestion.

Mayor Thompson yesterday issued the following proclamation:

I, William Hale Thompson, mayor of the city of Chicago, do hereby set aside and proclaim the day of April 8, 1916, to be known as Boy Job day. Because of my knowledge that there are thousands of boys in our city eligible by law to hold positions who are at the present time out of employment and who are suffering because of this fact, I feel that I would not be performing my full duty if I did not call the attention of the citizens of Chicago to the urgent need of their coöperation with me and those interested in seeing that every boy be given a chance of making an honest living, in order that he may develop into a vigorous, healthy, and honorable citizen.

Because of my profound concern in the welfare, physical development, and happiness of all the boys in this city, I earnestly request that all employers take upon themselves the responsibility of giving or securing on this day jobs for boys in need of employment. The date of April 8 has been chosen by me as Boy Job day at the request of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic. This organization of boys, in my opinion, will be a large factor in bringing about a solution of the boy problem in our city.

MANY CHICAGO SOCIETY WOMEN CALLED TO COURT

Mrs. John Cudahy, Mrs. J. B. Murphy Must Testify in Co-ed Case.

Society women of Chicago and along the north shore will appear as witnesses before Judge Otis Humphrey in the United States District court in the case against Miss Mabel Sturtevant, the college girls' "angel," which comes up for a hearing tomorrow morning.

Subpœnas already have been served on Mrs. John Cudahy, Mrs. John B. Murphy, and Mrs. Henry Corwith, and it is likely others who appeared before the federal grand jury two years ago when Miss Sturtevant was indicted for using the mails to defraud will be called later. A subpœna was issued for Mrs. Norman W. Harris, but could not be served, as she is in Florida.

Miss Sturtevant, who was a "prize student" and graduate of the University of Missouri, conducted an organization known as the Associated College Women Workers, a scheme formed for the alleged purpose of affording deserving girls a college education.

She would send college girls out in the summer to sell cook books on a commission basis, but when time for school to open came around the promised funds for tuition and maintenance failed to materialize.

Sixteen co-eds of Northwestern university also were compelled to pay her $600 in advance for room and board in Evanston, and suddenly found themselves without lodging or funds.

The young woman, who advertised her plan in articles appearing in farm papers under the name of "June Gentry," is said to have played both ends to the middle by obtaining subscriptions from wealthy women for the alleged purpose of aiding needy girls through school.

When her office was raided by the federal authorities a "live wire list" was found containing the names of forty-five society women who had donated sums ranging from $5 to $240.

Among those who testified before the grand jury were Mrs. William R. Linn, Miss Elizabeth Brophy, Mrs. L. S. Gordon, Miss Victoria Jorjorian, Mrs. George S. Isham, Mrs. J. R. Chapman, Mrs. Sadie W. Curtiss, Mrs. Byran Lathrop, and Mrs. Bryan Howard of Chicago, Mrs. O. B. Tennis of Evanston, Mrs. Edward C. Allen of Wilmette, and Mrs. William McIlvaine of Hubbard Woods.

DIVORCE ACTION MAY BE ECHO OF KINSEY SUIT

Mrs. Ord, at Whose Apartment Musician Roomed, Seeks to Get Decree.

Mrs. Edwina D. Ord, who until a few weeks ago resided at 5809 Winthrop avenue, where Carl De Elmo Kinsey, recently divorced, was a roomer, has sued for a divorce. Her husband is William Ord, sales manager for the Oshkosh Manufacturing company. Neighbors have noted his absence during Mr. Kinsey's stay in the Ord apartment.

Mrs. Kinsey, in connection with her suit, mentioned a "red haired woman." Mrs. Ord is said to have auburn hair.

Mr. Kinsey is vice president and business manager of the Chicago Medical college. His wife, Mrs. Blanche Gertrude Decker Kinsey of 325 North Maplewood avenue, Oak Park, asserted when she obtained her divorce on March 8 that a marked change had come in her husband after he had made a trip to New York with a woman.

Mrs. Ord's accusation against Ord is an accusation of misconduct on Dec. 15 last. She lived with him, she declares in her bill, until seven days later, when, learning of his last escapade, she left him.

Her attorney, Louis Grollman, said the name of the co-respondent would not be made public unless it were necessary.

"No, I don't believe Mr. Ord will contest the suit," he said. "I never heard of any charges involving Mrs. Ord and Mr. Kinsey. For reasons which I cannot disclose, I cannot reveal any details. Our evidence was obtained through persons who witnessed certain of Mr. Ord's acts; no, they are not investigators.

"Of course, I can't say whether Mrs. Ord intends to marry Mr. Kinsey, since I never thought of Mr. Kinsey in connection with the divorce."

Ord Expected in Town.

The suit was brought yesterday because Mr. Ord was expected in Chicago during the day and service of the summons on him was desired.

Some months ago, when it was learned that the Kinseys had parted, Mrs. Kinsey made one or two remarks concerning a red haired woman. However, when her suit was brought, the count it alleged was desertion.

Neighbors of Mrs. Ord at the Winthrop avenue address say they last saw Mr. Ord last September, or about the time when Mr. Kinsey became a roomer.

GOSSARD CORSETS

The Front Lace Vogue Sweeping Every Metropolis

When Beauty and the Doctor both prescribe it--who shall say it nay?

MICHIGAN AVENUE FASHION authorities, whose opinions are law in this principality of style, leaders among the smartly gowned women of Chicago, and the whole medical profession of the city have for the first time in history united upon one style-opinion.

It is this:---WEAR A FRONT-LACE CORSET---AND WEAR THE GOSSARD, WHICH IS THE REPRESENTATIVE CORSET OF THIS CLASS

GO TO the greatest gownmakers in Chicago and New York—those who visit Paris twice a year. They will tell you, "Wear a Gossard—it is the latest, the best, the most graceful of all corsets."

Go to the leading society women. They will tell you, "Gossards are the correct thing—they have established themselves in the most exclusive circles."

Go to the leading actresses of the American stage. They will tell you, "We wear Gossards."

Go to the leading women's hospitals and women's specialists. You will be told, "Wear Gossards—they are the stays to health—the only stays! Every woman needs them!"

Please note that the doctor will always say: "GOSSARD"—he does not simply say "front-lace." He knows the Gossard is positively scientific. As in everything else, HE IS EXACT IN HIS ADVICE.

The Gossard vogue, which has swept across the country, has completely captured every metropolitan district. Where there was one Chicago woman wearing Gossard corsets a few years ago, today there are thousands.

Metropolitan women do not care, as a rule, to be exploited in behalf of "health fads," or cranky innovations in under-dress. Certain things are made smart by smart usage here and in Paris. In corsets, smartly gowned women have come to understand that genuine smartness means the correct, fashionable silhouette, maintained with bodily ease and health. In short, it has become smart to remain healthy.

It has become smart to feel comfortable in your corset as you ride along in an automobile. It has become smart to feel comfortable in your stays when you play golf and tennis. The influence of the country club, as well as the dance floor, has drawn thousands of women to the Gossard Front-lace Corset.

Because it more perfectly fits the body than any other corset has ever done, the gown more perfectly fits it, with that elasticity and grace which constitute the very essence of thoroughbred fashion.

It gives you a real human back, supported where it should be supported—conforming gracefully to your spinal line, free from any thought of stiffness. It gives your gown an absolutely perfect back, where perfection in draping is most necessary and most difficult to obtain. Is there any wonder that women who demand the last word in fashion have eagerly adopted it?

It is a real womanly woman's corset, intimately related to the trim tailor-made, to the gracefully petite frock, and to the daintiest of French lingerie. It gives added value and added beauty to all these things.

Only, in addition to this, it happens to be the healthiest corset ever made. In a Gossard you can enjoy a perfect fit and perfect health at the same time. You can have a perfect silhouette with perfect comfort. You can look better and feel better than you ever did in your life.

That's why women in New York and Chicago, like women all over the world, are coming to the GOSSARD.

Gossard Corsets are sold in Paris, London, Buenos Aires, Australia, South America, South Africa — the world throughout. The couturieres in these fashion centers accept Gossards as the standard of corset styles. They use them as the foundation over which are created the model gowns that are copied the world over.

Wherever Gossards are sold, you may see these new corsets. Obtain a living model booklet comprehensively illustrating and describing the new Gossard Corsets and Brassieres. In Chicago they are sold in our own three stores.

STATE MILITIA LACKING IN MEN AND EQUIPMENT

Official Reports Show That a Vast Amount of Preparation Is Needed.

BY MARK S. WATSON.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Although the administration continues to assert that the calling of volunteers or national guardsmen to watch the Mexican border is unnecessary, the division of militia affairs has not shared this view. The department has just completed its exhaustive study of the precise resources the country has in the form of organized militia.

In the accompanying table are set forth the ratings, by companies of infantry and troops of cavalry, of the national guard of every state in the union. The table shows only 1,599 companies of infantry recognized by the war department, and of these no less than 261, or nearly one-sixth, are rated "poor." Only fifty-three are rated "excellent," 247 "very good," 546 "good," and 492 "fair."

The cavalry troops number ninety-one, or a little less than eight full regiments.

Lacking in Auxiliaries.

Just as the regular army's divisional organization is badly weakened by the fragmentary units of signal men and medical corps, and ammunition and supply trains, so the national guard is suffering from the same lacks. Its wants are much more acute, in fact.

Of the twelve army divisions into which the militia is divided only one has its quota of field batteries. This is New York, which in many ways shows by far the best record of the states. Its crack Seventh regiment is rated "excellent" in every company and every detail, and other organizations make a striking showing.

Only half a dozen regiments in the whole militia organizations boast a machine company, and still fewer have a supply company. Many city regiments, however, show good ratings for their medical corps and engineers corps, and in fact many army men say that the best material for both these corps is always to be developed among volunteer experts.

Lack in Numbers Needed.

The weakness of the national guard as it stood in recent weeks while the department was compiling its information is shown not only in the frequency of "poor" company ratings and in the under-enlistments of most companies, many of which barely slid over the requirements for recognition, but in the lack of balance.

An infantry division is made up, theoretically, of three infantry brigades, one cavalry regiment, one twelve field batteries, and the complement of trains, medical and engineers and signal corps. New York has a few companies in excess of the infantry requirements and a few troops in excess of cavalry needs and a few of the artillery needs. All, incidentally, rate high. The weakness of this, the Sixth division, is only in the lack of one field hospital and ambulance company and eight machine gun units.

Illinois furnishes all the cavalry for the Twelfth division, which includes Indiana, and eight of the twelve regiments of infantry needed. According to Adjt. Gen. Dickson, who was here last week, conferring at the department, Illinois can equip all her mounted officers, all the artillery, and all the cavalry with mounts and extra harness within twenty-four hours. In this respect the Twelfth division probably is in better shape than the Sixth.

One Has Infantry Surplus.

The Fifth (New England) and Seventh (Pennsylvania) divisions are both deficient in infantry and artillery units. The Eighth, made up of other eastern surplus. Deficiencies are common in the south and on the west coast. One of the best showings is made by Wisconsin, of whose forty regiments thirty-eight rank as "good" or better.

In view of the possibility of converting coast artillery units into infantry bodies, particularly for the utilization of their machine gun experience, there has been gathered also some information on this organization. Summarized it shows a deficiency of 21 per cent in company units and in numbers a deficiency of 38 per cent in officers and 57 per cent in men.

Some Blame on States.

The central government is not blamed for all evils by any means, and the individuals states come in for their share of criticism, notably in the thefts which were made public several months ago, when it was shown that in twenty-two states there was more than $700,000 in government supplies unaccounted for.

The report shows that 37 per cent of the infantry failed to attend the required twenty-four drills a year, serious in that the personnel changes 33⅓ per cent annually in addition. No less than 206 officers and 4,294 men are excluded from the list of organized militia because the units to which they belong could not meet the departmental requirements for attendance and efficiency.

The cavalry units, regardless of the numbers per unit, are less than a third of the organization plans requirements, due in some measure, the war department says to the failure to supply funds for aiding the guardsmen to obtain horses.

Field Artillery Poor.

The field artillery is considerably below half prepared, and of the batteries nominally approved several are on the list only pending marked improvement during the coming months.

The engineers number sixty-eight commissioned officers and 1,098 enlisted men, a decrease from last year due to the policy of weeding out nonattendants at drill. The signal corps now comprises twenty-one companies of varying sizes and types.

The sanitation troops are increasing in numbers and efficiency, according to the department, now numbering twenty-eight field hospitals, eighteen ambulance companies, and 160 detachments, but there is still a marked deficiency.

The divisions, which as infantry divisions, are supposed to have one regiment of cavalry (twelve troops) and twelve batteries of field artillery in addition to the infantry and auxiliaries, make the following exhibit of artillery and cavalry:

Fifth division—Field batteries, 6; cavalry, 14 troops; 1 excellent, 7 very good, 3 good, 2 fair.

Sixth division—Field batteries, 12; cavalry, 16 troops; 2 excellent, 11 very good, 1 good, 2 fair.

Seventh division—Field batteries, 4; cavalry, 12 troops; 8 very good, 3 good, 1 not reported.

Eighth division—Field batteries, 6; cavalry, 5 troops; 3 very good, 2 good.

Ninth division—Field batteries, 8; cavalry, 6 troops; 3 good, 2 fair, 1 poor.

Tenth division—Field batteries, 2; cavalry, 1 troop; good.

Eleventh division—Field batteries, 5; cavalry, 6 troops; 1 excellent, 2 very good, 3 good.

Twelfth division—Field batteries, 6; cavalry, 12 troops; 1 excellent, 7 very good, 3 good, 1 fair.

Thirteenth division—Field batteries, 10; cavalry, 1 troop; very good.

Fourteenth division—Field batteries, 6; cavalry, 5 troops; 1 very good, 1 good, 3 fair.

Fifteenth division—Field batteries, 5; cavalry, 7 troops; 5 good, 2 fair.

Sixteenth division—Field batteries, 5; cavalry, 7 troops; 2 good, 4 fair, 1 poor.

The national guard, it is noted, starts with the Fifth army division, the first four being reserved for the regular army.

LA SALLE ASSETS PASSED WITHOUT KNOWING VALUE

Examiner Would Have Halted Change Because of Doubtful Paper, He Says.

John H. Rife, formerly state bank examiner, testified for the prosecution in the trial of William Lorimer yesterday. He said that had he known the actual condition of the assets held by the La Salle Street National bank on Oct. 21, 1912, he would not have permitted its conversion into the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank, a state institution. His statement was made after Albert Fink, counsel for the defense, had admitted that assets criticised by the examiner following an examination in December, 1912, were in the bank at the time of the conversion.

Mr. Rife declared he did not examine the assets of the national bank at the time of the conversion. He had no jurisdiction, he said, over a national institution but based his examination only on the list of stock subscriptions supposed to have been fully paid in cash.

Asked No Information on Assets.

"You asked for no information regarding the bank's assets and received none, is that right?" Mr. Bell inquired.

"Yes," Mr. Rife replied. "I was interested only in the stock subscriptions."

Q.—How was the cash counted? A.—Mr. Lorimer told me the money was at the Central Trust company. I went there with him and Charles E. Ward.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I counted the cash.

Mr. Rife said that he made his first examination of the bank in December, 1912. At that time, he declared, the institution was in "a rather unsatisfactory condition." There were evidences, he said, of check kiting; loans to officers and directors, and there enterprises were excessive and not approved in accordance with the state law.

Criticized Assets in Bank.

"Do you know whether the assets you criticised were in the bank at the time of the denationalization in October, 1912?" Mr. Bell asked.

"I'll admit that they were," Mr. Fink interrupted.

"All right," Mr. Bell continued, "if you had known that those assets were in the bank at the time of the denationalization, would you have admitted the La Salle as a trust and savings bank under the state laws"

"No," Mr. Rife answered, "not until the bank had been cleaned up to some extent."

"Name some of the officers who had received loans without the prior approval of the directors in accordance with the state law."

"'Mr. Lorimer, Mr. Munday, W. J. Moxley, H. W. Huttig and Elbridge Hanecy."

In January, 1914, Rife said, he took a position in the La Salle bank as credit man, trust officer, and secretary. He asked Mr. Munday, he declared, for information regarding the Mnuday and Lorimer enterprises, but never received any.

In cross examination Mr. Fink got Mr. Rife to say that he learned nothing during his connection with the bank which reflected upon the honesty of Mr. Lorimer.

PARTY CHIEFS ASK COLONEL TO BE STANDARD BEARER.

Roosevelt Confers with Perkins and Others and Does Not Forbid the Campaign.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., March 25.—[Special.]—After conferences in New York with George W. Perkins and other leaders of the Progressive party, Col. Roosevelt got back to Sagamore Hill tonight in a happy frame of mind.

He had been told it was said that the country was in a "heroic mood" and there was an ever growing sentiment for his nomination as the standard bearer of the Republican and Progressive parties against President Wilson. It was understood, on excellent authority, that the colonel did nothing to put the soft pedal on the campaign.

The conferences and the attitude assumed by Col. Roosevelt removed the last lingering doubt from the minds of his followers about his accepting the nomination and has caused them to make plans to redouble their efforts in his behalf.

DEBATE CLOSED BY HOUSE UPON IMMIGRATION BILL.

Mann Opposes Literacy Test but Says That He Will Support the Burnett Measure.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—Debate on the literacy test section of the Burnett immigration bill was completed by the house in committee of the whole today, and a vote will be taken on Monday to decide whether the provision, which has been responsible for presidential vetoes of three previous immigration bills, shall be retained in the measure.

Republican Leader Mann spoke today against the literary test, declaring that ability to read and write were mere incidents of opportunity, but announcing that although he had voted against three immigration bills because of that feature he would support the Burnett bill regardless of whether the test were eliminated.

ORNSTEIN OUTDOES THE ULTRA MODERNS

BY ERIC DE LAMARTER.

Futurist, post-modernist, and ultra-impressionistic painters are pikers. They may paint action as it acts, but they can't be the action and the picture too. Leo Ornstein can.

This young Russian pianist whacked away to illustrate his idea of "Anger" yesterday morning at the Ziegfeld theater. His hair is long, and he shook it furiously; his feet worked like piston rods; with his fists he raised a fearful hubbub with the south end of the keyboard.

This "Anger" piece is the sequel to that painting exhibited here at the Art institute some seasons ago—the "Nude Descending the Stairs," with the stairs, and the ceiling, and the roof all coming down, too. Mr. Ornstein's piece is what the nude said when she had descended.

Things were quiet after that until the "Funeral March of the Dwarfs," when Mr. Ornstein's ghoulish collection of squr notes and melodies hung in crêpe raised the giggles again. His "Wild Men's Dance" exploded more applause and more laughter. The rest of his program was comparatively quiet and old fashioned—things by such pre-Adamites as Ravel, Korngold, Scott, Liszt, and Chopin.

It is reported that the Chicago Musical college faculty found difficulty in getting its students in rompers to play scales yesterday afternoon. They couldn't see the use of Mozart sonatas when "Anger" and any other combination of discords were the coming music.

Caught in the Act.

Lawrence Carr, who escaped from the St. Charles reformatory school recently, was arrested last night in the act of burglarizing a store at 2005 Sheffield avenue by Special Officer Frank Marvin. When questioned by the Halsted street police the boy confessed that he had robbed Olsen's saloon, 3508 Milwaukee avenue, on March 8.

ESTABLISHED 30 YEARS

EITHER HUGHES OR ROOSEVELT, LEADERS SAY

Will Colonel Eliminate Himself by Indorsing Candidacy of Supreme Court Justice?

SITUATION IS CALLED NOVEL.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—"It looks like either Hughes or Roosevelt."

That is the way Republican leaders are beginning to sum up the probabilities in regard to the selection of a Republican candidate for president at the Chicago convention next June.

Col. Roosevelt has returned from a vacation in the Antilles to find that in his absence the boom for Associate Justice Hughes of the Supreme court has been prodigious. He also finds that numerous aggregations of political persons want to know how he stands on the question of Hughes. Will the colonel indorse Hughes and thereby eliminate himself from consideration? is the question to which an answer from Mr. Roosevelt is fervently desired.

Presents Novel Situation.

Altogether it is a novel situation in which the Republican party finds itself on the eve of the presidential campaign. On the one hand are the three big men of the party, Hughes, Roosevelt, and Root, all of whom are preëminently of presidential caliber, but none of whom, so far as surface indications go, is seeking the nomination. On the other hand are numerous lesser leaders, all of whom are openly and eagerly manifesting their aspirations to the highest office in the gift of the people.

That Col. Roosevelt will "take a hand in no uncertain manner in the selection of a candidate is regarded generally as a foregone conclusion. Those Republicans who look upon Hughes as the one big man in the party who can unite all factions and those Republicans who are chiefly interested in eliminating Roosevelt are hoping that the colonel will get into the Hughes band wagon.

Fear a Subtle Move.

These Republicans, however, are beset with fears that if Col. Roosevelt secretly desires the nomination his first move will be the delivery of an open indorsement of Hughes in the belief that the justice would be compelled to remove himself, for ethical reasons, from any possibility of consideration for the nomination. Such a result would leave Col. Roosevelt the most prominent possible nominee in the field.

The tremendous growth of the Hughes boom in the last few weeks is due almost entirely to the increasing belief of Republicans in all sections of the country that the justice, while unwilling to become a candidate for the honor, would accept the nomination if tendered to him by the convention.

This belief is founded entirely on the fact that Mr. Hughes has refrained from declaring that he would reject the nomination. The justice has written two letters on the subject of his candidacy in the last two months. Both letters have been made public. In each he said that he is out of politics, that he is not seeking the nomination, and that he repudiates any effort to obtain delegates to the Chicago convention in his behalf.

In neither letter, however, did he close the door completely by stating that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances. This was regarded as extremely significant in view of previous reports that Mr. Hughes deemed it a scandal for any member of the Supreme court to permit himself to be considered for political preferment.

Roosevelt Men Hard at Work.

The followers of Col. Roosevelt are undeterred by the development of the Hughes boom. They believe that the justice will not take the nomination under any circumstances and that he soon will so declare himself. The Roosevelt men are bending all their energies to the rounding up of uninstructed delegates to the convention. In the absence of the colonel they have been particularly active in the south and west, and George W. Perkins now is confident that Roosevelt will be the choice of both the Republican and Progressive conventions.

A Roosevelt lieutenant who conferred with Perkins in New York a few days ago is authority for the statement that outside of the states that will name favorite sons, Roosevelt is assured of 480 of the 985 votes in the convention. A majority of the body will be 493 delegates.

After the first ballot the Roosevelt leaders expect to garner enough delegates in the favorite son states to give the colonel a majority. The 480 delegates on which the Roosevelt leaders are counting are distributed as follows: New England, 50; New York, 30; Pennsylvania, 40; other eastern states, 40; southern states, 120; western states, 200.

In the west the Roosevelt men are claiming all of Michigan and a big share of the Illinois and Indiana contingents after the first ballot. They are counting on half the Kansas and Missouri delegations, all of Wyoming, New Mexico, and Arizona, and a majority in the other western states, including those that will go into the convention nominally for Cummins and La Follette.

The south is being thoroughly canvassed by Perkins and Cecil Lyon of Texas with the result that 120 delegates are put down as a conservative estimate of the Roosevelt strength in that section.

T. R. ON BALLOT.

Col. Roosevelt's name will be on the ballot in the only presidential primary state where there is to be a test of sentiment in the twenty-one "direct primary" states. This is in Montana. The date is April 21.

This was discovered yesterday by the Roosevelt western managers. Mr. Roosevelt will be pitted against each and all candidates who have been mentioned or suggested as possible nominees of the Coliseum convention.

T. R. returned from his trip too late to withdraw, and under the Montana law he is compelled to run against all starters. It is held in pro-Rooseveltian circles that he has an advantage in the fact that former United States Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, who was chairman of the Progressive national committee in 1912, heads the list of candidates for delegates at large. He is distinctly and avowedly for Roosevelt. Senator Sherman of Illinois filed his willingness to have his name submitted to the Montana Republicans last Wednesday.

At this stage of the pre-convention campaign 193 out of 985 delegates to the Republican national convention have been elected, including all state and district conventions held up to and including yesterday.

Nothing has happened to change the forecast that the uninstructed delegates will name the presidential candidate.

WILSON-REED FEUD ENDED.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—The long quarrel between President Wilson and Senator Reed of Missouri, which began when the latter denounced the nomination of Thomas D. Jones of Chicago for membership on the federal reserve board, was ended today.

The president consented to nominate Bayliss Steele for postmaster at Kansas City at Senator Reed's request, and on his part Senator Reed consented to permit the confirmation of W. A. Shelton for United States marshal for the western district of Missouri at the president's request.

WALL PAPER
Our Prices Still 5c & 10c!

Every wall paper mill in the country has advanced prices. Other retail stores have increased their prices accordingly. Because of our entirely different method of selling wall paper we are still able to offer you the finest wall papers made at 5 cents and 10 cents—NOTHING HIGHER!

We have no high priced salesmen whose business is to sell you more expensive paper than you want to buy. Our great display screens, showing you just how the paper will look on your walls, are our salesmen. They make selection easy for you.

Apple Blossom Damask

A charmingly dainty paper in an embossed fabric effect like fine damask. Delicately colored—one of the most beautiful of the 1916 chamber papers. The cut-out floral border and binders are cleverly designed to give the effect of large panels with crowns, an arrangement found only in the most exclusive of this season's decorations—worth 50c a roll.

Here 10c a Roll—About $2.60 a Room.

English Tapestry Paper

Latest design in beautiful tints of Dresden blue, dove, slate, and ivory—exquisite decoration for white wainscoted dining room or for living room—worth 50c to $1 a roll.

Here 10c a Roll—About $1.80 a Room.

Topaz Tiffany Blend

Of all wall decorations the Tiffany Blend papers are perhaps the most distinctive and expensive, giving the effect of hand stippling on your walls. Here is a beautiful Tiffany Blend in wonderful shadings of tan and cream, richly embossed—a splendid paper for hall, living room or dining room. Colorful decorations to match. Worth 75c to $1.25 a roll.

Here 10c a Roll—About $2.60 a Room.

Conventional and Floral Cut-Out Borders

All the newest decorations call for cut-out border treatments. On our display screens most of our papers are shown with borders, etc., designed by expert interior decorators to go with the papers. We also have many independent borders, binders, etc., with which a variety of interesting effects can be secured. These borders sell elsewhere at 15c to 50c.

Our Price, 5c & 10c—Nothing Higher.

Come and see these papers—they are just a few examples from our hundreds of beautiful, new and up-to-date papers for every room in your home. Guaranteed satisfactory—if not, return them and get your money.

INQUIRY BARES DR. ROBERTSON AS "JOB KING"

of the committee. The committee hopes to bring in a report, possibly merely a preliminary one, at another meeting of the citizens at the club tomorrow.

Dr. Coon Greets Them.

The civil service board's inquiry started at 10 o'clock in the morning. Riding in one automobile and accompanied by another limousine full of newspaper men, Capt. Percy B. Coffin, president, and two other members of the commission, Charles Frazier and Joseph P. Geary, were greeted on their arrival at the sanitarium by Dr. J. W. Coon, who succeeded Dr. Sachs automatically as superintendent, and Frank E. Wing, the institution's business manager.

"I rather anticipated the coming of you gentlemen," said Dr. Coon, pleasantly. "So I had the attorney for Mr. Wing and myself, Charles Hamill, come, too. I trust that you gentlemen won't mind."

The gentlemen replied that they wouldn't, and then asked to be shown over the sanitarium buildings. The tour, headed by Dr. Coon, occupied the rest of the morning. At its conclusion even the commissioners were heard to make remarks of praise over what they had observed. Nothing seen on the tour provoked the slightest criticism.

Sachs Ready to Testify.

Then everybody—except Dr. Sachs—had lunch. Dr. Sachs politely declined an invitation to dine, saying he was in the sanitarium merely as a private citizen, that he had come to call on some former patients, and that he intended staying at the hearing and would testify there if requested to by Capt. Coffin. He wasn't requested.

The inquiry started at 1 o'clock in the director's room. The civil service commissioners seated themselves at one end of a long table, and Dr. Coon, Mr. Wing, and Attorney Hamill faced them at the other. Dr. Sachs sat between them, a highly interested listener.

Attorney Hamill fired the first shot by inquiring of Capt. Coffin as to whether all the sanitarium employés were under civil service, the inference being that there was a question as to the right of the commissioners to investigate. Capt. Coffin replied that he had an opinion from the corporation counsel that the employés were not.

Should Supervise Jobs.

"But while they are not," he added, "the board of trustees has decided we should supervise the appointments. Thus we have jurisdiction."

Then Capt. Coffin asked for a list of temporary appointees. Would Mr. Wing be so kind as to give data, so far as it was possible, as to who recommended each one for appointment, starting alphabetically? Yes, indeed, Mr. Wing would. Well, then, would Mr. Wing proceed with the name of Miss Emma Anderson?

"Emma Anderson," read Mr. Wing from his records. "Junior cook. Appointed on the recommendation of Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner."

"Ahem!" coughed the commissioners in unison. "Proceed further."

Mr. Wing proceeded. He looked up the name of Carl Alixoff, a busboy, and discovered he had been hired by no more exalted a source than the sanitarium steward, at $35 a month. Practically the same circumstances applied to the appointments of John Arcioni, cook's helper, and Amelia Anitska, kitchen maid.

Twenty-seven Sent Them.

"They were appointed, so far as the records show, purely in accord with the needs of the sanitarium, as the occasion arose," said Mr. Wing. "There are other appointees who were not, however. For instance, no less than twenty-seven persons were sent to Dr. Sachs, Dr. Coon, and myself for jobs since Jan. 1, and by one man."

"Ah! Who is that man?" interposed Capt. Coffin.

"Dr. Robertson. Nearly all of them brought notes from him. It was just a case of 'So and So is here; put him to work.' It made no difference at all that a competent employé who had qualified perfectly satisfactorily held the job that 'So and so' wanted. 'So and so' got the job, often throwing the holder out, and under Dr. Robertson's orders.

"When 'So and so' didn't bring a note, he just came out anyway and said to call Dr. Robertson up about him. In response to the call Dr. Robertson or his secretary would say, 'Oh, make room for him; put him to work as a utility man or storekeeper.'"

Not a Minor Job.

"But," interrupted Capt. Coffin, "such a position as storekeeper is a minor one, is it not?"

"It is not," replied Mr. Wing. "It is one of the most important we have. Since the institution started it has been held, and very satisfactorily, by William H. Meyers, at a salary of $75 a month. But Dr. Robertson sent several men out for the job. One of them was a man named Clemens, 55 years old, who wasn't any more fit for the job than a child of 6. He saw at the start that he couldn't do the work. Later Dr. Robertson sent him out for another job. He found he couldn't do that, either, so we employed him as a janitor. He worked four days at that, but was so clearly unfitted for the position that we had to lay him off."

"Ah, but how many cases of that kind have you had?"

"Well, of Dr. Robertson's twenty-seven recommendations there are many. A number displaced competent employés. A few of them did prove satisfactory. Others didn't. Several either refused to work when they saw what their jobs were or else worked a little while and quit."

Go Ahead with List.

"Proceed with the employés Dr. Robertson recommended."

"Mary Costello, attendant nurse, $45 a month. We had to discharge a thoroughly efficient nurse, Mrs. L. A. McGonigal, to give her the job. Paul Kucharski, junior bookkeeper, got the job of M. R. Minkler Jr. His work has not been satisfactory. Oscar Hanson would not take the job offered him. Leah Barnhard, waitress, worked four days and quit.

"Henry J. Sievers. He came to the sanitarium, saying Dr. Robertson had sent him. He said he was a painter and was offered a job at his trade at $2.25 a day. He told me before he could take it he would have to get a dispensation from the union to which he belonged.

"This, he asserted, he could obtain by the following Saturday. As he didn't appear then, I gave the job to a regularly certified civil service man. Two days laters Sievers came to the sanitarium again. He said that Dr. Robertson had told him to tell me to call up the health commissioner's office.

"When I did so, Dr. Robertson said: 'We'll have to put that man Sievers back to work. You balled it up by hiring him as a painter. It should have been as a utility man.' Siever is now working as a utility man at $100 a month. The actual work he does chiefly is that of a painter. I might add that the date of his first appearance at the sanitarium was two days before the primaries."

Interest of the commissioners in the proceedings seemed to wane perceptibly at this juncture. There was no reactionary enthusiasm apparent a moment or so later when the name of Charles A. McGee, sent by Dr. Robertson for the job of "custodian of dispensaries" was brought up.

"Mr. McGee's job pays him $100 a month," explained Mr. Wing. "He was formerly employed in the parks. Outside of his work here he is employed by Mayor Thompson and Controller Eugene Pike as a physical trainer. He trains the mayor in the morning and Mr. Pike at night."

A few more names were brought up, with similar results. Then Capt. Coffin asked for information concerning a woman Dr. Coon appointed as the head of the sanitarium laundry.

Employed as Expert.

"I employed her as an expert in that line of work," said Dr. Coon. "It became necessary to do that, because of the damage caused previously to the woolen materials sent to the laundry. Since I employed her there has been no further trouble of that kind.

"It might be in order to state that the woman who had charge of the laundry before the present incumbent was Mrs. Catherine Rutherford, who, I believe, has announced her candidacy for the vice presidency of the United States. She fought with practically every one she came in contact, and terminated her career in the sanitarium by a hair pulling match she started with another woman. Dr. Robertson recommended her for the job, also."

"A woman mentally unbalanced, in my opinion," interposed Dr. Sachs, who hitherto had refrained from saying anything.

They're All Satisfied.

The chronology of Miss Rutherford's labors in the institution constituted a climax that apparently satisfied the commissioners with their day's inquiry. At least the proceedings were adjourned a few moments later, and the merit board was whisked back to the more congenial atmosphere of the city hall.

"I feel satisfied," remarked Dr. Sachs.

"I'm happy," observed Dr. Coon.

Jim Pugh's Friend.

Regarding the allegation that Dr. Robertson a week ago sent him "a friend of Jim Pugh's" as a patient, Dr. Coon said:

"Several days ago Dr. Robertson telephoned and asked me if I had room for another patient. I stated that there was a waiting list of some sixty persons, and that if the institution's rules were to be complied with the patient would have to await his turn.

"'Make room for him,' ordered Dr. Robertson.

"'But I can't,' I said. 'I haven't a single bed that isn't occupied.'

"'You'll have to find one somehow,' was the reply. 'This man is a friend of Jim Pugh, and we've got to take care of him.'

"I had to jump him over the sixty persons awaiting their turn, none of whom had influential friends. The man is here now. His name is John Nelson."

Mr. Pugh could not be reached at night.

TUBERCULOSIS, JOBS, POLITICS

Being Some Extracts from the Diary of the Business Manager of the Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

Following are extracts from the diary of Frank E. Wing, business manager of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, relating to one Henry J. Sievers, sent to the sanitarium for a job by Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner:

THURSDAY, Feb. 24: J. D. R. (Dr. John Dill Robertson) called up Dr. C. (Dr. J. W. Coon) about Mr. Sievers.

FRIDAY, Feb. 25: Mr. Sievers here at 7:45 a. m. As per instructions from Dr. C., offered Mr. Sievers position as utility man at $2.25 a day. He refused to take the work. Talked a lot about political work in Sixteenth ward; had to carry four precincts; had been drinking; saw bottle in inside pocket of overcoat.

SATURDAY, Feb. 26: Sievers back with note from J. D. R. to Dr. C., asking him to call up by telephone. Dr. C. in Milwaukee, so I called Dr. R. Secretary said not in yet, but to hold man until Dr. R. came. About 10:30 a. m. J. D. R. called up. Asked where Dr. C. was. Told him in Milwaukee. Dr. R. said would have to make a place for Sievers, that he was causing a lot of trouble. Said: "Put him back as utility man." I said he was offered place but refused. J. D. R. said: "We put him in at $2.25. Not enough. Give him $100 as before and let him do any kind of work—painting, carpentry, etc."

Over 800 Used Cars Advertised Sunday—But Not One Jeffery.

Why?

AROUND the borders of this space are a few of the 800 and more classified offers to sell used automobiles which appeared in The Chicago Tribune of last Sunday.

With the exception of two cars offered by ourselves, taken in exchange for other Jeffery cars, you do not find a single Jeffery in all this list.

This is just typical of Chicago's papers week by week.

Certainly this unique condition is not because of lack of Jeffery owners. Our business last year set a record for the Centaur Motor Co.

This year's figures thus far are ten times as great.

The answer is simple—small depreciation — that means, of necessity, supremacy in quality.

A check-up of a thousand Jeffery owners in this territory shows more than 97% of all those to whom we have sold Jeffery cars in the past three years are today still driving their original Jeffery or a new car of the same manufacture.

What few Jeffery used cars there are offered from time to time are those we have taken in on other Jeffery models.

They bring high prices.

That car shrinks less in value which is worth most to start with—that's the answer.

The Jeffery Light "Six" Is Unmatched at Its Price.

NO other six sold at $1800 or less can match this new Jeffery in actual road performance and power.

We say, select your own test. Make it flexibility, performance through sand or mud, hill climbing; or whatever you wish—and this car, in a side by side test, will as far outdemonstrate any other car in its class in performance as it does unquestionably in appearance.

The Thomas B. Jeffery Company
Jeffery
Kenosha, Wis. U.S.A.

The Jeffery "Four" Is the Best Car $1000 Will Buy.

IT is a fact that there is not one other car selling at $1000 which can match the Jeffery "Four" in flexibility, in power, in economy, in durability, in the grade of materials and quality of workmanship which enter its construction. There is no other "Four" which can match it—no, nor any "six," "eight" or "twelve"—sold at the price.

It is absolutely unequaled at its price, in appearance, in style and in finish.

IDYLL OF SPRING AND LONG GREEN IN CLARK STREET

How Vague Stirring Surged in the Blood of Irene of Naples.

There was the nap of velvet in the vernal zephyrs of Taylor street. The breeze whispered sly nothings and there was a sort of darling feeling in the air.

Irene Nancy noticed it. She is 17, and her Italian eyes are large, deep and dark, and there is the soul of Naples in them.

The dreamy feeling would not pass. So, captive, she was lulled in the fine spun web of romance. The gentle anodyne of spring stole into her senses and she was wafted away on the gilded clouds of love that sail like yachts of whipped cream in oceans of apricot wine.

The Ethereal Sheen.

Spring, too, was in South Clark street. The nap of red woolen was in the air, beards two days behind the razor yearned for the detaching stroke of the barber, and throats begged dryly for Bock beer. Madame the Fortune Teller sat in 434 and dreamily wondered if the girl of the large, deep, and dark eyes walking in Clark street might be coming for her fortune.

She was, was Irene.

So she sat with eyes large, deep, and dark while Madame the Fortune teller bespoke a future of roses, of silks and satins, of a large manly man with arms that would crush her to him, and of purple and fine linens, and incense and myrrh.

The Long Green.

And Irene laid a $20 bill in the Madame's hand to lure the secrets of the future. The Madame said $20 was customary and it was safe and she would hand it to Irene at the close of the séance.

"And," said the big policeman an hour later, "if I hadn't threatened to t'row that fortune teller in the hoosegow she would 'a' handed it to Irene, too. But I got her $20 for her."

Hollis Held for Trial.

Louis Hollis of 6541 South Peoria street, yesterday waived examination before Commissioner Foote on charges of using the mails to defraud Montgomery Ward & Co. He and C. D. Waterman of 1423 North Dearborn street and Paul Gugger of 4806 Sheridan road are alleged to have obtained money from the company by demanding refunds on goods.

CITY'S POLITICS ONE BIG JUMBLE

Aldermanic Contests Merge with State and National Fight for Control.

HINGES ON APRIL VOTE.

Immediate Cook county political conditions are split three ways and nobody seems to know what the result will be.

Aldermanic elections will be held April 4. Into this has been injected all earlier mutterings of the fall primary fight for state and county officers, aggravated by the early aldermanic primary scrimmage between the Thompson and anti-Thompson Republicans.

On April 11, just one week later, will be elected by direct vote one ward committeeman from each of the thirty-five Chicago wards, and 208 precinct committeemen in the country towns of Cook county. The 208, in turn, will name six members of the county committee, clothed with as plenary powers as a ward committeeman exercises.

Majority to Elect Chairman.

A majority of this committee of forty-one will name a county chairman, pick the judicial slate for the June election of six Superior court judges, make the organization primary slate for the September primaries, and control the naming of judges and clerks of election from an organization point of view. It will also handle the machinery for the presidential, state, congressional, and legislative elections in November, sticking on the job for two years.

On April 11 also will be elected the fifty-eight national delegates from Illinois to the Republican, Democratic, and Progressive national conventions. The fifty-eight delegates elected by Republicans will vote in June, when the Illinois delegation caucuses for the election of a Republican national committeeman from Illinois. At the present time the candidates are Roy O. West, present member of the national committee, and Mayor William Hale Thompson.

Sherman Holds the Key.

Experienced politicians realize that Senator Sherman and the Sherman management in Illinois hold the key to this situation. If Sherman is nominated for president it is altogether probable that Senator Sherman's friends will ask for a national committeeman from Illinois, politically strong from a national viewpoint. They also would demand a man in position to handle a national campaign, who would become chairman of the Republican national committee for 1916 campaign purposes.

John Maynard Harlan is running for delegate at large to the Republican national convention. Nine candidates are going for eight places. All candidates except Harlan are agreed to be for Sherman. Harlan is "unpledged," but is campaigning the state as a pro-Roosevelt man. Competent dopesters say that Harlan will be one of the winning eight. One of the Sherman eight therefore must lose.

The elected delegates will name the national committeeman. Mayor Thompson is stumping the state in his own behalf. The Deneen organization actively is behind Mr. West. Chances are that that city hall crowd will vote for Thompson and nobody else. The Deneen people will be voting for West under the best circumstances, Chicago and downstate.

All this is the reason, as it gets around politically in Chicago, that the aldermanic campaign and the election of a nonpartisan council have become hopelessly interwoven with the ward committee and national delegate contests.

Attorney Charges Employes Were Shifted to Laboring Class to Get Around Civil Service Rule.

"On again, off again."

This is the complaint of about fifty section foremen in the department of public works, who, according to their attorney, Albert Hassell, were told that other men would take their places tomorrow. They have been in the classified division of the city civil service, and, according to the rules of the commission, could not be discharged without trial. But the civil service commission got around that by dropping the men from the classified division to the labor class, where the word of the ward superintendent is all that is required to discharge a man.

Attorney Hassell said he will go to Mayor Thompson with the fifty discharged foremen. He will ask the mayor to put the men back to work and reinstate them in their civil service rating. If the mayor refuses to help, he said, he will go to the finance committee, and if that fails, he will bring a mandamus suit.

JUDGE UHLIR DECRIES LACK OF HOMES FOR ORPHANS.

Declares It's Almost Impossible to Get Places for Homeless Children—Thrasher Talks on Vice.

"Chicago is fighting for a home for fish while it is almost impossible to get a home for homeless children," declared Judge Joseph Z. Uhlir yesterday at a luncheon of the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial Lodging House, Inc., in the Hotel La Salle.

Samuel P. Thrasher, chairman of the Committee of Fifteen, spoke of the work of the committee with that of the lodging house, organized for the purpose of helping women and children.

"The definite purpose of our committee is to destroy market places for traffic in women," he said. "Our work is destructive, while that of the lodging house is constructive.

"Three years ago about $36,500,000 was spent on women. These women were sacrificed to satisfy the lust of men. Most of the money went to exploiters of women. With the aid of the courts and police those conditions no longer exist."

Are You Doing This?

You might as well throw every fourth shovelful of coal out of the basement window as to put it into an old style boiler.

Men who use old style boilers in their buildings, in order to save a little on first cost, waste as high as 25% of their coal money on smoke; for that much of their coal goes up the chimney.

Sooty smoke is not merely an offense against citizenship. It's an offense against economy.

The Weil Smokeless Down Draft Fire Box Boiler saves all this loss by burning your smoke.

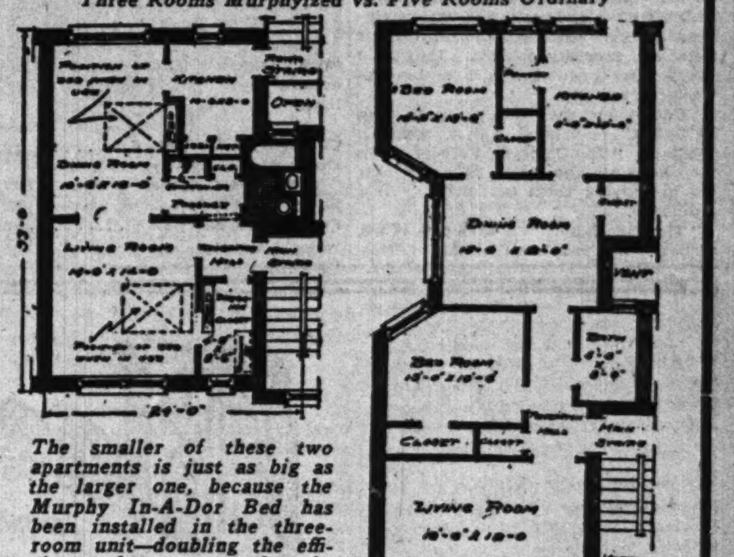
Why Builders Choose Murphy In-A-Dor Beds

Three Rooms Murphyized vs. Five Rooms Ordinary



The smaller of these two apartments is just as big as the larger one, because the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed has been installed in the three-room unit—doubling the efficiency of every room but the kitchen.

MEN who build and own apartment buildings are better fitted than anyone else on earth to testify as expert witnesses concerning Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.

They invest thousands of dollars in them and are vitally—financially—interested in knowing just what tenants really think of them.

Builders would not use Murphy In-A-Dor Beds in a second building if they had not been satisfactory in the first one.

The reason why more than 6,000 Murphy In-A-Dor Beds have been installed in Chicago during the past two years is found in the fact that the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is the only one which repeats.

PROOF

That Murphy In-A-Dor Beds Give Genuine Satisfaction

C. R. GLEASON, in 1914, installed 144 Murphy Beds in building at 3954-80 Ellis Ave. In 1915 he placed order for 75 Murphy Beds for building at S. E. corner 40th St. and Ellis Ave. In 1916 he placed order for 78 Murphy Beds to be installed in building at 4041-49 Ellis Ave.

EDWARD M. BERTHA, in 1915, installed 44 Murphy Beds in building at N. W. corner 40th St. and Ellis Ave. In 1916 he placed order for 136 Murphy Beds for building at 42d St. and Grand Blvd.; also 24 beds for building at 6032-44 Stony Island Ave.; and for 48 Murphy Beds in building at 5630 Michigan Ave.

FRED BECKLENBERG, in 1915, installed 33 Murphy Beds in building at 5439-45 Kimbark Ave. Since then he has installed Murphy Beds in the following buildings: N. W. corner Division St. and Washtenaw Ave., 5504-08 Ingleside Ave., 1615-19 Highland Ave., 5533-39 Ingleside Ave., N. E. corner 56th St. and Drexel Ave., S. W. corner 69th St. and Michigan Ave., 5633-39 Cottage Grove Ave. We have orders from Mr. Becklenberg for four other buildings which are not yet quite completed.

M. B. MORAN, in 1914, installed 20 beds in building at N. W. corner 53d St. and Kenwood Ave. In 1915 he installed 37 Murphy Beds in building at S. E. corner Drexel Sq. and Cottage Grove Ave. In 1916 he installed 13 beds in building at 5472-88 University Ave.

WILLIAM T. WOODLEY, in 1915, installed 42 Murphy Beds in building at N. E. corner 55th St. and Cornell Ave. In 1916 he installed 36 Murphy Beds in building at S. W. corner 32d St. and Harper Ave.

The above are but a few instances, typical of many.

Builders use the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed in building after building, because experience has taught them that:

- —the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is really and truly CONCEALED behind an ordinary narrow door, just like any other door.
- —the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is SANITARY and keeps the bed clothes aired all day.
- —the Murphy In-a-Dor Bed is made in standard sizes and ordinary mattress and bedding are used.
- —the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is as COMFORTABLE as the best bed made.
- —the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed does NOT get out of order.
- —it is MORE ECONOMICAL TO FURNISH an apartment equipped with Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.
- —it is LESS WORK TO CARE FOR an apartment equipped with Murphy In-A-Dor Beds.
- —the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed is VASTLY superior to any substitute—causes tenants to RENEW their leases and keeps buildings full.

BUILDERS: We will be glad to send our booklet, "How to Use the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed," to any one contemplating building either a house or an apartment.

TENANTS: Don't sign a lease until you have inspected the Murphyized apartments near where you wish to locate. Ask your real estate man or look in the classified columns of the daily papers. Look for our sign on new buildings, "Murphy In-A-Dor Beds Used Here."

COUNCIL HEARS $3,500,000 LAND STEAL CHARGE

Pullman Company's Profit Seen In Five Proposed Boundary Ordinances.

Accusations that five proposed boundary line ordinances relating to the west side of Calumet involved a "land steal" amounting to $3,500,000 were made yesterday in the city council with the result that the measures were sent back to the harbors committee for further consideration.

The Pullman company was named by the opponents of ordinances as being the chief beneficiary. By the terms of the proposed agreement the owners of property adjoining the lake on the west would receive a net grant of 158 acres of submerged land in return for which the city would receive the riparian rights. The ordinances were designed as the first step in creating a harbor in Calumet lake.

Vigorous Defense of Plan.

Ald. H. E. Littler, chairman of the harbor committee; Ald. Eugene Block, Ald. Hiram Vanderbilt, and others vigorously defended the proposed agreement with the property owners. They said every delay meant a less favorable contract for the city.

"Gentlemen, they are trying to steal $3,500,000," exclaimed Ald. Thomas O. Wallace. "The Chiperfield report shows they have already stolen 387 acres; now we are giving them 300 more by this ordinance.

"The riparian rights aren't worth a nickel. Calumet lake is only a frog pond. We are giving the Pullman company and big interests the right to property worth $3,500,000."

Ald. V. S. Zwiefka, another opponent, said the fact that former Representative Benjamin F. Kleeman is boosting for the ordinances should cause the council to hesitate.

Retort from Littler.

An intimation from Ald. M. A. Michaelson that the Pullman company was being unduly favored brought a hot retort from Ald. Littler.

"I want the council to understand," he said, "that Ald. Michaelson is backing a man for governor who is connected with the Pullman company and is not on the pay roll—I mean Frank O. Lowden.

"The talk about a land steal is nonsense. The property granted is worth at the present time about $500 an acre, and it will cost $1,500 an acre to fill it in."

Ald. John Toman and Ald. Nathaniel Stern said they were suspicious, and after some talk about "jamming the ordinance through" Chairman Littler withdrew his motion to pass the measures, and they were unanimously re-referred to the harbors committee. Ald. Wallace, Stern, and Zwiefka form the minority of that body who are fighting the proposed agreements.

What Minority Said.

In their minority report they said:

"The pending plan is calculated to defeat the best interests of the city, to prevent the proper harbor development, to give a railroad monopoly, to give excessive awards to the Pullman company, and to give far greater awards than is yet known to the committee, as is shown by evidence yet unconsidered."

The minority urges that the riparian rights should be acquired through condemnation proceedings. The same procedure was advocated in a petition received by the council from residents of the neighborhood.

What Each Is to Get.

According to the city map department's survey, the net land grant to different owners under the proposed plan is as follows:

	Acres.
Charles Dickinson	22.6
Pullman company and Pullman Land association	97.2
Sherwin Williams company	22
Consumers company	14.5

The gross amount is placed at 173.9 acres, but the city is to get 15.9 acres in return, according to the terms of the deal. There are 27,320 lineal feet of shore line involved.

Ald. Littler asserted the ordinances had received the approval of the Cook county real estate board, the Association of Commerce, government engineers, and City Controller Pike.

City Hall Closing.

When Ald. John A. Richert introduced a resolution ratifying the action of Mayor Thompson in closing the city hall on St. Patrick's day, Ald. Robert M. Buck caused first amusement and then embarrassment for his colleagues by submitting an amendment to close the hall on some thirty-nine other occasions. These included the national holidays of practically every country—San Marino to Germany, Mayor Thompson's birthday, the birthdays of several potentates and Jewish holidays.

It was adopted as an amendment with a good deal of jocularity, but Ald. Buck then insisted on a roll call on the entire resolution.

"I want a roll call so I can vote against it," he said. "It costs the taxpayers $6,000 every time you declare a holiday."

A White Elephant.

Councilmen who wished to vote for the original resolution found they had a white elephant on their hands. The mayor suggested a reconsideration of the vote by which the Buck amendment was adopted and accordingly it was stricken out.

The resolution in its original form was then passed, 51 yeas to 9 nays. Ald. James A. Kearns, who was listed by mistake several days ago as having refused to sign the petition to close the hall on St. Patrick's day, supported the resolution. Ald. W. F. Lipps introduced an ordinance, which went to the finance committee, limiting holidays in the city hall to those fixed by statute.

From the Guardians of Liberty the council received a protest declaring the practice of closing the city hall on St. Patrick's day is "contrary to American principles."

The proposed ordinance authorizing Mandel Bros. to operate their sub-basement for retail purposes received thirty-five votes, one less than the number necessary to pass it. Twenty-seven aldermen voted in the negative.

The council passed a resolution requesting the mayor to appoint a committee composed of the heads of departments to coöperate with the general campaign committee in conducting a "cleanup and paintup" week.

Ald. William J. Healy introduced a resolution providing for allowing all members of the national guard in the city service leave of absence with pay while in training camps or called out for military service. It went to the finance committee.

The council ratified the action of the finance committee taken Friday making the salaries of police captains $3,000 whether they own automobiles or not. The appropriation bill provided that automobileless captains should receive only $2,250.

Eaton-Rowe Report.

Without roll call or discussion the report of the committee on schools, fire, police, and civil service in the Eaton-Rowe split salary case was adopted. The report recommended that the testimony be submitted to the state's attorney with the request that he submit it to a grand jury.

The Franklin-Orleans bridge ordinance met with no opposition after it was introduced by Ald. Healy with the statement that all the interests involved had reached an agreement.

Chief Healey submitted a report of the corporation counsel on the council's order passed a month ago substituting a summons for arrest for misdemeanors not punishable by prison sentences. Mr. Ettelson held that the ordinance was in part the exercise of authority which the council does not possess. If a state law is violated, the opinion held, the suspect must be arrested, not summoned.

New Dry Territory.

The health committee reported an ordinance creating prohibition territory in the district bounded by Central Park avenue, Colorado avenue, Homan avenue, and Madison street. The report was referred to the license committee.

The 1916 tax levy ordinance, authorizing the controller to issue tax warrants up to 75 per cent of the levy, was passed.

Policemen Get Praise.

Creditable mention in the police bulletin was given yesterday to Senior Detective Sergeant Edward Goggin, Detective Sergeant John Prendergast, and Patrolman John Dohney of the central station for intelligence and efficiency in apprehending William Lanier and Abe Dulces, arrested for burglaries from H. Kohnstamm & Co. Most of the stolen property valued at $1,000, was recovered.

BOIL THE WATER WARNING RENEWED BY ROBERTSON.

Urges Precaution in Districts Served by Lake View and Sixty-Eighth Street Stations.

Health Commissioner Robertson yesterday issued another bulletin warning north and south side residents to boil their water. The warning applies especially to the territory served by the Sixty-eighth street and Lake View pumping stations.

"Although water supplied by these stations is chlorinated," the health commissioner said, "there is still a potential source of danger as a result of the construction work which is now going on in the shafts and suction wells of these stations."

The Sixty-eighth district lies between Forty-third and Ninety-first streets. The Lake View station supplies the district bounded by the lake, Kedzie avenue, Center street, and the city limits on the north.

Appearing Large or Stout Is Merely a Matter of Clothes

LINES are the secret of being well-dressed—can make you appear slender or stout, tall or short.*

By the way, do you know that actual statistics show that over 30 per cent of the women of today are stout?

Realizing this, we are sure that the coming to Chicago of LANE BRYANT will spell emancipation to the hundreds of women who heretofore have been in bondage as far as smart Ready-to-Wear Apparel was concerned.

It is the good fortune of LANE BRYANT to number in its organization the most ingenious designer and exclusive master of the correct lines to give extra size or stout figures grace and poise.

The stout woman can now secure Ready-to-Wear Apparel portraying the same ultra-fashionable styles, with youthful lines, as made for the "perfect 36," as well as matronly styles with lines and trimmings cleverly manipulated to give slenderness and individuality.

Under the supervision of this "master and genius of lines" a skilled staff of designers, buyers for every item of dress, and salespeople have been trained to give to the large or stout woman a unique service in the selection and fitting of becoming apparel.

We want every stout woman in Chicago to feel that the LANE BRYANT Shop has an individual meaning to her, and to be assured that inspection of our beautiful models will be appreciated and no one urged to buy.

Visit LANE BRYANT and never again need you be subjected to the embarrassment of being informed "nothing to fit YOU, madam," as, perhaps, has been your experience elsewhere.

We ask only to be allowed to show our merchandise—the rest we will leave with you.

We offer Spring Models for Extra Size or Stout Figures in as large and complete an assortment of Ultra-Fashionable up-to-the-minute styles as for the woman of slender figure.

Over one-half of our entire store is devoted to every item of apparel for long or short waisted figures (35½ to 58 bust—30 to 49 waist) to fit from stock.

It is well to remember that Lane Bryant manufactures the goods we are offering, making our service one that cannot be duplicated, with prices lower than can be found elsewhere for goods of an equal standard.

POLICE GIVE TIME TO VICE RAIDS; LET CROOKS GO

Hyde Says Work Is Frittered Away While Professionals Prosper.

ACTUAL CASES IN COURT.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Holdup men caught in the act of robbing a saloon at 529 Division street shot and dangerously wounded two policemen last night and then escaped.

WE WILL

"Me and my pardner was settin' in a chop suey joint on Thirty-fifth street. It was about 12:30 o'clock this morning. They was six or seven young fellows got up from the table and went out to the desk to pay their checks. These here two girls goes up to the cashier at the same time. A couple of the young fellows—these two here—speaks to the girls. The two couples of them goes out together. Me and my pardner follows 'em. They goes down Indiana avenue and into a flat. My pardner and I waits outside the door. Yes, we listens at the door, but we don't hear nothin' at all. We was just about ready to pound on the door when it opens, and out comes the two couples."

Waited Ten Minutes.

"How long did you wait outside the door?"

"About ten minutes."

"Then what happened?"

"We arrested these two girls and them two young men."

"Did you see them do anything illegal?"

"No, sir."

"Then why did you arrest them?"

"This flat they went into has a bad reputation."

Questions One of Girls.

"Will you please step forward?" The court addressed one of the young women, who came forward to the judge's bench.

"What happened in the Chinese restaurant?"

"This young lady and I stopped in to get a bite to eat. We were paying our checks when this young man"—indicating one of the prisoners at the bar—"asks us to go to the dance. I says we'd be glad to go, but first I'd have to go home to change my waist."

"And then?"

"Then they walks over to the flat with us. We all four goes in."

"How long did you stay in the flat?"

"About five minutes. When we come out of the front door the officers placed us under arrest."

"What happened in the flat?"

"These two boys and she sits down in the front room to wait until I changes my waist. We was getting ready for the dance."

Young Man's Story.

"Please come forward." At the nod of the court one of the young men steps up to the rail.

"How did you happen to be in the restaurant after midnight?"

"I'm a chauffeur. We had a union meeting and after it was over seven or eight of us goes into this joint to get something to eat."

"Were you going to take these girls to a dance?"

The young man grinned and looked at his fellow prisoner. "No, I guess not, your honor."

The two young women were discharged. The two men were fined $1 and costs. What were they guilty of? What was the evidence against them? Their conviction represented a full day's work on the part of two large detectives, who, if not assigned to the work they are doing, might have been out looking for holdup men and murderers.

A West Side Cleanup.

Within a couple of weeks a new commanding officer was assigned to a west side precinct. He called in his men and ordered them to clean up the district. He warned them that he expected to find proof in the cells next morning that they had been busy. They went out and raided several hotels, arresting half a dozen young men and as many women. The same night there were several holdups in the district and a number of other serious crimes. In none of the latter cases were any arrests made.

Four young women, well dressed and intelligent looking, and as many young men of the same kind, gathered in a single group before the judge's bench.

Each of the four couples had been arrested while occupying a room in the same hotel. There was no attempt to conceal the purpose for which they had gone to the hotel. In three of the cases an engagement of marriage was admitted by both man and woman.

Courtroom Crowded.

Inspired by the report of the raids, the courtroom was crowded. All the spectators' seats were filled, the jury bench was filled with women spectators. The detectives who had made the raid were emphatically present.

"We called the wagon," said one of the officers, "and took them all to the station."

None of the four young women had been locked up over night. They had not given their right names or addresses to the police. They were apparently dazed by the publicity to which they had been subjected.

The judge gave them good advice. He declared his unwillingness to make a permanent record against any one of them. The young men he fined $1 and costs each. Three of them stepped forward, one by one, and declared their willingness to marry the young women before leaving the courtroom.

Clear Way in Loop.

Meanwhile in half a dozen big downtown restaurants and hotels professional prostitutes ply their trade unhampered.

To some people it seems clear that offenses against public decency should be suppressed and serious crimes and criminals should be properly handled before too many policemen and detectives are assigned to the regulation of private morals.

RHUM, PRINCE OF GAMES, GRIPS SOUTH END YOUTH.

10 Year Old Boy Steals Pack of Cards to Indulge in Pastime Among Playmates.

That most fascinating pastime known to the world as "rhum," or "rhummy," has invaded South Chicago, where, according to THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent, they will steal—some of them—to get it.

Stanley Schuminski, who has lived one decade, was taken to the South Chicago police station yesterday charged with trying to steal two decks of cards from a 10 cent store.

"Us guys has to have a deck to play rhum with," he explained to the police, "and we didn't have no money."

The merchant's heart softened at the name of rhum. He gave Stanley a deck, and the boy was sent to his home at 10023 Avenue M. So, if the ethics of his daily life permit it, he may spend Sunday engrossed in South Chicago's favorite game.

MRS. DURAND, AT CAPITAL, HITS STOCK PLAGUE FIGHT

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Mrs. Scott Durand of Chicago and Crabtree farm, called on Senator Sherman and Congressman Rainey today to urge them to take action against the federal department of agriculture because of what she believes to be its mismanagement of the foot and mouth disease campaign in Illinois.

As a result of her call the attention of congress may be drawn to the fight between Mrs. Durand on one side and the state and federal authorities on the other, which finally resulted in an armed force invading her farm and slaughtering her herd of Guernsey cattle.

According to Mrs. Durand, not a single one of her herd had the foot and mouth disease when the authorities swooped down on her and killed them.

PLAY BY PROXY CRIPPLE'S FATE, BUT HE'S HAPPY

Cheerful Boy in Wheel Chair Lets His Chums Make His Fun.

HE FURNISHES THE TOYS.

Little Alec Young is forced to play by proxy.

While other boys run and jump and play ball and swim, Alec sits in his wheel chair and watches. But Alec gets as much fun out of it as any of them. He lives over at 38 East Elm street and every sunny afternoon he pushes his chair down to the sands on the shore along the Lake Shore drive.

A photographer came upon him yesterday surrounded by a group of laughing youngsters. They were watching two mechanical toy battleships maneuvering around a pool of water still edged with ice. One of the boats, a black one, moved slowly along while a white one, built on cutter lines, sped along at a great rate. One of the boys commented on the slowness of the black one.

She's a Heavy Puller.

"That's the Truxton," laughed Alec, his ruddy face brimming with the joy of living. "She ain't built for speed. She's a heavy puller. You've seen them little tugboats out in the lake, haven't you? Well, they don't go fast, but you've seen what big boats they can pull along. Well, that's like the Truxton. Now the Petrel there is built for speed, but she couldn't pull a fly. They're built different."

Then an accident happened. The Truxton ran aground on the far edge of the pool. One of the boys offered to take off his shoes and stockings and go after it.

"Don't do it, Bud," protested Alec. "You'll catch cold."

Skates for "the Other Boys."

But "Bud" waded in, rescued the boat, and placed both craft on Alec's withered knees. Then it was noticed for the first time that a pair of roller skates hung on the back of the chair.

"They're for the other boys," explained Alec. "I can't use 'em, but I bring 'em down because I like to see boys skate. I lend 'em to my playmates. And the boats, too. You see, I couldn't get any fun out of them unless they were sailed and I can't sail 'em."

"And do you like this playing by proxy?" he was asked.

He Enjoys Proxy Playing.

"Proxy? That's a funny word."

It was explained to him.

"O, yes," he said, "if the other boys couldn't play there wouldn't be any of us have any fun, would we? I've had great times since I got this chair. The folks over on Lake Shore drive gave it to me three years ago."

"And how did you get around before that?" he was asked.

"I didn't go out before that," he said, as his face sobered.

So there's a little sermon in cheerfulness waiting for you, Mr. Grouch, any sunny afternoon you choose to stroll along the sands near the Lake Shore drive.

O'DONNELL AND ERBSTEIN INDICTMENTS ATTACKED.

Attorneys for Lawyers Accused of Perjury Plot Charge Illegal Influence by Prosecutor.

Arguments on a motion to quash the indictment against Attorneys Charles E. Erbstein and Patrick H. O'Donnell and others, charged with conspiracy to suborn perjury in police graft trials, were begun by Attorney John J. Healy, former state's attorney, before Judge Turney yesterday. Trial has been set for April 12. The principal points raised by Mr. Healy in his attack on the indictments were:

That the state's attorney influenced the grand jurors in their vote by telling them that Erbstein and O'Donnell had been in trouble before.

That the indictments do not allege that any of the witnesses who it is claimed testified falsely knew they were giving false testimony.

"A witness might give false testimony and yet not be guilty of perjury," the lawyer said. "The witness must know that the evidence he gives is false before he can be guilty of perjury."

Attorneys Willard M. McEwen, former judge, and Edward S. Day argued along the same lines as Attorney Healy.

HONORS DIVIDED IN PLAY GIVEN BY MICHIGAN MIMES.

Poet and Masculine Red Haired "Leading" Lady Stars of University Union's Production.

Chase B. Sikes as Andrea Brezanio, the poet, shared honors of the performance at the Auditorium last night with Frank W. Grover, "leading lady" in the part of Aubernia Grey. The play was "Tres Rouge," presented by the Mimes of the University of Michigan union. The theater was crowded.

Sikes won six encores singing "Love is a Rainbow."

According to competent critics, this year's play, which is the work of Harold Schradzki and W. A. P. John, is the best which the Mimes have had in recent years.

The plot has to do with the efforts of three young men to win $500,000 by writing a poem printed in the Atlantic Monthly. It develops that one of them, Andreas Brezanio, can write only under the inspiration of a red haired girl. The part of the red haired one was taken by Mr. Grover.

CHINESE AND GIRL HELD.

Restaurant Man and American Young Woman Arrested After Offer of $79 Hush Money.

In a rear room on the third floor at 1358 East Sixty-third street, Samuel Young, 30 years old, Chinese, part owner of a restaurant, and Miss Alma Carter, 23 years old, of 1749 Warren avenue, were arrested by detectives who had to climb part way up the rear porch. Young handed Detective Stege a roll of bills—$79—and asked him not to make the arrests. Stege took the money—for evidence. Miss Carter and the Chinese will be arraigned in the Morals court.

"Woman in Case" Suspects Dentist Sought Her Life; Amours Uncovered.

WIFE CONVINCED OF GUILT.

New York, March 25.—That Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, the young dentist accused by New York police of poisoning his father-in-law, also sought to do harm to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Horton, was declared this afternoon by Assistant District Attorney Dooling. Dooling had a long talk with the Hortons. Mrs. Horton is the mysterious "other woman" whom Dr. Waite met frequently at the Hotel Plaza.

"Mr. and Mrs. Horton gave us some important information," Dooling stated. "From what they told me it is apparent the two of them were in danger from Waite. They were satisfied Waite had designs on their lives."

Dooling refused to explain his statement further, but he added that Mrs. Horton's narrative of places she and the young dentist frequented tallied with information which the police had obtained.

"How would Waite profit by the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Horton?" Dooling was asked.

"I couldn't say," he replied, "but apparently Waite was urging them to invest their money with him."

Had Other Women Friends.

Dooling said there were four or five persons who the police believe were mixed in the Waite case, but he did not state whether these were prospective poison victims or simply friends of Waite.

The district attorney's office this afternoon announced that the report of Dr. Otto A. Schultze, who performed the autopsy on the body of Peck at Grand Rapids, showed presence of a large quantity of arsenic in his viscera.

Mrs. Horton was born in Cincinnati and came east with her husband shortly after their marriage in that city Feb. 14, 1914. She resumed her musical studies, and early in December made a debut as a professional singer.

This afternoon police searched through the young dentist's 100 suits of clothes, his wall safe, his books, and his papers. They found a diary enlivened by Waite's picturesque comments on several inamoritas. He recorded names and dates and addresses. The police are searching for several of these women friends with whom Waite, if his diary is to be believed, spent considerable time.

Waite Wishes for Death.

Now fully conscious, but still weak from the overdose of opiates he took Wednesday night, Dr. Waite was tossing on a cot in Bellevue hospital this afternoon with guards beside him. He moaned constantly, bewailing his situation and beseeching death. For a time he refused all food and announced he would starve himself to death, but called off his hunger strike when hospital physicians declared he would be forced to take nourishment.

Until Waite got his confession off his mind he was in terror, according to detectives who were stationed at his bedside. When he first showed signs of consciousness, according to one of the police nurses, said:

"My God! Can't I get this off my mind? Can't you get my wife? I want to talk to her."

Detective Cuniff interposed, attempting to quiet the dentist, who he had stationed there by Question Value of Confession.

There was some doubt today whether the stenographer's notes of what Waite said in this "confession" could be used by the prosecution, since Waite was not specifically told, it is understood, that whatever he said might be used against him. District Attorney Swann, however, believes he has every necessary bit of evidence against the dentist.

WIFE BOWS TO FACTS.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 25.—[Special.]—"He is a murderer. Evasion of the technical act on the plea that the poison was bought at father's request may help him in man-made courts. It's nothing but a confession of guilt to me, a woman. I will go to New York to testify against him." That was the verdict of Mrs. Arthur Warren Waite today when told of Dr. Waite's statement that he bought arsenic as a helpful act to an old man who wished to end his sentence of life. The wished to end his sentence of life.

"I was faithful to him when every one doubted him," she said. "I have been a good wife, but my duty is ended here. I cannot longer side with him without becoming an abettor of the murder of my mother and father."

Mrs. Waite Issues Statement.

Later Mrs. Waite issued a formal statement through Percy S. Peck's hands, in which she said:

"When I was informed of the serious charges against my husband I was so shocked and amazed I could not believe them true. My faith in him began to be shaken when it was practically proved to me that Dr. Waite was living with another woman in the Plaza hotel.

"As the evidence against him increased from day to day I was compelled against my will and my deepest affection for him to accept the evidence as true. Of course, I cannot and will not say he is guilty, but it certainly looks as if that is the fact.

"As far as I am concerned I must and will permit the law to take its course. I will stand aside and leave the whole matter to those who have the case in charge. I cannot but pity a man who has apparently wasted his life and sacrificed everything that one should hold dear on the altar of selfishness. I have told all I know frankly and fully to the authorities and will not discuss that statement, which is in their hands to view as they see fit."

Case Ended in Grand Rapids.

Accompanied by three witnesses from Grand Rapids, Francis X. Mancuso, deputy assistant district attorney from New York, will leave for New York tomorrow morning, having concluded his investigations here. Although he refused to give the names of the witnesses he deems important, it is known that Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Peck and Dr. Percy Shurtz will go with him. The Rev. A. W. Wishart probably will follow within a few days. He is in possession of some of the prosecution's most important data from this end.

Uncover More of Waite's Past.

Further details of Waite's past were accumulated here today. A former classmate at the University of Michigan told investigators that Waite was expelled from the dental fraternity at the university for alleged theft of $300 from the Davis general store at Ann Arbor.

"He narrowly escaped expulsion from school," declared the informant, "and it was only by the most abject plea that his reputation would be ruined and his family disgraced that the faculty decided to let him remain. He had but a few more months to remain at school as it was."

How Waite came to be voted back into the fraternity also was explained. A vote of the entire class was taken after the difficulty had been amicably adjusted and he was reinstated, although some of this fraternity members were opposed to his reinstatement.

How Investigation Was Begun.

The Rev. Alfred Wesley Wishart, pastor of the Fountain Baptist church, who directed the entire investigation of the poison mystery, yesterday gave his autobiography to a detective orally.

"Immediately after the funeral on March 14," Dr. Wishart said, "I was told in confidence of the suspicions aroused by the 'K. Adams' telegram from New York, the secret autopsy that had been held, and of Dr. Perry Schurtz's opinion that the stomach of Mr. Peck showed indications of poisoning. A few hours later it was decided that Dr. Schurtz and I should go to New York and investigate. We did not then have a chemical analysis, only the physician's opinion, to go by.

"We left Grand Rapids on Wednesday, March 15, and arrived in New York the next day. We investigated the records of the County Medical society, discovering that Waite was not licensed to practice medicine or surgery. We then became confirmed in our suspicion that Waite was an impostor.

Prove Waite Statements False.

"From a source that I do not consider I should reveal, we gained our first intimation of the existence of the other woman in the case. Waite was seen taking tea at the Hotel Plaza with a handsomely gowned young woman. He explained that he was refreshing himself between operations as he was hurrying from one hospital to another, and that the young woman was his trained nurse assistant.

"Even a clergyman of ordinary sense knows that nurses don't ordinarily wear big bunches of violets and picture hats, nor do they often take tea at the Plaza. In explaining his presence with the alleged nurse, Waite said he was going to Bellevue to operate; so we communicated with Bellevue and nailed another lie.

"To Miss Catherine Peck, the sister of Mr. Peck, we went next, confiding guardedly our suspicions. We could see at once that she had been deluded and that she was reluctant to believe anything bad concerning the attractive husband of her niece.

Keep a Watch on Waite.

"Finally she admitted to me that everything she had heard about Waite was hearsay or his own version.

"After running out all these leads as far as we could, we went to the Colliseum apartments and inquired for Dr. Waite, knowing, of course, that he was still in Grand Rapids, detained here by a subterfuge. The hallman informed us that Dr. Waite was in Grand Rapids burying his father-in-law.

"When Waite arrived at the Grand Central station, Dr. Schurtz and I were there to point him out to the detectives. He walked within three feet of me, but I wore a great coat with my hat pulled down over my eyes and Waite didn't recognize me.

"Waite's telephone call from a booth in the station to the woman in the Hotel Plaza furnished the woman's name, Mrs. Walters, and corroborated earlier information. His warning to her to pay her bill, pack, and prepare to leave indicated plainly that he knew he was being shadowed."

LACK OF WATER CUTS RICE CROP IN PHILIPPINES

U. S. Fails to Solve Irrigation Problem—Food Imports an Important Item.

BY OSCAR KING DAVIS.

MANILA, Jan. 27.—With all the success the Americans have achieved here and with all the advancement that has come to the Filipinos in so many lines through American supervision of their government, it is still the fact that no American administration yet, Republican or Democratic, from Taft to Harrison, and both inclusive, has measured up to the mark of solving an important economic problem which has been confronting the Americans from the day Dewey landed his men in Cavite bay.

It is the plain—and seemingly simple—question of the food supply of the Philippines. It involves a problem of agricultural development. The chief element of it is irrigation.

The Filipinos number something more than 8,000,000. The chief article of diet all over the islands is rice. The Philippines have the climate and the soil to produce enough rice not only to furnish food for all their people all the time but also to make it an important item in their export business. But there has not been a year since the beginning of American occupation when rice did not figure substantially on the import side of the customs reports.

Rice Important Import.

Rice is imported in such large quantities that it is one of the regular revenue producers, and when by chance there is a large domestic crop the decrease in revenues is liable to be a matter of serious concern to the government.

If there is any one phase of economic development in these islands on which the Americans are competent to give advice and instruction to the Filipinos it ought to be in agriculture. And no matter how many men you talk to about it here you will hear from the great majority of them either commendation of what has been accomplished in this direction or at least satisfaction with it.

You will hear of a thousand and one different items of accomplishment, all making for agricultural development, with particular stress laid upon the work in the public schools, the instruction in agriculture, and the encouragement of gardening.

Only One Crop a Year.

There will be nothing or little about anything that has been done toward making the Philippines self-supporting so far as food supply is concerned; nothing about teaching the Filipinos to produce their own supply of rice. That would be a practical measure of independence. A nation may be independent without control of its own food supply, but not often.

The astounding fact is that all over the Philippines the farmers get but one crop a year from their land. For half the time the fields lie fallow and unused. A country is well fixed that can afford to make only a 50 per cent draft upon its agricultural resources each year.

If you drive from Manila into any of the rice growing provinces you will see thousands of acres of tillable land lying bare of crops and idle, not to be used again until the next rainy season brings the water for another crop of rice. If you ask a Filipino or an American government official about this the probability is that his reply will be some kind of an explanation of the great difficulties encountered here in establishing proper irrigation plants.

Water Scarce in Dry Season.

Persons, especially Americans, not acquainted with the Philippine situation, are likely to judge from what they read of the rainy season in these islands that there is always a plentiful supply of water.

But the fact is, that although there is plenty to spare during the rains, when the dry season comes along there is not enough water for a crop of rice unless it can be obtained artificially. So here in one of the rainiest countries in the world conservation of flood waters and scientific irrigation are absolutely necessary to a proper and continuous agricultural development.

That leads to a phase which seems to be peculiarly American. The only kind of irrigation work I have heard of out here seems to have been based on the sort of irrigation problems that are met in the United States, although conditions here are different to those at home. American irrigation engineers seem to think in terms of American irrigation problems.

Chinese Ready to Work.

I do not doubt that if Chinese, especially from the dry fields of the north country, were turned loose on the idle fields of Luzon they would be raising dry season crops in a single year, and there would be no necessity for any of the elaborate irrigation projects now under consideration here by American engineers.

The Chinaman has one great advantage over the Filipino, when it comes to a question like this. He isn't in the least afraid of physical exertion. Field labor has no terrors or humiliation for him. He will go at it early in the morning and keep it up as long as there is light.

Irrigation from Wells.

Irrigation by means of wells and water sufficient to grow rice in the dry season in Luzon involves a large amount of labor. The Chinese would furnish it gladly. Such irrigation, however, promises great returns, for it carries with it freedom from the dangers and losses consequent upon the severe storms of the rainy season. It would also facilitate crop rotation, for on fields where only rice can be grown during the rains any kind of dry weather crop could be raised during the irrigation season.

While much effort has been made to improve agriculture in the Philippines, and many things undoubtedly have been accomplished, one of the most important matters of all has been ignored.

No well considered, scientific general plan seems to have been adopted and no consistent policy followed. The commerce of the Philippines must always depend chiefly upon the development of their agriculture. If the effort is spent on development of commercial exports, hemp, sugar, copra, and the like, there will always be necessity for the corresponding import of food.

No System in Work.

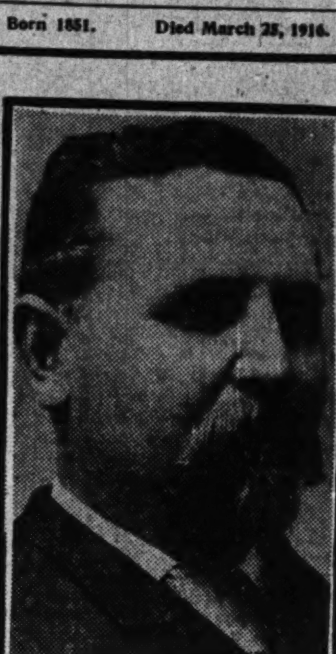
The efforts of the different American administrations here on this important point seem to have been much like the river and harbor development work at home, hit and miss, helter skelter millions spent and no broad system of development yet in sight.

But the greatest problem of all, that of making adequate use of the soil and of teaching the Filipinos the practical independence of producing their own food supply has not been solved. Good roads and schoolhouses, economy, and Filipinization of the government have been urged, while large areas of fertile land lie idle and rice must be imported for food.

The ninth article by Oscar King Davis on the progress in the Philippines will appear in tomorrow's "Tribune."

Rudolph Brand.

Born 1851. Died March 25, 1916.



Rudolph Brand, president of the United States Brewing company, is dead in San Diego, Cal. News of his death was received by his daughter, Mrs. H. B. Gottfried, 40 Cedar street, yesterday.

Mr. Brand was 65 years old, and was one of the pioneer brewers of Chicago. After the great fire in 1871, he moved to Blue Island, and established a small brewery. He later returned to Chicago and erected the brewery at Elston and Snow streets.

He was made president of the United States Brewing company more than twenty years ago. Last Januuary, he retired from the active management of the company, and went to California for his health. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Clara Ulrich Brand, one daughter, Mrs. Gottfried, and two sons, Alfred and Philip Brand.

OBITUARY.

EDWARD H. GROENENDYKE, vice president of the Union National bank of Pasadena, Cal., and known in Chicago, where he lived some years ago, died on Friday at his home in Pasadena. Mr. Groenendyke was 39 years old and had made a remarkable success in banking. He was considered by James B. Forgan for a high position in the First National bank, but declined, preferring to remain on the coast. His death was caused by anemia. He was a brother-in-law of J. Bentley Arnold, 4728 Magnolia avenue. He is survived by a widow and a daughter. The funeral will be in Pasadena.

CHARLES ZSCHUPPE, widely known in local banking circles as an expert locksmith because of his ability to open safes and adjust their intricate mechanism, died yesterday. His home was at 556 Arlington place. His father, Charles Zschuppe, established his business in Chicago upwards of half a century ago. The little shop in Austin avenue, opposite the Criminal court building, contained the records of many a safe tampering job and father and son were well known to Lyman J. Gage, and many other pioneer bankers of the city in days prior to the Chicago fire.

WALTER COOK, noted consulting architect, died yesterday in New York, aged 70 years. He was president of the American Institute of Architects in 1912 and 1913. He designed the residences of Andrew Carnegie and other millionaires in New York.

MRS. MINNIE MITCHELL, who lived at 4606 North Paulina street, was buried yesterday from the Church of the Immaculate Conception. She was a sister of E. A. Welch of Waukegan, Ill., and W. J. Welch, a Chicago saloonkeeper.

FABYAN SEEKS TO RELEASE RESEARCH ON SHAKESPEARE

Asks Court to End Injunction So He May Give World $100,000 Research on Bacon Authorship.

It is to give the world the results of $100,000 worth of investigation to prove that Sir Francis Bacon wrote Shakespeare that Col. George Fabyan asked yesterday to have the temporary injunction restraining him from offering the information dissolved. He filed his answer to the bill of William N. Selig, who secured a temporary injunction March 9 preventing Col. Fabyan and his fellow Bacon fans, Kate E. Wells and Elizabeth Wells Gallup, from "defaming the name of Shakespeare."

Col. Fabyan in his answer asserts that he has the proofs of the Baconian authorship, and believes that no time should be lost in giving Bacon his dues. In writing Shakespeare, according to the Batavia scholar, Bacon was merely testing the secrecy and efficiency of a cipher message which he wished to deliver to the world.

"To test the secrecy of his cipher," reads the document, "he put into the plays produced under the name of William Shakespeare a portion of his translations of 'The Iliad,' 'The Odyssey,' and 'The Æneid.' The translations were produced openly and publicly and yet were undiscovered in the plays."

OLSON STARTS NEW WAR ON PROFESSIONAL BONDSMEN.

Sends List of More than 100 to Healey and Asks to Have Them Stopped Signing Papers.

Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court has started a new crusade against professional bondsmen who are in arrears on either forfeitures or fines. Yesterday he sent a list of more than 100 names of bondsmen to Chief of Police Healey, whom he asked to be shut off from signing bonds until they pay up. Prominent in the list are Maurice Hennessy, E. W. Turner, Ben Rothouse, Joseph Schmidt, Dan F. Kinnally, Albert Jones, and John P. Mellis.

SUBNATIONALISM.

The Mexican trouble is resulting already in one benefit. It is turning American thought towards America. American sympathies have been abroad. American thought has followed the sympathies and the United States has been unconsidered of its own people.

Americans now are asking how the matter stands with them. That is a return to a proper line. Errant thought is coming home. It has been pretty far abroad.

It has been so far abroad that at times there has been protest against American policies because these policies were offensive to the sympathies which had expatriated themselves and were active in and for other countries.

It is about time for American thoughts to get back home and to make themselves worth something to America.

The American is frequently found to be a person of dual nationality. We do not mean a hyphenate, but a duality. In addition to his nationalism as an American he has a subconsciousness of nationality. It may be controlled by English traditions, language, history, organization, customs. It may be governed by German influences, or Polish, or French, or Swedish, etc.

The subnationality shows itself in romantic attachment to, in sympathetic interest in, or intelligent sympathy for some other nationality in which the American nation finds one of the many sources of its being.

The average American has a dominating loyalty to his own country, but his people are the only great people who have strong attachments outside their own frontiers. The hyphenate in Americanism is only a superficial aspect of this. The thing is just as strong in New England, for instance, in the families with colonial traditions. It there is revealed in its real essentials.

English influence does not mean a force under the shrewd or crude efforts of British agents. It is the influence of English traditions. If people with nearly three hundred years of history on American soil are still subject to the control of influences which nationally are alien, what of the recent arrivals?

The war in Europe had the effect of developing what we have called the subnationalism. The United States was not in danger, in the opinion of its people, but the other nations to which American affections went were. In many cases the sentimental attachment to some land abroad so gained the ascendency that, without the American knowing it, it took the place of American nationalism. The man thought he was thinking as as American. In fact, he was thinking as an English man or a German.

This confusion was curious and it became so grotesque that if a policy were advocated to the advantage of the United States but to the disadvantage of Great Britain the advocate was disloyal to the United States, or if the advocacy were in favor of the United States and detrimental to Germany the advocate was disloyal to the United States.

THE TRIBUNE, for instance, trying to follow a straight line for American interests, has been amused to find itself called un-American, disloyal, and seditious. Reason has been so imposed upon by sentiment—and by sentiment not for the United States but for some foreign nation—that advocacy of an American policy against the interests of a foreign nation can make strong men white around the gills with rage—and they are Americans.

Instances of this can be given just to illustrate how American thought cracked under the influence of alienized affections. We supported the policy of selling munitions. That was un-American. Why? Because it hurt Germany. The embargo principle is anti-American because it denies the right to purchase and the United States may always be in such forlorn condition that in emergency it will have to purchase wherever it can find material on the market.

We supported the policy of giving the submarine the greatest freedom of action possible. That was un-American. Why? Because it hurt Great Britain and her allies. The submarine is a weapon fitted for the defense of a nation with a great coast line. It is a weapon which a nation with an overpowering navy and a great merchant fleet could wish never had been invented. It is a weapon which such a nation would restrict in every way possible. British policy and American policy were clearly divergent, but it became un-American to advocate an American policy.

Incidentally it may be noted that Great Britain works in no such impractical, sentimental fashion. When by encouraging confederate privateering it was possible to knock the American commerce off the seas, Great Britain encouraged it. The British think for the British, the Germans for the Germans, the French for the French. It is the United States alone which gets international sentiment into the wheels of Americanism and makes them drag.

Pro-German thinking in the United States has been more provocative than other extra, or contra, nationalistic thinking not only because it has been more violent but because the pro-German frequently bears the appearance of an alien. He may use the German language or his English may be faulty.

His ways are not as insidious as the pro-British American. Such an American acts and talks like an American and can impose even on himself, as well as on others, the idea that he is thinking like an American whereas he is thinking like an Englishman.

This emergence of subnationalism in American character may have been the most natural thing in the world, but it is the best thing in the world to get these wandering thoughts home again and to have reasserted the proper relations in American duality, to have Americans pro-British after they are firmly, sanely, and thoughtfully pro-American and to have Americans pro-German after they are enthusiastically and genuinely pro-American.

We should pay a pretty stiff price in this war if it revealed us as incapable of paying any attention to American needs where by paying attention to them we did something injurious to another nation.

The Mexican trouble is collecting some of our wandering boys and is bringing them to understand that this nation can occupy all their thought and most of their sympathy profitably for some time to come.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The news of the last forty-eight hours includes the following:

An official statement from Washington that Mexico is a powder magazine;

A German raider warned a British armed merchantman and was promptly sunk by it;

A submarine sunk without warning a British passenger ship carrying Americans;

Admiral Fiske told the committee on naval affairs that the German and Japanese navies are better than ours;

The house passed an utterly inadequate army bill;

The department of militia affairs published the fact that less than fifty thousand of the national guard are of any present military value;

President Wilson and his cabinet decided not to call out the national guard for military instruction.

No better use can be made of Sunday than to ponder these facts all day long.

THE RIGHT TO SHIRK.

Kansas, which is right in the center of the United States, is awakening to the fact that it is in danger of losing touch with the United States. Most other states are in exactly the same danger. Their inhabitants do not live in the United States, but in Keokuk, or in Hot Springs, or in Evanston.

It is encouraging to hear that Kansas is waking up. Walter E. Myer of the State Normal school at Emporia has begun active measures for reform, and he has hit upon the curricula in the Kansas schools as means of effecting his reform. Baker Brownell, the editor of Teaching, published by the normal school, comments on it as follows:

"Patriotism has become so detached from the particular interests of the person that there is danger that it, the one thoroughbred impulse, will be dropped from the educational purpose altogether.

"Much of this is the selfishness of the modern school curriculum. Few school curricula, especially those of a vocational tendency, are directed toward an education that is more than individually beneficial. American educational ideals are stated in terms of the 'me.'"

Mr. Myer proposes to build into the educational system requirements which will include training in both civic and national duties. More than this, the curriculum will include not only training for service but actual service. Both study and action are a part of the plan.

Mr. Myer and Mr. Brownell have discovered one of the fundamental defects in the American system. "We can rise in the morning, eat breakfast, earn our day's wages, read our town newspaper, buy our groceries with little or no reference to the nation." We can go farther and assert that even in the school system we do not become aware of the nation in any convincing way.

Our schools teach us, perhaps, the ideals of American liberty in a theoretical manner. They do not teach us anything which makes us public citizens instead of private citizens. We grow up to think that the right not to go to the polls at election, and the right not to think about national affairs, and the right not to do anything in national affairs, is an inherent part of our beloved personal liberty. There is nothing in our system to challenge our belief that we can enjoy all the benefits of peace and stable government without assuming any responsibility toward maintaining peace and stable government. We are taught, in short, that no service is required of us. When we make a money payment in taxes we think we have fulfilled all claims the nation can have on us. We have the right to shirk.

A large number of our citizens do not live in the United States. They live in cities, and towns, and on farms. They will continue to do so until they are trained to get in touch with the United States.

THE NECESSARY MILLION.

Whenever an American writer solves the difficulties of his hero by having a rich uncle will him an inheritance the sum is almost never less than a round million. Inheritances less than half a million do not settle the hero's problem. According to American standards he would still be one of the uncomfortably well to do, unable if the opportunity should come to accept an ambassadorship. He would have to be content with a box at the opera and a country place for his wife while he remained struggling for a competence at the office.

It sounds absurd, but the fiction writers have a basis for making such a minimum inheritance law People are occasionally spoken of as comfortably well-off. Most persons in this country are well-off, but they are not comfortable. They are usually straining their incomes and occasionally borrowing on their insurance.

No business man would think of retiring after he had amassed enough to bring him $2,000 a year, or $5,000, for that matter. Life would not be tolerable for him. His friends would not be accessible. They would be members of clubs which he could not afford and their wives would give entertainments which his wife could not reciprocate. He could not provide for his children's education and amusement as lavishly as his neighbors and friends provided for theirs. If he traveled he would be obliged to stop at hotels which his friends would avoid. Of course it is not being done.

If he goes to a watering place or a summer resort, or tours through New England, or visits the Yellowstone, he knows that he will have to spend large sums of money. He cannot take cheap rooms at a boarding house because he would be barred from the social pleasures incident to living at a hotel. Besides, he has to show that he is as good as the next fellow. More than this, the country is not organized for inexpensive living. If he takes a walking tour there are no convenient inns along the route. If there are inns they are either foolishly expensive or bad or both.

It is the tragedy of the industrious well-to-do American that his money making does not bring him anything but the habit of making money. He cannot afford to stop making money long enough to enjoy his own country.

Editorial of the Day.

WONDERFUL METAMORPHOSIS.

[From the Burlington Hawkeye.]

Either a war vessel is an armed ship or else it is not.

If it is an armed ship, then it is an armed ship, and there is no room for further argument.

An armed merchantman is an armed ship. If it is an armed ship it is a war vessel and is prepared for war at sea.

Can the leopard change his spots? It would be an extraordinary thing if a warship can change its status en route from a warship to an innocent merchantman or from a merchantman back to a warship, according to exigencies or the will of its commander.

No wonder Germany claims the privilege of a Missourian.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]

THERE is no truth in the story printed in this country and coming from Spain to the effect that the kaiser intends to become a convert to Roman Catholicism. It is a fairy tale, widely circulated by German agents in Spain with the object of impressing upon the Catholic population of that country the fact that in this war Germany and Austria represent the cause of Roman Catholicism and of religion as opposed to the alleged atheism and irreligion of the French and of the English.

The maneuvers thus employed have been fairly successful and the peasantry of Spain are in consequence giving their sympathy to the kaiser.

One of the most curious features of the affair is that the Carlists in Spain are all in sympathy with the Germans and Austrians and championing their cause, the Carlist agents being actively engaged in German propaganda in the dominions of Alfonso XIII. Yet the Carlist pretender, the chief of their party, is interned in his Austrian château of Frohsdorf by the Austrian government as a prisoner of state.

Morover, he was subjected to an affront by Emperor William on the death of his father, Don Carlos In accordance with the etiquette of European courts he at once, on the demise of Don Carlos, sent telegraphic messages to all the reigning sovereigns notifying them of his bereavement.

He received courteous and sympathetic acknowledgments signed by every ruler save one, the kaiser. The latter contented himself with having his principal private secretary, Privy Councilor von Valentini, return Don Jaimé's telegram, with an intimation that the emperor declined "to correspond with private persons whom he did not honor with his acquaintance."

Prince Jean Koudacheff spent so many years in the United States as first secretary and chargé d'affaires of the Muscovite embassy at Washington that there are many on this side of the Atlantic who will be interested to learn that he has just been promoted from the post of minister plenipotentiary at Havre (the French seaport which has for some time been the seat of government of the kingdom of Belgium) to the office of ambassador of the czar at Madrid.

The prince is in deep mourning for his wife, who died the other day in Paris. She was by birth a Countess Olga Toll, a sister, therefore, of Mme. Iswolski, whose husband, formerly minister of foreign affairs at Petrograd, is now ambassador of the czar in Paris.

The father of the late princess and of Mme. Iswolski—namely: the late Count Toll—was a distinguished member of the Russian diplomatic service and was stationed for many years at Copenhagen, where both he and his wife and daughters enjoyed great intimacy with the members of the reigning house of Denmark.

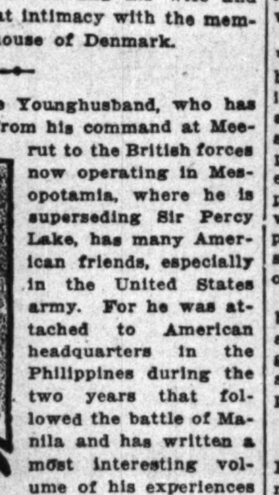
Maj. Gen. Sir George Younghusband, who has just been transferred from his command at Meerut to the British forces now operating in Mesopotamia, where he is superseding Sir Percy Lake, has many American friends, especially in the United States army. For he was attached to American headquarters in the Philippines during the two years that followed the battle of Manila and has written a most interesting volume of his experiences there entitled "The Philippines and Round About."

Like his brother, Col. Sir Francis Younghusband, the explorer, he was born in India, within sight of the Cashmere mountains, and belongs to a family the name of which is one to conjure with in England's great oriental empire.

Both his father and grandfather distinguished themselves as generals in those wars by means of which Great Britain established her mastery over India. His brothers and cousins have achieved military and administrative renown there, while his mother was a sister of that Robert Shaw who was the first Englishman to cross the Himalayas to the plains of Turkestan beyond.

Sir George Younghusband is the soldier par excellence of the family, and has much active service to his credit, including the Afghan war, the Egyptian war, the Soudan war, the Burmah war, the South African war, where he was severely wounded, as well as at least half a dozen Indian frontier wars His brother, Sir Frank Younghusband, who spent some time in the United States in the spring of 1914, is the diplomat, the administrator, and the explorer of the family



Sir Frank is credited with knowing more about the interior of Asia than any other man living, and was already celebrated as an explorer when twelve years ago he won a place for himself in the pages of history by successfully leading an armed expedition to the mysterious stronghold of Lhasa, capital of the hermit state of Tibet, which until that time had been rigorously closed to the outer world.

Every white man who had endeavored to penetrate into the country and to reach the holy city of Lhasa had been either killed or turned back.

On the outbreak of the war Sir Frank volunteered for service, and as the compound fracture of the thigh, which he sustained at Spa, in Belgium, through being knocked down by an automobile three years ago debarred him from joining the army at the front, he undertook the duty at the India office in London of compiling the official and private dispatches from the various seats of war in Europe for the viceroy of India, through whom they are distributed free of cost throughout India to all the newspapers, no matter whether printed in English or in the vernacular.

He is particularly well qualified for this task, for he knows perhaps better than any other Englishman living just what sort of war news is calculated to interest the 300,000,000 of dusky subjects of King George in India.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

ANOTHER KIND OF PREPAREDNESS.

IN times of peace we proceed upon the theory that waste is inevitable. In times of war we justify the authorities in almost any well thought out effort to prevent waste, even going so far as to permit the central authorities to fix the price of food and to say how much a man shall be allowed to eat and what sum he shall spend for clothes.

Repeatedly, in the course of the last twenty months, cablegrams have told us of orders issued by the central authorities of Germany regulating the amount of butter each man could use, prescribing a per capita allowance of bread, giving recipes for the making of bread, allowing travel in one direction and preventing it in another, suppressing circulars which attacked the medical methods in common use.

A recent cablegram from Germany said: "There has to be some restriction in the use of fat and butter. It goes without saying that every one must practice economy and exercise good judgment and even suffer some restrictions in the use of all kinds of provisions, and there naturally must be a slight increase in price."

Speaking at Guildhall in London March 1 Lord Kitchener appealed "for economy in everything, particularly in coal, foodstuffs, intoxicating liquors, petrol and oils, tea, coffee, and tobacco, and clothing of all kinds, especially woolen articles. Both economy and productive energy are required of all workers, as both are equal in importance. The war is a struggle for economic exhaustion as well as a conflict of armies. If every one works his hardest and produces everything the army needs and all save everything possible to invest in government securities they will be doing their bit. If they fail in this duty they are injuring their friends in the trenches and injuring the national cause."

In every war in history waste at home has been a factor in determining the outcome. Not so much a factor as heavy cannon, preponderance of ships, and seasoned legions, but a factor of importance nevertheless. But in this war the importance of waste prevention for the first time has been recognized as a factor of he first rank. In Germany the demand has been met by governmental decree. In England, by appeals to the people.

The American mind is upset by the yellow peril. In the main the yellow peril is a matter of peace rather than war. The yellow races are more economical, more thrifty in their private lives than are our people. When they come into competition with our people they outdo them because they live cheaper and save their money. The amount of work, especially manual labor, which a yellow man can do and does do is not equal to that of which a white man is capable. On this point men who have worked both white and coolie labor are agreed. And yet we have a yellow peril because white labor cannot hold its own in competition with yellow labor.

"In times of peace prepare for war." When it is a matter of preparing for war by building ships and assembling armies it is impossible to get the country behind a plan. A fair majority are opposed to such preparations. There is one kind of preparation on which it would seem that every one should be agreed. That is a program of preparation by prevention of waste. There is a national society for the promotion of thrift. This organization should have the support of all supporters of preparedness.

When Bismarck laid his plans for the building of the German empire immediately after the Franco-Prussian war he gave prominent place in those plans to schemes for promoting the health and physical welfare of the German people.

The most important aftermath of the Boer war was the series of British parliamentary measures for conservation of men, women, and children. There are those who hold, and I am one of them, that the most beneficent result of the Spanish-American war was knowledge of how to control yellow fever, typhoid, and malaria.

Not only are we wasteful in that our efforts to control disease and to promote health and bodily vigor are not compelling enough, but we are wasteful in our methods of handling the sick.

Citizens of Dutchess county, N. Y., proposed to organize a county health society. In order to find out the need of such a society these citizens induced the committee on hospitals of the State Charities Aid association to make a survey. The area selected was one ward in Poughkeepsie and the towns of Rhinebeck, Milan, Clinton, and Sanford. The 12,000 people in this district were mixed in many particulars, some from the city, some from the country, and some from small towns. Some were rich and some were poor. Some were foreign speaking, some were natives.

What this committee did was to investigate every case of sickness in the district with a view of finding out whether proper care was given, whether the care was economically given, and whether the rights of both the community and the individuals were cared for.

The conclusion arrived at was that in the case of sickness we are a wasteful people. In sixteen months' time 1,600 cases of illness developed among these 12,000 people.

Sickness itself is wasteful. Said Secretary Redfield to the American Public Health association: "Yet one need hardly say here that our needless death roll in peace exhibits a burden of human pain and economic loss that is as frightful a waste as it is an economic one. We spend and, in my judgment, spend wisely, millions for a battleship against the possible coming of war. We do not spend, and, in my judgment, most unwisely fail to spend, sufficient sums to meet the certain coming and needless deaths in times of peace. I take it that preventive medicine has it within its power to reduce our annual death roll by 500,000 and that if it had the funds and the authority it could within a few brief years at most produce this wonderful result."

Of these 1,600 cases of illness 141 were obstetrical cases. The statisticians tell us that 1,000 people can be expected to have twenty-five babies a year at the very least. Twelve thousand should have 300 babies a year, and 400 in sixteen months, the period covered by this investigation. As this survey only found 141 baby cases, it is probable that they overlooked some. If they overlooked 160 baby cases or anywhere near that number they overlooked many other kinds of illness. There is more gossip about a new baby in a neighborhood than there is about a case of pneumonia.

But even the figures given show an enormous waste from illness. One hundred cases of sickness a month among 12,000 represents a large amount of disability and inefficiency; 736 were cases of communicable disease. The economic waste from contagion is relatively great. A good health department could have cut that number in half. A superlatively good health department backed by a very intelligent public sentiment could have prevented it entirely. Perhaps we should not count as waste that which we lose because there was no way of preventing the loss. We should count as waste the losses which could have been prevented.

As a further consideration, the cost of caring for a communicable disease is much greater than that for any other disease. Of the 1,600 cases 452 were cases of chronic disease. There was no way of telling how much time from work, how much money, and how much efficiency these cases lost and the committee did not try.

Nine hundred and eighty-seven were acutely ill. These 987 were away from work 41,244 days, a total of 113 years. One way to sense it would be to think of the loss if 113 working people were to stop work for one year. The loss in time was divided as follows: Children under 5 years old, 13,256 days. This loss should be subtracted from the above total, though in many instances the mother had to stay at home to take care of the sick child. School children lost 13,716 days. The waste of school funds from illness is very great. Men lost 4,983 and women 4,838.

Of the 1,600 cases, 506 could have paid for any necessary service; 410 received all the care they needed; 96 did not. Not even plenty of money got for these ninety-six proper care. Some people are too careless and indifferent, some too stingy and some too unintelligent to take care of themselves. Eight hundred and eighty-two were able to pay physicians' fees, practical nursing and ward service in hospitals, but about half of that number were not able to stand a prolonged drain such as would follow a case of suppurative pleurisy or an ununited fracture. One-half of the 882 received adequate care. The other half did not. Two hundred and twelve patients were unable to pay for physicians and nurses. Sixty-eight were adequately cared for; 144 were not.

The opinion prevails that in large cities with well developed hospitals, dispensaries and clinics the well to do and the very poor receive the best medical and nursing service. That the men of moderate means too poor to pay for expensive service and too self-respecting to use the free beds, dispensaries and clinics are the sufferers from inadequate service. Many would like to see this committee turn its attention to some large city and report upon the truth of the prevailing opinion.

Of those patients who remained in their homes 55 per cent were adequately cared for and 45 per cent had inadequate attention. Of those who went to hospitals 80 per cent were adequately cared for, 20 per cent received inadequate care, principally because of lack of hospitals, social service and follow-up work.

There is no question that the best place for a sick man is a hospital. This study proves again what has been generally known for some time—that a sick person stands a better chance of getting well if he goes to a hospital than if he stays at home. One objection to hospitals is that they sometimes discharge their patients before they are able to work and when they have no home to go to. The hospital justifies itself by saying that the man's disease has been cured and his bed was needed for a sick man. Well regulated hospitals now meet this objection by providing nurses or other visitors who follow up the patients.

Of the people who were inadequately cared for, in 21 per cent of the cases the cause was poverty. In 79 per cent it was not. Mr. Moree, who reported on this survey to the American Public Health association, said that lack of facilities was responsible for the failure of most of the cases. There were not nurses and physicians enough and of proper quality. A poor nurse and a poor physician are bad from the community standpoint, as every country that has sickness insurance has found out. Again, there is a poor distribution of nurses and physicians. There are few nurses outside of the cities, and the tendency is for physicians to quit the country and gather in the cities.

In many cases there was lack of knowledge as to how to go about getting medical and nursing service. In many cases care was inadequate because there were not proper facilities in the home; 442 could not have been cared for adequately in their homes under any circumstances; in 138 cases "the impossibility of adequately treating them in their homes was due to crowded and insanitary housing conditions, low grade mentality, ignorance, shiftlessness, or poverty."

Seventy-three of the cases inadequately cared for in homes were cases of contagion. The good of the community as well as that of the individual demanded that such cases should have been cared for in a hospital.

The committee concludes: "As elsewhere in the state the health work in Dutchess county is not sufficiently organized to be really effective. Under present circumstances, the general medical and surgical hospital facilities appear on the face of things to be inadequate." Economic conditions and general intelligence in Dutchess county are above the average. "If under these circumstances conditions are not what they ought to be, it is reasonable to suppose that in less favored communities they are at least equally bad."

WINTER ITCH.

T. W. M. writes: "I have fourteen prisoners in close confinement, and two of them have developed winter itch. Is there any simple effective remedy other than a mixture of lard and sulphur? Is there any preventive?"

REPLY.

If you are right in your diagnosis lard and sulphur will do no good. Winter itch results from dryness of the skin. To prevent it the air should be moistened. If you will keep the room temperature at 65 and the relative humidity at 50 the men will not suffer from winter itch. To keep the humidity at 50 you must discharge steam into the air. How this is to be done depends on the method of heating employed.

RAILROAD FARES ARE JUSTIFIED.

Chicago, March 19.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Since the spring of 1913, when some of my relatives moved to Preston, Wis., I have been visiting them at intervals of two times a year, traveling over the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. During the year of 1913 my fare was always $3.75 one way. In the fall of 1914 my fare was $3.92; in 1915 it was raised to $4, and on March 7, 1916, my fare was $4.32. What I would like to know is whether this railroad is justified in this advance in rates or whether I am entitled to a refund? OLD TIMER.

The fares which we have been charging between Chicago, Ill., and Preston, Wis., are the lawfully established fares as published and filed with the interstate commerce commission, and the fares now in effect are on the basis prescribed and approved by the interstate commerce commission as reasonable.

A. C. JOHNSON,
Passenger Traffic Manager.

BELL HAS BEEN REMOVED.

Chicago, March 19.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I live about one-half block south of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad on Racine avenue, between Milwaukee avenue and Augusta street. Now on and off for the last two months or more there has been a bell ringing on the railroad light signaling tower, which is found very annoying, not only to myself but other people in the neighborhood.

General Manager S. G. Strickland of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway company advises that the bell complained of has been removed.

REBATE ON FORTY-FIFTH STREET PAVING.

Chicago, March 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me whether any refund is to be paid property owners for paving of Forty-fifth street, between State and Halsted streets, paved about four or five years ago.

R. J. WRIGHT,
449 West Forty-fifth street.

The last installment of warrant 38339 for paving of Forty-fifth street, between State and Halsted streets, was in collection in 1915. The warrant will be consolidated and if any surplus remains it will be figured for rebate the latter part of this year, at which time all property owners who have paid into the assessment will be regularly notified.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

DRAWING A WILL.

Chicago, March 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What precautions are necessary to prevent a will being broken by distant relatives? Having no living relatives nearer than aunts, uncles, and cousins, should they be mentioned in my will or am I free to leave everything to friends or institutions? On what grounds could such relatives attack the will? Is your answer based on Illinois statutes or on the common law? I have real estate and mortgages in several states. The personal property is in Illinois. C. A. W.

1. The safest plan, in order to draw a valid and secure will, is to have some competent attorney draw it up, after telling him what disposition you wish made of your property.

2. The relatives should be mentioned (for safety's sake) in your will, but they need only be left some slight or nominal bequest. You are free to leave the bulk of your estate to friends and institutions.

3. The grounds for breaking a will are:

[a] Unsound mind of the maker of the will at the time of the making of the will.

[b] Undue influence being exerted on the maker of the will at the time of its being made.

[c] Fraud or coercion being exerted upon the maker of the will at the time of the will's being drawn.

[d] The will's being illegal or contrary to public policy.

[e] Improper and incorrect form of the will itself.

4. The answers are based upon Illinois law and the common law both. The will is probated in the state in which you die.

NOT NECESSARY TO MAKE WILL.

Chicago, March 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My wife and I own real estate in joint tenancy. We desire at the death of one that the other shall have all. Is it necessary for each to make a will, and must the estate be probated? 2. My wife is appointed administratrix of her sister's estate which consists of real estate and jewelry. Would it be legal for me to buy any of the jewelry? H. B.

1. If your wife and you should hold the property in joint tenancy, the title to the real estate goes to the survivor upon the death of the other automatically without the necessity of a will.

2. Your wife, as administratrix of the estate of her sister, has no right to sell any of the property of the estate without having first obtained a court order to that effect. This order may be obtained by presenting a petition to the judge of the Probate court.

WHAT IS HIS GUESS WORTH?

Chicago, March 2[illegible].—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial policy, as well as the others in this country, is a matter of grave concern. Evidently those who want to force the United States into a war with any nation have a throttle hold on the papers in the country. You are educating people to violence and anarchy, as well as an unhealthy desire for war with any nation. If the United States is so unprepared you can be sure that any nation hostile to us would have long ago started action while we were in the so-called helpless state.

Keep on with your present policy and you will surely have war all right, which you evidently desire for us. It would be a healthy thing for this country if all editorial writers could be formed into a regiment and get a taste of the very conditions which they are preparing for us.

Your editorials do not ring true to this very unimportant citizen, who desires peace, until danger threatens his own home, when you may be sure he will fight like a demon to protect it. You say flippantly, send 100,000 men into Mexico. If your neighbor next door was having a brawl, you would surely get all that was coming to you if you went over into his property and interfered, and it would serve you right. No one denies the right to go after Villa, but aside from that the United States has no right to interfere with her neighbor.

Those who know say it would take five to fifteen years to pacify Mexico, cost millions of lives and untold money. Are you willing to be one of the volunteers? I guess not. P. F. SULLIVAN,

OUR DESTINY.

Paris, Ill., March 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I presume you think you can curry favor with the German-Americans with your despicable cartoons and the lambasting of President Wilson. No petty ward heeler could stoop lower. No traitor could do worse to harm his country. Most of us Germans would not like to see German militarism triumph over the United States, our adopted country, but destiny probably wants it to be, and then good-by to such newspapers as yours and all despicable politicians. M. B.

MAYBE THEY'VE GONE DRY.

Bismarck, N. D., March 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—How can it be true that German babies are dying for lack of milk? All the cattle from Belgium, northern France, Poland, and Serbia were taken to Germany. These immense herds, added to her own stock, should give Germany abundant supplies of cattle and of milk. Any other government might have slaughtered most of those animals for meat, but the efficient Germans surely provided milk for their own children. If they failed to do this when their herds were so great the German mothers would rise in indignant protest. We hear of no public meetings in the United States to obtain milk for starving Belgian, Polish, or Serbian babies, though their countries were denuded of cattle by Germany. How then can German children be in need?

HARDY JACKSON.

ENTER, THE EMERITI.

Chicago, March 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A few weeks ago you challenged me to show my colors. Well, I am going to show them. Come up next Thursday evening to 923 West Madison street and you will see a meeting of the Emeriti, a society of discharged United States soldiers and sailors. We are going to organize a regiment—possibly a brigade—of veterans for service in Mexico, or anywhere else the government sees fit to send us. None are eligible but men who served in the United States army or navy, and men with war service will be given the preference.

At present the Emeriti has over 400 men on its roster, and prospects of 1,000 more. We ask nothing from the government, as we are all going into this as privates, but that we have regular army officers to command us. In event that we cannot get a full detail of regular officers, we ask that noncoms now in the regular service be promoted. We will not serve under men appointed from civil life. Remember that we ask no honors for ourselves, as all the Emeriti will enlist as privates.

We will muster a regiment of trained men who are able to take the field as soon as equipped. Also, we will maintain a home battalion to replenish our losses in the field. This battalion will be recruited and drilled by retired army sergeants and its home will be Chicago.

We realize that going into Mexico will be no picnic trip, and it is likely to wind up with a scrap with a larger power than Villa; so you won't see any flag waving at our meeting or any verbal pyrotechnics, but you will see and hear some good, sensible, old fashioned American patriotic talk. MILTON ROSENSWEIG, 1937 South Halsted street.

A SERVICE TO ART.

Chicago, March 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wish to express my admiration to Anne Ellis for the beautiful description of the painting "Alone" by Duverger, reproduced in THE TRIBUNE. There are perhaps many who feel like she does, but I think very few are able to put it into words. Anne Ellis is certainly a poet and a gifted woman. I also wish to thank THE TRIBUNE for reproducing those paintings. They are instructive for many and they refresh the memory of others. MME. EUGENE MARIN,

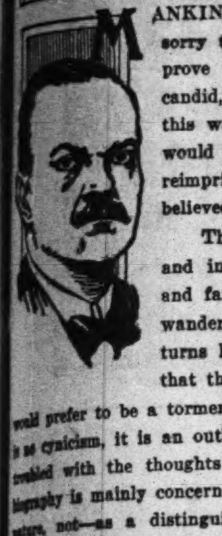
MELODRAMA

By Edward Goldbeck



MANKIND is again divided into angels and demons, I am sorry to say. Ask the Teutons, ask the allies, they will prove to you that they and their friends are white and candid, the enemies black and infamous. This is one of this war's fallacies which, if it were generally accepted, would reëntangle us in a superannuated controversy and reimprison us in an error which we—alas! erroneously—believed to be dismissed forever.

The Puritans held that human nature was essentially and inherently bad. When Bunyan, the inspired tinker and famous author of the Christian "Robinson Crusoe," wanders on the road, Satan calls him "so loud" that he turns his head over his shoulder. As a youth he wishes that there were no hell or that he could be a devil. He would prefer to be a tormentor rather than to be tormented himself. But this is no cynicism, it is an outburst of anguish, as he is constantly "afflicted and troubled with the thoughts of the fearful torments of hell fire." His autobiography is mainly concerned with the absolute and unalterable evil of human nature, not—as a distinguished critic says—"the sense of man's feebleness and perversity such as has always been the theme of pagan and Christian moralists, but an immediate realization of sin as bearing with it the threat of eternal punishment." His life is an endless wrestling with the fiendish power and to a human being of our times it is terrible to realize what such a life must have been, compared to the peace of smug indifference which most of us enjoy. The medieval mind itself seems hell, or at least purgatory, to us, and we can understand that Goethe speaks with undisguised hatred of Savonarola whose zealotism darkened the last years of Botticelli. In Duerer's etchings we can see tortured medieval imagination at work.

THE Pilgrims brought these vagaries over to the new country. Here is a quotation from Nathaniel Mather's diary: "When very young I went astray from God and my mind was altogether taken with vanities and follies, such as the remembrance of them doth greatly abase my soul within me. Of the manifold sins which then I was guilty of, none so shocks upon me as that being very young I was whittling on the Sabbath day, and for fear of being seen I did so behind the door. A great reproach of God! a specimen of that Atheism that I brought into the world with me!"

It is a long way from this diary to the record of a modern baby-bandit, and to compare both makes you doubt a little whether the progress of civilization and the purification of the soul are one and the same, as those people seem to think who are wont to rave about our "enlightened" times. But, please, remark the words: "the Atheism that I brought into the world with me!" They show the conviction that man is originally bad; he can only be saved by God's mercy. The life of our ancestors is a trembling walk with God and a young man, celebrated for his piety, notes down in his diary: "I was in the suburbs of hell all day."

Those men and women actually believed "that the devils were walking about our streets with lengthened chains, making a dreadful noise in our ears and brimstone was making a horrid and a hellish stench in our nostrils." We all have heard about the New England tragedy with its persecutions of Satan, its witchery courts, and the mania of flagellation of the soul which in many cases ended in suicide.

HUMAN nature was considered thoroughly bad then, and only through punishment and mortification might it be saved. It might; there was no sure way to salvation. Man was deemed at the same time free and predestined and thousands racked their brains to solve this unsolvable problem. You probably know Sam Lawson's comment on Parson Simpson's service: "Wal," said Sam, "Parson Simpson's a smart man; but I tell ye, it's kind o' discouragin'. Why, he said our state and condition by natur' was just like this. We was clean down in a well fifty feet deep, and the sides all round nothin' but glare ice; but we was under immediate obligations to get out, 'cause we was free, voluntary agents. But nobody ever had got out, and nobody would, unless the Lord reached down and took 'em. And whether he would or not nobody could tell; it was all sovereignty. He said there wa'nt one in 100, not one in 1,000—not one in 10,000—that would be saved. Lord massy, says I to myself, ef thet's so they're any of 'em welcome to my chance. And so I kind o' ris up and come out."

This is excellent humor, but woe to the people who worked at these theological subtleties ingenuously and seriously. They soon found themselves on the road to melancholy or insanity. The conscience of the tender minded degenerated into morbidity; the coarse grained ones developed and observed a dry and dreary legalism, a meaningless worship of ecclesiastical rules. But the doctrine of inherent badness appealed to all those who suffered from the dualism of God and man, who probed their own souls and discovered abysses in themselves. It found an echo in the words of a famous Frenchman: "I do not know what the heart of a criminal may be like, but I know the heart of an honest man: it is something terrible."

THE pendulum had to swing back. Action is followed by reaction, thesis answered by antithesis. So Rousseau came and assured the world that human nature was essentially good and only depraved by society and its institutions. This was illogical: if human nature was essentially good, society, the work of man, would have been good, too, but Rousseau did not care for logic, his forte was emotion. He made his theories to suit his own needs. Being very vain, he stated that man was originally good. But as he could not but see the low and despicable instincts which were at work in himself, he burdened "society" with them. Like Strindberg, he has done nothing in all his works but explain his own character. He was immensely interesting to himself and therefore he was interesting to the world, which is very likely to take us at our own valuation, particularly if we are equipped, as Rousseau was, with the magic of style and the accent of sincerity.

Rousseau proclaims that man in the condition of the savage was neither good nor bad and had no virtues nor vices. He had only "pity, that natural sentiment." "Pity," he says, "in the condition of nature keeps the place of laws, customs, and virtues, with this advantage, that nobody is tempted to disobey its sweet voice." It is astonishing that such silly buncombe could enlist any followers. The feeling of primitive man when he met a fellow being was the wish to eat him and the fear to be eaten himself. This is exactly what the belligerent nations feel today, and if the fundamental feeling of primitive man had been pity or sympathy, there would never have been any wars. Jules Lemaitre says about Rousseau's first book that its tremendous success and far reaching influence is one of the strongest demonstrations of the stupidity of mankind. But who were the disciples of this maniac? In France: Chateaubriand, Lamartine, Hugo, Musset, Sand, Michelet; in Germany: Goethe, Schiller, Kant, Schleiermacher; in England: Byron; in Russia: Tolstoi.

A good deal of the American civilization can be traced back to Rousseau's ideas. The leniency with which you treat criminals, the lack of discipline in your education is Rousselian, although, of course, not exclusively so. The doctrine that man is essentially good leads to shallowness, insipid self-satisfaction, and that sort of optimism which Schopenhauer has branded as "infamous." If you know that you are good, no self-examination, no repentance, no penance is necessary. The human heart has no dark depths, no secret paths; it is as flat as a pancake. The modern American has deserted Cotton Mather for Rousseau, puritanism for sentimentalism. The result is moral laxity, just as it was in Rousseau's personal practice.

IN the works of the French romanticists, we find these contrasts resurrected under the disguise of "le sublime" and "le grotesque," as Victor Hugo proclaimed them in his famous preface to "Cromwell," the manifesto of the romantic school. But we are tired of these antitheses which insult psychology and are refuted by every day observation. We believe that a human being is much more complicated and that even if the whole physical world should be reduced to one all-embracing, all-explaining formula, our soul would remain irreducible. We are neither "good" nor "bad," but a mixture of ingredients infinitely varied.

And it may be added that very few people know what they understand by "good" and "bad" and why they call "good" good and "bad" bad. The Puritans had at least the Bible, particularly the Old Testament, to guide them, but Rousseau had only his private inspiration, which nobody else is bound to acknowledge as authoritative, and most of us modern human beings live in Doubting Castle, to quote Bunyan once more. The belief that some people are good, others bad, some elect, others reprobate, leads to fanaticism, and fanaticism is the most dangerous foe to progress. The belief that none of us is reproachless, none abject, fosters tolerance, or what is better, respect for one's fellow beings. So let us give the enemy what is due him. The head of the Berlin university, Prof. von Wilamowitz-Möllendorf, has admonished his students to be fair to the other nations.

If we want a lasting peace, we must foster this spirit; treaties cannot guarantee it. As it is, we are still deep in melodrama. The hero hither, the villain thither. It is really too primitive to divide mankind into sons of light and limbs of Satan. Let us acknowledge that we all are human.

THE GAYEST CITY IN EUROPE

By an Englishwoman.

LIVING here in Bucharest, I find it difficult to realize that the most appalling catastrophe the world has ever seen is shaking the very foundations of Europe. Bucharest is certainly at the present moment the gayest capital on the continent. Amazing as it may seem, the luxury loving Roumanians are more recklessly extravagant than ever in their pursuit of pleasure.

Theaters, music halls, ballrooms, cinemas, and places of amusement of every description are crowded every night. In fashionable and expensive restaurants champagne flows to the fascinating strains of the delightful gypsy orchestras. In casinos gold is thrown away with a carelessness that makes one gasp; superb cars roll up and down the Calea Victoria bearing lovely, laughing women exquisitely dressed.

On every side one sees luxury, dissipation, extravagance, and—indifference. We foreigners look on with awe and amazement at the spectacle of this joyous crowd dancing madly round the edge of an active volcano.

The fact that their country may at any moment be forced into the deadly struggle does not seem to trouble the minds of the Bucharest people. Beyond loud rejoicings every time the allies gain an advantage over the Teutons the Roumanians do not manifest any very great interest in the great war.

Like other neutral countries, Roumania has been greatly enriched by the war, for her wheat, maize, benzine, petroleum, etc., are in great demand in spite of the very high prices asked and the heavy taxes the government has put on all exports—taxes which have to be paid in gold.

The buyers are Austria and Germany, and need forces them to pay the price. So long as Roumania has corn to sell the Germans will not be reduced to famine.

During the month of January the British government bought up a quantity of Roumanian wheat, having suddenly awakened to this fact. This was such a serious blow to the central powers that Germany actually protested officially against the sale as being a hostile act. But M. Costinescu, the capable finance minister, remained firm and the affair was definitely concluded.

If England had bought up long ago all the wheat this country had to dispose of the blockade would have been more efficacious and our brave men nearer to their goal.

Another source of wealth for Roumania at present is the propaganda which the Germans spread throughout the country. No effort is too great, no price too high, to win her over to their side.

Their spies and agents are swarming everywhere. Bribery and corruption are rife. Many formerly respected and well known men not over blessed with this world's goods have sold their consciences and gained huge sums of money by writing articles favorable to Germany in the various newspapers founded or bought up for the purpose. Others (and they are more numerous), hitherto obscure, have set themselves up comfortably for the rest of their lives by selling their services to the propaganda committee.

The government is cautious and M. Bratianu astute enough to keep on good terms with both sides; he cleverly parries the extraordinary insolence of the German ambassador, for he does not want an ultimatum till he is quite prepared for it.

Almost the entire population of Roumania is for the allies and does not hesitate to show it openly.

Both the hated legations have had their windows smashed once, and on account of the hostile manifestations which have taken place from time to time they are strongly guarded day and night by policemen and soldiers, the latter being permanently quartered in the back premises ready for emergencies.

The two ministers seldom appear in public. Their newspapers, of which five are printed in Roumanian and two in German, are boycotted by the public, though large numbers of them are distributed gratis all over the town.

Exasperated by the insolence of the German edited paper Zina, the students recently turned out in groups and seized all the copies they could lay their hands on and burned them in the open places. This done, they marched off, singing patriotic songs and the "Marseillaise," to the publishing offices and demolished everything they could find.

The German colony in Bucharest is very large and important, and owing to the influence and protection of the late King Carol I. (born Prince Carl of Hohenzollern), and more particularly to the active interest taken in it by Queen Elizabeth (Princess zu Wied), has prospered greatly. Besides a fine church there are splendid schools for both boys and girls, various clubs (vereins), ballrooms, a sanitarium run by "deaconesses," and innumerable shops, some of which rank among the best in Bucharest. The few factories to be found in Roumania are nearly all German.

Though Roumania is at present enjoying a period of exceptional prosperity, the misery of the lower classes is very great on account of the excessive rise in the price of everything owing to the war.

Being entirely an agricultural country, almost everything one requires has to be imported save natural products. The few factories cannot work owing to the lack of raw materials, though one or two are working for the army. The British cotton mills have had to be closed for want of cotton. In fact, the lack of cotton goods is getting serious; calico is scarce; a reel of sewing cotton costs 1s. 3d. and a cotton frock is dearer than a silk one.

Woolen goods are at fabulous prices, footwear also. Salad oil, olives, dried fruits, oranges, lemons, tea, coffee, and cocoa are only for the rich; lard, butter, soap, and candles are very expensive; all india rubber goods prohibitive, and rice so dear that if you were having some very select friends to dinner you would greatly impress them by having rice pudding on the menu.

Rents in Bucharest have been steadily going up for the last few years and have reached the climax. A small house composed of four rooms, a kitchen, with a little yard, costs about £100 per annum, while a pretty looking house with five decent sized rooms, kitchen, servant's bedroom, and garden costs £150 to £160 per annum. The rich live in their own fine mansions with every modern comfort, but the poor have often to pay £1 a month for one small room and a tiny kitchen.

The Roumanians are a light hearted, sociable race, extremely friendly, generous to a fault, and of proverbial hospitality. If frivolous, they are kind hearted and quick to sympathize, and life among them is in general very pleasant.

Their love of France is traditional; the upper classes speak French instead of Roumanian, read French books, wear French clothes, send their sons to study in Paris, and cultivate a French atmosphere in their homes.

Their hatred of Hungary, their secular enemy and the oppressor of their race in Transylvania, is intense, and the Roumanian army, which is semi-mobilized since the war broke out, is eager to join in the fray.

This state of armed neutrality cannot last very much longer, and the Austro-Germans themselves do not try to deceive themselves as to the intentions of Roumania; their violent speeches and threats prove that they are beginning to lose all hope of winning her to their side.

"OUR OLD GERMAN GOD"

By Robert Herrick

I HAVE often wondered about the nature of that "old German god" to whom the kaiser refers so confidently, so emotionally as the great ally of the German nation. He must surely be very different from the God that Christian peoples have thought they were worshiping for the last two thousand years; indeed, I fancy that the German ruler had in mind a private, special divinity, peculiarly devoted to his own people, one not shared by other alien peoples. Just as savage tribes cultivate special deities and bring their gods with them on their conquests, so the kaiser imagines improving the spiritual state of the world by inculcating reverence for his "old German god" in Paris, in London, in Rome, maybe in New York.

It was not until the other afternoon when I was listening to the "Rheingold" at the opera house that it flashed into my slow mind what the kaiser meant by his "old German god." When, in the second act, Wotan rose from his couch beside his spouse, the jealous Fricka, beneath the shadow of the lofty Gothic castle he had caused to be built for himself and his flock of gods and goddesses, and, perplexed, began to cast about in his mind how to evade payment of the stipulated price to the surly giants who had done the work for him I perceived where the kaiser got his inspiration. Wotan in a long red beard, with a flowing blue robe and the inevitable tapering spear—that was "our old German god!" To those who have not recently refreshed their memory of the conduct of Wotan (in the Wagnerian version) I will recount of the facts related in the play of this chief of German gods. In his desire to build his big castle Wotan has rashly promised the giants Fasoldt and Fafner his sister-in-law, the lovely Freia, goddess of love and joy, who keeps heaven smiling and rosy by her presence. When the uncouth giants waddle from the wings to claim their dues Wotan trys first to put them off by declaring that he never meant to give away the lovely Freia: it was all a joke. As this does not work with the simple giants—they threaten him with their big pine staves—he reconsiders and recollects his bargain. He even interferes with two uppish little gods who attempt to drive the giants away and makes a great play of being the god of justice. "A promise is a promise, etc." But privately he confesses to the bewildered gods that he is trusting to the wit of the clever Loki, who has gone forth upon the earth to find something that the rude giants may be induced to accept in lieu of the precious Freia. Just as the two giants, weary of the palaver, are dragging off their prey the nimble Loki arrives and lays before them in words the lure of the Rheingold. Like other men after them the burly giants, torn between gold and woman, decide to await the arrival of the famous novelty, and in case Wotan can produce the Rheingold as represented to accept it instead of the fair goddess.

THEREUPON Wotan, in charge of the clever rascal Loki, descends into the bowels of the earth, discovers where the gnome Alberich keeps his treasures, and by a petty piece of pure knavery gets possession not merely of the coveted gold but of the magic wishing cap and the magic ring as well. It is a plain holdup, and Alberich naturally delivers himself of a few curses, letting the audience know what he thinks of a god like Herr Wotan. Although Alberich himself stole his wealth, one sympathizes with him rather than with the two high handed buccaneers from heaven. Back the precious pair mount to their home, which is now in cloudy gloom because of Freia's temporary absence. They preceed on the arrival of the pair of giants to count out the gold in order to get their beloved love out of pawn. But even now Wotan cannot play fair: he tries first to hold out the Tarnhelm (magic wishing cap) and reluctantly yields it on the demand of the giants. But the magic ring he has no intention of giving up. The episode is as follows:

> "But Fafner answered: 'Not at all my friend!
> Still gleams on Wotnn's finger a gold ring.
> Bring that and fill this crevice tight and full.'
> Great Wotan cried: 'What! Give this ring to you?'
> And Loki said: 'Let me advise you fools!
> That ring belongs to daughters of the Rhine,
> And Wotan merely keeps to give it back.'
> But Wotan interrupted: 'Hold thy speech!
> This prize that I so hardly, dearly won,
> Fearless shall I reserve unto myself.'
> Said Loki: 'Then my promise holds not good
> That I have given to the sorrowing nymphs!'
> And Wotan spoke: 'Thy promise binds me not.
> The ring is mine—my booty it shall be.'"

That godlike assertion of Wotan, "Thy promise binds me not," has a familiar ring to it. It smacks of the famous "scrap of paper" theory of morals.

Wotan wrangles with the giants over the ring, and in the end permits them to carry off the fair Freia in spite of all entreaties from Fricka, Freia, and others to yield, so infatuated is the old god with his ill gotten trinket. Hereupon Erda, mother of gods, rises in sepulcral white from the earth, and with sepulcral tones warns Wotan that he is going too far. It appears that Erda knows a great deal more about things than Wotan himself and much impressed by the awful fate he is running into he most reluctantly gives in. "We buy again," says he, "immortal youth and joy!" but sadly feels, "A shameful price I pay for these my lofty castle halls!" (Like many a smaller Wotan who has tried to build him a big house.) With foreboding in his heart that the gods must eventually give way to a nobler, freer race he leads his flock over the rainbow bridge into Nibelheim.

NOT on the whole a noble god! Nor does Wotan appear to better advantage in the succeeding episodes of the Wagnerian cycle. In the next chapter he is engaged in a shameful dispute with his incensed spouse, and is forced by the fiery Fricka to permit the death of his Volsung son because the latter has committed incest with a sister. More humiliation, he must punish his dear Valkyr Brünhilde for attempting to carry out the secret wishes of Wotan's own heart! In spite of his lordly words of farewell when he puts her to sleep within the circle of fire, Wotan plays no god's part here. In "Siegfried" he appears as the Wanderer, a Wotan grown very old and not venerable. He is muddled about himself and his position in the universe: the world is plainly too much for him. When he tries to oppose the will of his own hero Siegfried in doing what Wotan hoped Siegfried would do, his famous spear is cut in two and with a flash of stage lightning, the roll of stage thunder, Wotan's utter deposition as first god is announced.

Of course, Nietzsche, who inspired Wagner's arrangement of the old sagas, had no great reverence for gods and intentionally makes Wotan play a mean part of miserable pretense and bluff. But there is more to Wotan than Nietzsche's diabolic version of him: he has the form and the accent of that "old German god." It was not Nietzsche that the kaiser was thinking of: it was the ancient sagas in whom the great god Wotan was hero, an early protagonist of Kaiser Wilhelm himself.

One sees that this Wotan is a most limited god—doubtful of his own powers though an arrant boaster, fearful of the future, afraid of what the other gods and demigods may be thinking and doing to upset his rule. Always the talker, at times capable of spectacular feats of godlike power, he wavers at crucial moments, listens to fortune tellers' tales, and in general has little confidence in himself. One thinks of a supreme god as possessing three great attributes, not one of which Wotan exemplifies—power, justice, mercy. Wotan is driven by a fate beyond his own control, is cruel and mean and knavish in his acts, and rules simply for his own personal aggrandizement. Of such stuff no enduring god can be made.

BUT the worst thing about Wotan is his parochialism, his tribal quality. He is fighting for his own hand, for his flock of gods and his irregular family. He seems to have no conception of the world at large except as a fearful place where ultimately he will be worsted. Now any god worth maintaining as a national deity must have about him something universal, must be a god in power and intelligence beyond the confines of his own state. There I think is betrayed the weakness not only of old Wotan but also of the kaiser's understanding of what gods should be. A special, local divinity is not worth reverencing. If a god cannot extend his personality beyond his own tribe he is scarcely worth appealing to. Possibly the kaiser is uneasily conscious that a universal Jehovah could not be expected to countenance his raid upon the liberties of the world and patriotically is seeking to substitute a more local, personal, and national deity under whose protection his armies may fight. Just as the Germans have felt compelled to give up French names for their dishes, to eschew French fashions and English wares, they now feel morally bound to reject any god who might have an interest in an enemy's subjects, who was not a mere partisan.

The weakness, the pathos of such a position, is too evident to need discussion. It is the weakness, the pathos, of the whole German contention—their attempt to set up a private special world all German in the midst of our larger world. It is very lonely, living outside the common world, and it must be getting lonelier as the months pass and it becomes more evident than no considerable portion of the outside world will ever come under the rule of that "old German god."

G.B.S. REPLIES

By G. Bernard Shaw

The following letter was written by Mr. Shaw to the London Daily News following the appearance of a letter by Mr. Bennett in that paper on the English prime minister:

IN Mr. Arnold Bennett's defense of the prime minister he says: "Mr. Shaw's political hostility to Mr. Asquith is no secret." This is a very significant admission. I have all sorts of pleasant personal reasons for shirking the expression of that political hostility, and, in fact, I have shirked it more often than I could easily justify. If my hostility is no secret, it is not because I have led a campaign against Mr. Asquith; it is simply an inevitable inference from Mr. Asquith's anti-liberal imperialism and my socialistic republicanism.

The puzzle in the matter is that Mr. Bennett, who could easily fill two columns of the Daily News with the points on which he agrees with me, fills them instead with an attempt to find points on which he agrees with Mr. Asquith. And the net result is that he does not agree with Mr. Asquith on any point, and disagrees with him on several which I did not mention.

He gives examples of mistakes made by Mr. Asquith, and says he could cite others, but concludes that the apparent mistakes may ultimately prove to have been masterpieces of active statesmanship. But why does he not give me the benefit of this very obliging defense? He cannot say that it does not fit my case; it fits anybody's case—the kaiser's, for instance, or Lord Northcliffe's.

The solution of the puzzle is obvious. "Mr. Asquith," says Mr. Bennett, "has been characteristically and rightly English." Mr. Bennett need not quarrel with me over that; did I not say that Mr. Asquith is the man for England? He makes Mr. Bennett happy. And Mr. Bennett describes that as a magnificent quality. It certainly is magnificent, but it is not la guerre. It is not even politics.

I would rather have the worst prime minister held to account for his measures than the best prime minister placed above criticism. The spectacle of Mr. Bennett writing an admirable article on the importance of education, and boldly telling our jingoes that they will be unable to capture German trade for want of it, fills me with hope and joy.

The spectacle of Mr. Asquith replying to the article by dismissing the museums deputation with contempt does not fill me with anything; it was so completely expected that it did not even amuse me. But when Mr. Bennett immediately kisses Mr. Asquith's hand and, like the American poet falling at the feet of liberty, rapturously exclaims, "Though thou slay me I will trust in thee," I look on with a concern which is too deep to admit of any merely personal indignation at having been kicked by Mr. Bennett for backing him up.

I am not an Englishman, and, like all Anglophile foreigners, I hold that the English lack of common sense is often supplied by a vital sense, which serves them better. But it is clear that the moment England herself trusts to this she is lost, for it leads to laziness and nothing else. Education, democracy, liberty, equality, fraternity may be all wrong, but there is a case for them, and I want to hear Mr. Asquith's case for repudiating them before, like Mr. Bennett, I cease to be Socialist, Liberal, Conservative, independent thinker, Anglophile, or anything else, and become pure Asquithite, crying, "'My prime minister, right or wrong!'"

But why should Mr. Asquith, with the war on his shoulders, stop to explain himself to me? To him fellows like Shaw and Bennett are negligible; if one of them attacks him the other will defend him out of pure contrariness. And who cares, anyhow, about ideologues who would give the order to cease firing half a minute earlier every evening for a whole week for the sake of having some money to waste on museums and pictures and the like unsubstantial trash?

At all events, I am answered as to my proposal of a coalition of the intelligentsia. Mr. Bennett has thrown the first tone; and, I daresay, his is only the first of a volley from the other Intelligents. If Mr. Asquith does not have me privately shot, as he has absolute power to do under the defense of the realm act, I shall have his magnanimity to thank, and not any support I am likely to get from my own side.

Therefore, I again eventure to appeal to Mr. Asquith to consider that the British empire contains only a very small percentage of Englishmen and that even this percentage is by no means exclusively or even largely made up of Midlander hearts of oak who adore him for standing on their corns. There are Scots and Jews, Welshmen and Irishmen, and strong strains of logical Latin blood, all tired of waiting and seeing (especially when there is nothing encouraging to see), and who will certainly not wait and worship in Mr. Bennett's way.

The suppression of news from the Clyde, for instance, does not mean that the Clyde has waited, or that Mr. Asquith has been strong enough to cope with its rebellion. And we are no longer on a volunteering basis as to the war. Mr. Asquith now says: "You MUST risk your life in the trenches," and the man who asks what advantage his death will be to his country will not be satisfied with claptrap for an answer.

And there are our allies and the neutrals, who do not believe that Mr. Asquith has no policy, and ascribe his reticence to the unfitness of the policy for publication. All the belligerents are bleeding to death; and assurances that our enemies are bleeding faster than we do not meet the case, because no sane person imagines that the death of an Englishman is a final gain to Germany or the death of a German a final gain to England.

If the whole population of Germany had been wiped out in 1913 by an earthquake, all Europe, including these islands, would have been the poorer; and the same Germans who send Zeppelins to drop bombs on London would have been dismayed, with good reason, if Ludgatehill had become an active volcano at the same time.

It is the paradox of war that self-preservation becomes suicide, and suicide self-preservation; and a statesman who loses sight of this for a moment may wreck an empire amid the applause of patriots of the type of Sir George Makgill.

And it is so difficult to believe that the importance of this paradox is within the grasp of a minister who cannot grasp the importance of a picture gallery that I wish Mr. Asquith would wake up, and not allow his lawyer-like contempt for the intelligence of the great British jury to carry him to the length of pretending to be more stupid or cynical than those who know him personally can possibly believe him to be.

WAR POEMS

By Herbert Asquith

Lieut. Herbert Asquith, second son of the prime minister of England, has published a volume of verse entitled "The Volunteer and Other Poems." Herewith are presented verses from two of his best poems:

Here lies a clerk who half his life had spent
Toiling at ledgers in a city gray,
Thinking that so his days would drift away
With no lance broken in life's tournament:
Yet ever 'twixt the books and his bright eyes
The gleaming eagles of the legions came,
And horsemen, charging under phantom skies,
Went thundering past beneath the oriflamme.

And now those waiting dreams are satisfied;
From twilight into spacious dawn he went;
His lance is broken; but he lies content
With that high hour in which he lived and died.
And, falling thus, he wants no recompense,
Who found his battle in the last resort;
Nor needs he any hearse to bear him hence
Who goes to join the men of Agincourt.

Hail! O Baby of the May
In the bubbling river bed,
Playing where the cannon play,
With the shrapnel overhead!
Sparkling in and flashing out
Through the eddies and the shallows,
With your feet among the trout,
With your head among the swallows;
While the wag-tails on the daisies
Lead you in the minuet,
Twinkling through the flow'ry mazes,
Baby, do you quite forget
That, with shrapnel overhead,
Other babes are put to bed?

FOREIGN CABLES WEAKEN WHEAT; CORN STRONGER

Big Receipts and Rains Southwest Check Buying—Canadian Season Late.

The wheat market was irregular yesterday. Prices rallied sharply on commission house buying after an initial decline, but later the advance was lost and prices closed ⅝@½c to ⅝c lower. Reports that Americans had lost their lives on vessels torpedoed abroad caused some selling. The reports to the effect the Germans would put in effect a general blockade of the British isles also had a bearish effect, although so far the allies have succeeded in keeping their ocean traffic comparatively free from interruption.

Weather conditions were more favorable in the southwest, where general rains were reported, but the continued cold and snowy weather northwest is causing much apprehension, as the land prepared for spring seeding is small compared to last year. Wet weather in April would increase the anxiety.

Cash Trade Is Slow.

The cash trade was not especially active and sample prices were not much changed. Local sales were 25,000 bu. Cables were unchanged. Liverpool cabled that freights were becoming easier. The heavy receipts at American points are not being ignored abroad, where it is felt the time for marketing the American surplus is becoming limited. Canadian reports were bearish on the old crop conditions, but were a little bullish on the new crop, as labor is said to be scarce, with an unusual amount of spring work necessary.

Commission houses were free sellers on the advance. Logan-Bryan and Raymond-Pynchon were good sellers. Van Ness and J. Rosenbaum bought wheat early. Local shorts covered on the advance. Receipts continue heavy, 187 cars here, with primary receipts of 1,000,000 bu, against 588,000 bu a year ago. For the week primary points had 7,907,000 bu, against 4,208,000 bu a year ago. Northwest receipts were 375 cars, compared to 123 cars a year ago. Winnipeg arrivals continue extremely heavy, 901 cars, against 267 cars a year ago. Clearances for the day were light at 374,000 bu. The flour trade at Minneapolis was reported a little more active. Stocks there decreased 5,000 bu for the day. Receipts of wheat at Chicago for the week were 2,540,000 bu and shipments were 2,112,000 bu a year ago.

Corn Shorts Best Buyers.

The covering movement in corn which started Friday was continued yesterday. Best prices of the day were shaded materially, but net gains of ⅛@¼c were established. Some of the shorts were disposed to get off the selling side, but there was aggressive selling on the rallies. The close of the cash market was firm, and sales were 90,000 bu. Country sales were reported light, and the cash demand was somewhat better.

Cables were unchanged, and while Argentine offers were moderate the cargo market was easier, affected by the lower freights. Weather conditions were unsettled, with rain or snow over a good part of the belt. Receipts were 88 cars, with primary receipts of 829,000 bu, against 433,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 186,000 bu. Buenos Aires was ⅛c higher. Primary receipts for the week were 5,113,000 bu, against 2,580,000 bu a year ago.

Oats Market Is Narrow.

The oats market was a comparatively narrow one. Prices finished easy, ¼@⅛c to ⅛@½c lower. September oats sold at 39c. Cash prices were a little firmer and there were sales of 145,000 bu. Cash houses were moderate buyers of oats. Receipts were 126 cars. Primary receipts were 683,000 bu, and for the week they were 3,960,000 bu, compared to 5,895,000 bu a year ago. The seaboard reported a slow demand for oats.

Provisions closed firm after a moderately active session.

Rye was strong, with No. 2 selling at 95½c. Receipts were four cars.

Barley held steady. Malting was quoted 69@75c and sold 69@72c; feed was quotable 60@63c, with sales at 62@63c; mixing was quoted 65@67c, and screenings 46@58c, with sales of the latter at 52@58c. Receipts, 26 cars.

Timothy seed was steady. March closed $8.25 bid and $8.50 asked, and cash lots were quoted $4.50@8.00 nominal. Cloverseed was unchanged, with cash lots $10.00@19.00 nominal.

Duluth flax closed 1@1½c higher. Cash on track, $2.16⅝@2.17⅝; May and July, $2.16⅝. Receipts were two cars. Minneapolis was 1c higher, with cash on track $2.16⅝@2.19⅝. Receipts, 21 cars. Winnipeg closed ⅝@1c higher, with May $1.94⅝ and July $1.95½. Receipts, 47 cars.

DULL DAY ON EXCHANGE.

New York, March 25.—Today's two hour session on the stock exchange was barren of interest. Trading was lighter and more narrow than usual and the heavy undertone was due to a combination of circumstances, including further adverse news from abroad and the customary week end settlement of open contracts by the professional element.

Prices were confusing at the outset, but became irregular later, closing with numerous net losses, none of which was specially substantial, except in the specialties, Studebaker, Crucible Steel, United States Industrial Alcohol, Mexican Petroleum, and Mercantile Marine preferred were lower by 1½ to 3 points, and such rails as Reading, New York Central, and Southern Pacific, which bolstered the session of the preceding day, averaged one point declines.

General Motors Recovers.

There were a few neutralizing features. For instance, General Motors, which made up some of its recent severe decline by an advance of 33 points to 485; Harvester corporation, which rose 4 points, and 1 to 3 points advances in Maxwell and Willys-Overland, the fertilizers, and American Writing Paper preferred.

United States Steel and other former leaders were altogether neglected when not under marked restraint. Dealings in Steel were exceeded by a half dozen other issues, some of which often fail of quotations for days at a time.

Foreign Exchange Irregular.

Foreign exchange rates were extremely irregular, francs making a slight recovery from yesterday, while sterling and marks eased, the latter, however, holding above the midweek's minimum.

Today's bond market was slightly irregular, with activity and firmness, however, in Anglo-French 5s. United States coupon 3s advanced ⅜ per cent on call during the week.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 25.—The stock market closed the week steadily confident. Rubber shares were active and home rails and Argentine issues showed increasing firmness, but in other directions trading was small. American securities were not affected by the commencement of the treasury borrowing scheme. Business was limited and the closing was dull.

Bar silver, 28⅝d per ounce; money, 4@4½ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 4⅞@4⅞ per cent. Three months, 4⅞@4⅞ per cent.

PARIS, March 25.—Prices were firm on the bourse today. Rentes, 63f 25c. Exchange on London, 28f 49½c.

Western Lumber Rates Increased.

Hogs sold at the highest prices of the week, being strong to 5c higher than on Friday, with tops at $10.00 and the bulk at $9.75@9.90. Receipts were posted at only 9,000 head, and included 3,200 direct to packers from an outside point. Offerings on sale found a prompt clearance at the prices and the market closed in a healthy condition.

Final prices made most hogs 15@20c higher than a week ago, while prime light weight animals were 25@30c higher. Pigs closed largely 25c lower for the week, the demand for them having been greatly curtailed the last few days. The average price of hogs this week was placed at $9.65, against $9.75 last week.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 1,500; Swift & Co., 1,000; Sulzberger & Sons, 700; Morris & Co., 800; Anglo-American, 1,000; Hammond, 800; Roberts & Oake, 300; Western Packing company, 1,200; Miller & Hart, 300; Independent Packing company, 1,200; Brennan Packing company, 1,000; butchers, 1,500; shippers, 2,500; total, 13,800; left over, 1,000.

CATTLE.

New March records were made by cattle values at Chicago this week, and the market closed in a strong position, with quotations 15@25c higher than a week ago on the bulk of the steers, cows, and heifers. Light receipts were responsible for the advanced prices, and reports indicating that fat cattle remaining on the farms are in strong hands engendered the bullish tone that pervaded the market. Traders do not look for any material increase in receipts for some time to come, and the expectancy is that further upturns will be made in prices before there is any permanent decline. Steers topped the week at $10.05, and the bulk made $8.50@9.60. A year ago the best price made was $8.80.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lambs had an irregular market this week, and final prices showed uneven changes as compared with a week ago. Lightweight lambs were largely 25c higher, and ewes showed an advance of 15@25c. Prime wethers and light yearlings were 10@15c higher. Heavy lambs and yearlings, on the other hand, were 15@25c lower, and heavy sheep showed uneven declines. Buyers displayed strong preference for lightweight animals throughout the week, and receivers had to make concessions to dispose of the heavyweight offerings. Lambs topped the week at $11.70, and wethers reached $9.35, the latter being a new high record. The average price of lambs this week, $11.30, also established a new record.

Conservative Realty Loans.

In the business of loaning money on real estate and selling the mortgages or bonds to investors the effects of competition are felt at both ends of each transaction. The first effect is the tendency to give borrowers better terms. If competition between loaners is severe not only is more money likely to be lent on a given piece of property but the rate of interest may be forced down. At the other end of the transaction competition has an opposite effect, for the loan which yields the highest rate and has the best security is the easiest to sell.

These two lines of competition strictly limit the activities of a bond or mortgage house. If it demanded too much from the borrower it could not make loans at all and if it demanded too little it could not sell the loans it made, while too many concessions to both sides would wipe out all profit.

The inevitable solution is in making such concessions to the borrower as will meet the least objection from the investor. If the interest rate is reduced the investor, of course, will find the loan less attractive, but if a slightly larger loan is made on the same property he is likely to accept this as a necessary concession. Such concessions are progressive, one leading to another still larger and the process continuing, unless checked, till a condition of unsoundness is reached. The bond or mortgage house can resist this process, but is powerless to stop it entirely. Only the investor can do that.

The essential difference between a conservative and a speculative investment is in the margin of security. If 85 per cent of the real value of a site and building is loaned on it and the property advances in value steadily, the loan will be paid. But if the property declines in value it will soon be worth less than the amount of the loan. If the investor insists on having conservative investments he will get them. The investor has the final decision.

Hart Schaffner & Marx.

J. D.—Hart Schaffner & Marx reported net profits of $1,287,505 in the year ended Nov. 30 last, being an increase of about 10 per cent as compared with the year previous. After paying $296,110 preferred dividends and $454,163 for the retirement of preferred shares, there remained a surplus of $547,232, equal to 3 2-3 per cent on the $15,000,000 of common stock. The common is owned almost entirely by members of the former partnership and no dividends on it have been reported.

Atlantic Steel.

J. F.—The Atlantic Steel company is a corporation formed last December to buy the plant of the Atlanta Steel company. Its capitalization is $1,000,000 6 per cent first mortgage bonds, $750,000 7 per cent preferred stock, and $1,000,000 common. The old company paid regular dividends on $185,000 of preferred stock, but nothing on common till 1914, when 2 per cent was paid, and the same in 1915. The new company intends to enlarge the plant, but evidently its bonds are not a seasoned investment.

Equipment Trusts.

T. B. M.—Equipment trust certificates enjoy a high investment rating when issued by railroads, because the railroad must have equipment, and, even if it becomes bankrupt, the receiver must pay interest and maturing equipment bonds in order to keep the road operating. Equipment trusts issued by a car leasing company enjoy no such security. The investor has merely what is, in effect, a chattel mortgage on the cars.

Brief Answers.

B. A. W., Shelbyville, Ill.—Pennsylvania railway stock is of $50 par value. Women evidently consider it a suitable investment, as a large proportion of the stockholders of record are women. The stock is "nearer the rails" than that of any other large railway system except the Canadian Pacific.

H. W. B.—The Takamine Ferment company is a close corporation, deriving its income from royalties for the use of a patent. It has $500,000 capital stock, shares of $4 par value, and has paid from 5 to 9 per cent a year in recent years.

A. S.—The only way to recover money you have paid for stock is to find some one who will buy your shares.

CHICAGO BANKS SHOW DECREASE IN 1915 PROFITS

Net Earnings of Larger Houses Drop 25 to 30 Per Cent—Due to Lower Rates.

Profits of Chicago banks in 1915 showed a falling off averaging from 25 to 30 per cent by the larger institutions, compared with the figures of 1914. The decreased earnings may be attributed to the falling interest rates, quotations changing from 5 to 7 per cent in 1914 to 6 to ⅜ per cent in 1915.

Money in the first half of 1914 was firm, around 5 per cent. The war pushed up rates to the legal limit, 7 per cent in Illinois. With the turn of the year there was a restoration of public confidence and an accompanying fall in rates, which after the middle of 1915 touched 2½ per cent and ruled generally at 3 per cent throughout the remainder of the year.

Gotham Bank Reserve Lower.

The New York bank statement showed a heavy decrease in demand deposits, $20,800,000. There was, however, an increase in time deposits of $4,000,000, so that the net loss was around $16,800,000. But the significant feature of the statement was a decrease of $7,132,100 in the surplus reserve. This brings that item down to $126,262,570. The loss in both cash and deposits, if continued for several week, should suggest firmer interest rates. The figures follow:

ACTUAL STATEMENT.

	March 25, 1916.	Decrease.
Loans	$3,355,966,000	$ 9,558,000
Net demand deposits	3,390,261,000	20,821,000
Net time deposits	100,554,000	*4,047,000
Circulation	31,627,000	61,000
Reserve in own vaults	474,025,000	14,500,000
Res. fed. res. banks	176,317,000	*5,972,000
Res. other deposit'ries	59,719,000	1,533,000
Aggregate reserve	710,061,000	10,061,000
Reserve required	583,798,430	2,928,890
Surplus	126,262,570	7,132,100

Of the reserve in vaults, $400,782,000 is specie.

*Increase.

Grand Trunk Would Keep Boats.

The Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, one of the railroads owning lake boats that was hit by the interstate commerce commission divorce order, has petitioned for a reopening of its case. The company operates three steam vessels, with a cargo capacity of 14,000 tons, between Depot Harbor on Georgian Bay and Chicago and Milwaukee. It has solicited aid from the large middle western shippers in its appeal, with considerable success. The Grank Trunk, although a foreign line, has worked in better harmony with the shippers than the national railroads. It is credited with thwarting a wiping out of the lake and rail differential by refusing to join with the home roads in [illegible] raising the rates from New York to Chicago from 62 cents to 70 cents at one jump. The Grand Trunk did not join in the increase in 1901 from 54 cents to 62 cents either.

Commerce Association Favorable.

The Chicago Association of Commerce and the board of trade, besides many of the large individual shippers in the west, are coöperating with the railroad. The new petition says that the road is willing to sell its boats for a fair price if the buyer will guarantee to maintain the service, but that no offer has been received, and if the railroad is not allowed to furnish it there will be no service and the lower rates for the shipments west of Depot Harbor. The tonnage in 1914 amounted to 348,727 tons, at rates lower than the 54 cents differential lake and rail tariff that the other lines maintained up until 1901, when the railroads got into control. The Rutland Transit company, the only line that competed with the Grand Trunk service, has sold its boats into the Atlantic trade.

Chicago Curb List Active.

The unlisted securities market continues active.

Butler Bros. has been in very good demand, advancing from 315 to sales as high as 325. Bucyrus common sold at 18 and was in good demand at that price. Chalmers Motor common remains steady at 160@[illegible]. Hart, Schaffner & Marx common is somewhat stronger, being in demand at [illegible], with offerings at 68. Moline Plow preferred was firm at 97 bid, offered at 98. Some activity took place in Reo Motor Car, sales being made as high as 35½ and closing at 33¾ bid, offered at 34¼. Reo Motor Truck was offered at 27, with buyers at 26. Sulzberger & Sons preferred has been active, selling at 97½, an advance of about 5 points. The market closed in strong demand at 96½, with light offerings at 97½.

U. S. Gypsum in Demand.

United States Gypsum common was in demand at 45, with light offerings at 46. The preferred remains unchanged at 100@[illegible]. Michigan Sugar common reacted from around 122 to 110. There is a very good underlying demand for this stock, the market closing at 112 bid, offered at [illegible]. The bid price of German-American [illegible] showed a small advance to 18. [illegible]-St. Louis common continues firm at [illegible]@10. By-Products Coke Corporation showed some reaction, declining from [illegible] to sales at 159. NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

The British treasury announced that it will initiate tomorrow its plan of borrowing American securities as formerly announced, and that it will accept through its agents in New York bonds contained in its list of 500 securities and will pay the owners ½ of 1 per cent over the interest rate. In New York banking circles the announcement is construed to mean that the British government has about exhausted its means of purchasing American securities outright in the English market, or else that it sees the end of the war in sight and is not disposed to further denude England of its foreign investments, and that it will confine its operations to borrowing the bonds, both in London and New York, and be able thus to exercise a better control over its future obligations.

Jame J. Hill is reported to have given an interview to appear in New York this morning in which he says the present volume of orders for war materials and other things now being purchased because of the war will cease abruptly as soon as the war ends. This situation will clear up the railroad freight blockade, he thinks. If Mr. Hill is correctly reported, the predicted situation after the war is one which the stock market has borne in mind for several months. It is when the war will end that affords consideration of most interest in the market.

Governors of the twelve federal reserve bank districts are scheduled to meet in Washington on April 12 to discuss with the federal reserve board the adoption of a standard clearing house system for the United States. The aim seems to be to develop a system under which checks may be cashed at par in any section of the country.

New York reported loan conditions more comfortable at the end of the week, due to the considerable cleaning up in the market. Brokers loans were nominally unchanged at 2½ to 3 per cent for sixty days, 2¾ to 3 per cent for ninety days, and 3 per cent for four, five, and six months.

Plans are announced by the National Tube company of an extension of its seamless tube plant at Elwood, Pa. This is the second increase in six months, and the improvements will represent an outlay of $1,500,000.

Stockholders of the Lee Rubber and Tire company are receiving notice that the temporary certificates for the stock are ready for exchange for the temporary receipts.

It is now announced that the directors of the American Zinc company will recommend the distribution of 10,000 shares of new preferred at a value of $25.

The $75,000,000 new Canadian government 5 per cent bond issue is reported oversubscribed.

BUTTE-DETROIT COPPER AND ZINC MINING COMPANY

AT 70 CENTS A SHARE

Capitalization, 2,500,000 Shares Par Value $1.00

Applications will be made for listing on Boston, New York and Detroit Markets

The Company has acquired control of the Ophir Mine and Mill, located in the heart of Butte, in which, it is believed, some of the largest copper and zinc ore bodies in Butte will be opened up at depth. The Ophir is equipped with a shaft down 1065 feet and has three miles of workings on the 100, 300, 400 and 500-foot levels, with a hoist capable of sinking to 2000 feet.

The Ophir property contains some of the strongest of the veins that have made the Butte camp the world's largest producer of copper, and Engineer Creden says it is in the same peripheral zone as the Butte & Superior property.

MINE MANAGEMENT

William L. Creden, E. M., Managing Director of the Company, will be in charge of the work in Butte. The property will be thoroughly developed and the shaft sunk to the 2000-foot level as rapidly as possible. A fund of $300,000 will be provided for the development of the property at depth. This sum is larger than the estimated cost of sinking the shaft an additional 1000 feet, at which depth Mr. Creden feels assured the veins will be found to contain rich ore bodies. While developing the copper-bearing veins Mr. Creden will also devote his energies to developing the possibilities of large zinc ore bodies, such as have been found in surrounding properties.

The fact that Mr. Creden has accepted the managing directorship of the Butte-Detroit Copper and Zinc Mining Company we regard as one of the best recommendations the property could have, and his expressed conviction that the Ophir will develop some of the largest copper and zinc ore bodies in Butte at depth makes the stock a most attractive speculation.

We strongly recommend the purchase of this stock because of its market possibilities, and also because of the confidence of Engineer Creden that with development at sufficient depth it will become one of the richest properties in the Butte Camp.

A Golden Opportunity for Copper Stockholders

The era of unprecedented prosperity that copper companies are now enjoying is being reflected by the majority of them in increased dividends and extra disbursements.

As a consequence, never in the history of the industry have investors had such an opportunity, as that presented at this time, to capitalize money put into copper securities, not alone from the standpoint of dividends, but market profits as well.

THE week's real estate market was not characterized by any particularly noteworthy transactions, as has been the case for several weeks past. There was a large volume of trading, as evidenced by the figures of the recorder's office, but the proportion of deals of even a fairly important character was relatively small.

The market was of a fairly broad character, taking in downtown, outside business, flat, residence, factory, and acre property, but they were all represented by comparatively unimportant transactions.

Probably the most notable feature of the week was the large number of building projects involver, as has been the case during many weeks past, in which practically everything but downtown buildings and residences were represented. The ease with which builders can secure exceedingly full loans, running up to 70, 80, and even 100 per cent in some instances, according to report, is undoubtedly largely responsible for this activity, despite the fact the cost of materials is on an average of about 15 per cent higher than a year ago.

Only One Downtown Deal.

The only downtown deal reported was the sale by Edward Hoffman to Francis A. Hardy of the property at 825-27 South Wabash avenue for an indicated consideration of $90,000, subject to an incumbrance of $75,000. The lot fronts 40 feet with a depth of 180 feet and is improved with a six story and basement sprinkled mill building, covering 40x150 feet.

It formerly was occupied by the Imperial Wall Paper company, but has been unoccupied since 1914. The building is to be remodeled after plans by Mundie & Jense, as it is Mr. Hardy's purpose to divide the space and rent the stores and lofts separately. White & Tabor were the brokers in the transaction and will have charge of the property.

Both Sales and Renting Dull.

Dullness continues to be the dominating note in the downtown district, both in a sales as well as renting way, although it seems to be the consensus of opinion the situation is slowly changing for the better as the result of the improved general business conditions.

There are many vacant stores, however, particularly in certain sections, and, save in exceptional cases, leases show considerable reductions as compared with a year or two ago. As one leading broker expressed it: "Merchants were either paying too high rents two years ago, or business was much better than now, as it is becoming a recognized fact that save in a few favored localities merchants cannot pay the rents they did at the previous date."

10 Per Cent Rule Increases.

There seems to be a growing acceptance of the idea that rents based on about 10 per cent of the gross sales of merchants approximate as nearly as possible to fair conditions for both lessor and lessee, and the custom is growing steadily, according to report.

In some instances a fixed sum is agreed upon for the annual rental, with the understanding that a certain percentage of increase is to be made provided the sales exceed a certain sum.

The office building situation is far from satisfactory, although fairly good conditions are reported in many of the better known buildings of recognised high standing. Of much interest and suggestiveness is the report that many of the older buildings are quite well rented, contrary to a generally accepted belief.

The explanation is that because of the business depression the lower rents of the older buildings appeal strongly to many people who do not feel they can afford the high rents demanded in the newer and better class of buildings.

ARCHITECT BUYS VACANT.

W. W. Alschlager of John Alschlager & Son, architects, bought from Charles A. Flodin the 150x150 feet of vacant at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Hollywood avenues for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. The sale was negotiated by Isadore Whiteson. It is stated that G H. Gottschalk & Co., builders, have the general contract for the construction of an eighteen apartment building to cost $160,000. In this connection the purchaser ha secured a loan of $120,000, seven years, at 5½ per cent.

John C. Hayes sold to Hubert E. Howard 65x178 feet of vacant in Pratt boulevard, near the lake, for a reported consideration of $20,000. It is stated the purchaser plans the erection of a twenty-four apartment building of two, three, four, and five rooms, to cost about $100,000. The sale was negotiated by J. M. McDonald.

William Pickel bought from Sam Brown et al., 133x145 feet in Winthrop avenue, 83 feet south of Lawrence avenue, for an indicated consideration of $20,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000. It is understood the purchaser plans to improve with apartment buildings, and in this connection has secured a loan of $85,000, six years, at 6 per cent.

MEDIUM PRICED FLATS ACTIVE ALL OVER CITY

South Side Sale, Largest Deal Reported, Carries Consideration of $200,000.

As was the case during the previous week, there was not much doing of a particularly important character in apartment house property, although there was a large movement in medium priced properties, with considerations running from about $30,000 to $75,000. There practically was nothing of an important character in residence property, which has been making a good showing during the last few weeks.

In point of magnitude the sale of the Tyson, formerly the Del Monte apartment building, at the northeast corner of Grand boulevard and Forty-third street, held first place. The building, which was erected by former Judge Peter S. Grosscup about World's fair times, is an eight story structure with a four story annex on the east and occupies a lot fronting 130 feet on the boulevard and 150 feet on Forty-third street.

It contains three stores and seventy apartments of one to seven rooms. It was conveyed by William C. Connett, president of the Mountain Valley Water Company of Illinois, to Mrs. Margaret Henry, wife of Rupert J. Henry, for an indicated consideration of $200,000, subject to an incumbrance of $100,000.

Trades a Fruit Farm.

The grantee conveyed in exchange for the equity Brandview fruit and stock ranch at Brandville, Mo., in the Ozarks. It contains a 300 acre orchard. The north 50 feet of the boulevard lot is vacant. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of about $40,000. An undivided half interest in the Tyson property was subsequently conveyed by Mrs. Henry to Nellis L. Sessions. W. K. Young & Bro. were the brokers in both transactions.

The twenty-one flat building at the northeast corner of Oglesby avenue and Seventieth place, one block from the South Shore station, with 125x127 feet of ground, was sold by Elizabeth Hackel to Ben E. Dyer for an indicated consideration of $72,000, subject to $43,000 incumbrance. Phillips & Co. represented both parties.

Sells Six Flat Building.

Sherman T. Cooper sold to Edwin B. Mayer and Helen Mayer Oppenheim the high grade six flat building at the northwest corner of Forty-ninth street and Ellis avenue and the three flat building at 4747 Drexel boulevard for a reported $95,000, subject to $50,000 incumbrance. Mr. Cooper took in part payment the residence property at 4250 Drexel boulevard at $12,000 and the six flat building at 3140-42 Prairie avenue, valued at $18,000, and other property. William O. Logan was the broker.

H. H. and W. H. Banford sold to O. C. S. Olsen the high grade twelve flat building on 50x150 feet of ground at the northwest corner of Columbia and Lakewood avenues for an indicated consideration of $52,000, subject to $25,000, taking in part payment 150x100 feet of vacant at the northwest corner of Kedzie boulevard and Palmer street, for $20,000. They will improve with a twenty-four flat building to cost about $100,000.

State Bank of Chicago, trustee for Charles H. Nix, sold to William H. Regnery the flat building, lot 100x111 feet, southwest corner of Forty-seventh street and Greenwood avenue, for a reported $55,000, subject to $30,000. S. C. Iverson of Hibbard Porter & Bro. was broker.

Other sales of the week follow:

M. J. Howard to Patrick Kehoe, flat property northeast corner Monticello and Wilson avenues, lot 64x125 feet, indicated $68,500, subject to $62,500.

Sherman Taylor to Mrs. Theresa A. Pease, wife of James A. Pease, flat property, 62x107 feet, Pine Grove avenue, 166 feet south of Belmont, west front, indicated $36,000, clear.

Mary S. Thayer to Israel Cohen, flat property, southwest corner Maplewood and Sunnyside avenues, 60x125 feet, for indicated $40,750, subject to $27,750.

De Forrest A. Matteson et al. to John Francis, high grade three flat building, 37x110 feet, at 434 Diversey parkway, for indicated $38,000, subject to $18,000. Sellers took in part payment the three flat building at 650 Grace street at $20,000. S. H. Newman, broker.

Mrs. Selma F. Holst to Abraham Lewis, the high grade six flat building at 930-932 Ainslie street, for reported $36,000. J. G. Sackheim and, E. B. Kendall & Co. brokers.

H. M. Dillon to Marshall E. Clifton, flat property, northeast corner of Princeton avenue and Seventy-third street, 60x127 feet, indicated $52,000, subject to $36,000.

Fred Yuenger to John J. Mahoney, six flat, 3942-44 Jackson boulevard, 50x121 feet, for indicated $30,000, subject to $15,000. Albert J. Tobey & Co., brokers.

Leases and Loans.

There was nothing of special moment last week either in the way of leases or loans, although in the aggregate a fair showing was made. The loans were of a generally mediocre character, so far as importance or significance is concerned, being practically all building loans with 6 per cent interest rate.

As indicated previously the tendency of the market is toward firmness, which is indicated by the smaller number of 5 and 5½ per cent loans on outside property which are being made or filed for record. There is plenty of 5½ per cent money where a liberal margin is furnished by the borrower, but the latter as a rule is looking for a 70 or 80 per cent loan, or even more, in many cases, and, of course, has to, and is willing to, pay the 6 per cent exacted for this class of loans. The strengthening character of the market is especially evidenced in the practical disappearance of 5 per cent loans on outside property, where several weeks ago a considerable number of this class of loans were being made.

The feature of the week in the way of leases in the business district was the series reported by E. F. Keebler & Co., which are stated to represent rentals aggregating $600,000. The most important was the lease by Harriet Isham Carpenter, wife of Federal Judge George A. Carpenter, and Katherine Isham Farwell, wife of John A. Farwell, of the three story and basement building at 318-20 South State street, in the block between Jackson boulevard and Van Buren street, for ten years and one month from April 1 at a term rent of $130,000. The lessees, whose names are withheld, will, it is stated, expend $25,000 in alterations and improvements and will occupy the entire building.

The same brokers leased from B. J. Reynolds, representing the Van Buren and State Street company, to the Standard brewery an "L" shaped store, northwest corner State and Van Buren streets, for ten years from May 1 at a term rent of $100,000; also for David Mayer to A. Mathias to the second, third, and fourth floors, 60x100 feet, at 404-12 South State street for thirteen years from May 1 at a term rent of $78,000, $10,000 to be expended by lessees in improvements; also for Ben Roth to the Comfort Confectionery company of New York the store at 70 West Randolph street for ten years and two months at a term rent of $76,250; also for John R. Thompson to the United Cigar Stores company the store northeast corner Clark and Van Buren for five years from May 1 at a term rent of $35,000; for David Mayer a renewal of lease in corner store in Goddard building, Wabash and Monroe, at an annual rent of $6,000.

They also leased for Elger & Bro to Barrett & Crowe, lawyers, space on the tenth floor of the new Cunard building, Dearborn and Randolph streets, for ten years at a term rent of $16,200; also to Bynum & Maher, lawyers, space on twelfth floor same building for ten years at term rent of $16,000; for Groomes & Elson to Jacob Karpass a store at 83 West Randolph at annual rent of $3,300; for Wilhelmine Keebler to Thomas Zimmerman a store in the Keebler building, northwest corner Thirty-first street and Wentworth avenue, for ten years at term rent of $15,000, and for Philippina Corper to H. S. Wright one story building, southwest corner Clark and Montrose boulevard, for ten years from May 1, 1917, at term rent of $20,000.

An interesting lease in the downtown district was reported by John R. Magill & Co. in the lease for Mrs. Anna L. Sears to the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing society of Boston, Mass., of the store at 21 West Jackson boulevard for six years from May 1 next at a term rent of approximately $60,000. The premises will be occupied by the lessees for the retailing of books, magazines, and Sunday school supplies and a general western office. The same brokers report the lease to the Otto Heinemann Phonograph Supply company of New York City of space on the third floor of the same building, and also to the Foley & Williams Piano company.

The most notable loan of the week was one of $100,000 made by the Northern Trust company, trustee, to Landon Hoyt on the property in Twenty-first street 131 feet west of Michigan avenue, lot 106x200 feet, north front, with new business improvements. The loan, which runs for five years, is of a noteworthy character for the reason the interest rate is 5 per cent, which is getting to be something of a rarity in outside loans.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $100,000, ten years at 5½ per cent, to the Weller Manufacturing company on the property at the southwest corner of Kostner avenue and Cortland street.

The same trust company is also trustee in a loan of $85,000, six years at 6 per cent, to William Pickel on the 133x145 feet of ground in Winthrop avenue eighty-three feet south of Lawrence avenue, being improved with a large apartment building.

It is also trustee in a loan of $50,000 six years at 6 per cent, to Hiram De Camp on the property in Ashland avenue, 280 feet south of Ainslie street, 100x165 feet, with new flat improvements.

W.H.DUNN LUNCHEON TALKER

William H. Dunn, president of the Dunn Manufacturing company, will be the speaker at Tuesday's weekly luncheon of the Cook county real estate board, his subject being "Children and Real Estate." The board will hold no luncheons either on April 4 or 11.

17 ACRE TRACT BRINGS $72,000

Calumet District Factory Site Only Sale of Importance Reported.

There was only one acre sale of any moment reported or filed for record during the week, that covering the sale of a tract of seventeen acres in the Calumet district, which is said to have been acquired in the interest of a large manufacturing concern.

The deal covered the sale of two parcels on the south side of the Calumet river, between Torrence and Carondelet avenues, for a reported consideration of $72,000. Both were sold by the E. L. Hedstrom heirs, while title was taken by John M. Cameron, an attorney, for the manufacturing concern in question, the identity of which is withheld for the present. The piece on the river, lying north of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and comprising nearly twelve and one-half acres, was sold for $62,000, or at the rate of $5,000 an acre.

Brings $2,000 an Acre.

The other piece, which is just to the south, extending to the right of way of the Calumet and Western railroad, and which comprises five acres, was sold at the rate of $2,000 an acre, or $10,000, making the total consideration $72,000.

It is not known that the company has any immediate plans for improvement, but it is understood the purchase was made with the view of improving at some time in the comparatively near future. Charles O. Goss of E. A. Cummings & Co. negotiated the sale.

Newman Transfers Holding.

J. Willard Newman, the attorney, who recently took title to the Fiftieth street frontage of the John J. Mitchell homestead at the southwest corner of Woodlawn avenue, 150x217 feet, north front, 147 feet west of Woodlawn avenue, has, in a deed filed for record, conveyed the same to Adolf R. Paulson for an indicated consideration of $35,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. It is understood the land, together with the Woodlawn avenue frontage, is to be improved with high grade apartments.

The property at the northeast corner of Central and Bloomingdale avenues, 609x125 feet, and other property, have been conveyed by Frederick Wilde to Anna F. Crane for an indicated consideration of $35,000, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000.

SUBDIVIDERS SEE GOOD YEAR

The success which has attended the operations of McIntosh Bros. in connection with their Midlothian Manor subdivision, at Midlothian, eighteen miles from Chicago, on the Rock Island road, has encouraged subdividers to believe that an unusually good year is ahead. The subdivision, comprising 120 acres, was placed on the market only about four weeks ago, and in spite of the backward season the managers report the sale of about fifty-two acres, the half acre lots being particularly in demand. They sell from $180 up. Last Sunday there were about 150 people on the grounds and the sales exceeded $7,500.

FLATS CONTINUE TO LEAD IN NEW BUILDING PLANS

Jobbing Company to Have a $100,000 Home in Manufacturing District.

Apartment buildings did not have a monopoly of the new building projects reported during the week, although, as has been the case for months, they represented the bulk of the various announcements.

One notable project of a business character was the announcement of the proposed new $100,000 building to be erected in the Central Manufacturing district by John A. Spoor and Arthur G. Leonard, trustees, for the Northern Jobbing company, which will occupy it under a twenty-five year lease on a 5 and 8 per cent basis.

The building, 114x100 feet, ground dimensions, will be on a lot 309.4x120 feet, east front, on Loomis place, running 120 feet west to the Chicago Junction railway, which will serve it. It will be five stories and high basement and of mill construction, except for the coffee roasting plant on the top floor, which will be of steel construction.

Term Rent $280,000.

It will contain 68,400 square feet of floor space, and will include a refrigerating plant and a large humidor in the basement. The term rent is estimated at $280,000 gross, and it is stated it is the first unit of what is expected will be an extensive plant, the second building, of the same or larger size, to be constructed within eighteen months.

The company is now in the Terminal Warehouse building, to which it moved eighteen months ago from 1000 South Canal street, where it occupied less than 2,000 square feet of floor space. The lease contains an option of purchase which, it is stated, is almost certain to be exercised. Hodge & Chandler were the brokers, E. E. Poronto, industrial agent of the district, representing the trustees.

New Theater Building.

An important building project in the Hyde Park district is involved in the sale by Harris, Kusel & Co. to Lubliner & Trinz of the leasehold interest in the 200x161 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Garfield boulevard and Michigan avenue. The lessors are to build and sell to the lessees a structure to cost, it is stated, about $150,000. It will contain a ,000 seat theater, one of the largest in the city on one floor, five stores, eleven shops, and eighteen apartments.

A big forty-eight apartment building to cost about $150,000 is to be erected by Maurice M. Robinson on East Forty-ninth street on ground which has just been purchased from Mrs. Anna Sinton Taft, wife of Charles P. Taft. The lot, 80x269 feet, north front, is 220 feet west of Drexel boulevard, and was sold for an indicated consideration of $12,000.

OUTER BUSINESS PROPERTY SLOW

Few Deals of Importance Reported in Week's Trading.

Outside business property did not make a particularly good showing. The transactions were few in number and, with one or two exceptions, of a generally unimportant character.

One of the most interesting was a long term ground lease of the property at 6239 South Halsted street, lot 24x124 feet, improved with a three story stone front building. The property was leased by Louise Hess to Moses and Maurice J. Lyon, liquor dealers, for a term of ninety-nine years at an annual rent of $2,500 for the first ten years, $2,750 for the next ten, and $3,000 for the remainder of the term, the average being about $2,950, or 5 per cent on $59,000, which is at the rate of $2,475 a front foot. The lessees have purchased the building for $4,600. Harry M. Engelstein & Bro. were the brokers. The new owners plan to remodel the building extensively.

Good Deal on South Side.

Another notable deal in the outlying south side was the sale by J. M. Browarsky to Gustav A. Reich of the property at the northeast corner of Stony Island avenue and Sixty-ninth street, 72x112 feet, for a reported consideration of $55,000, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000. The lot is now being improved with a store, flat, and office building. It is next to the South Shore Theater block, and much of the space is said to have been leased.

Record was made of the transfer by the Crown Novelty company to George S. Carrington of Glencoe, of the property at 413-17 Hermitage avenue, near the southeast corner of Van Buren street, 60x125 feet, and 25x112 feet at 1719 West Van Buren street, with factory improvements, for an indicated consideration of $45,500.

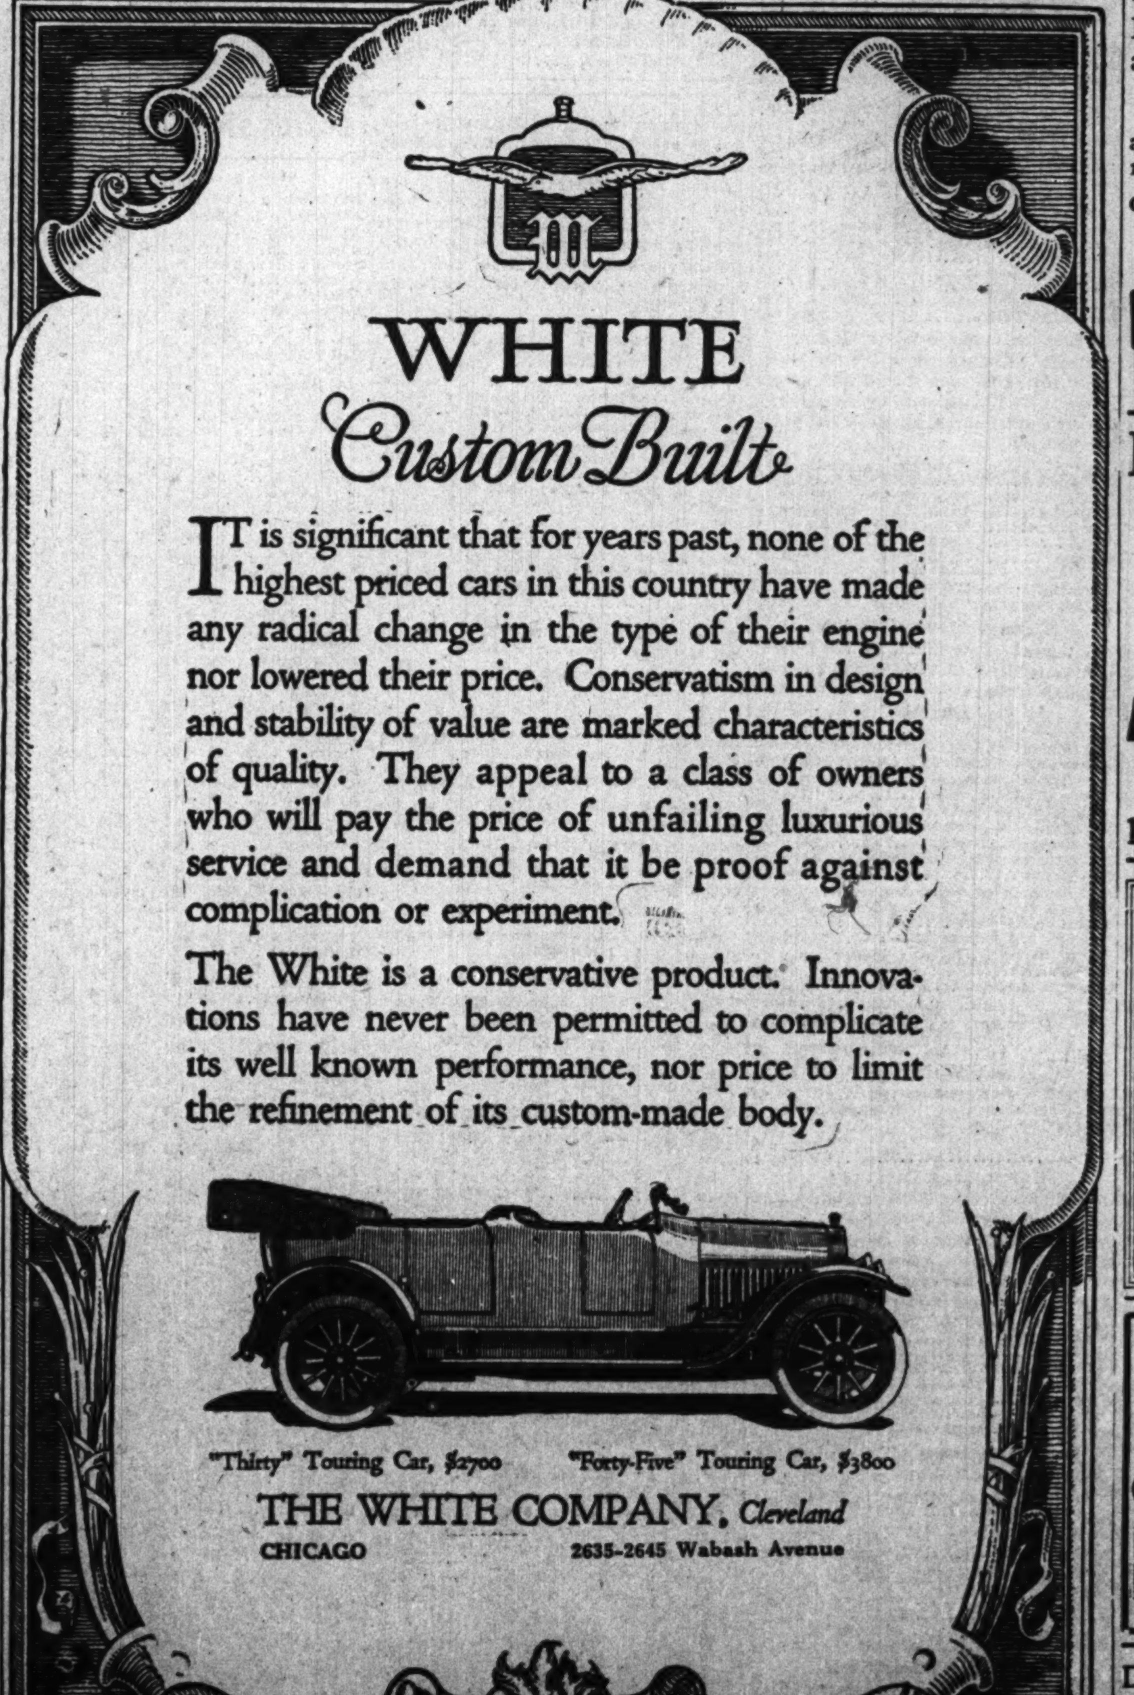
Canal Street Site Sold.

There was also filed for record the transfer by Mary Fitzpatrick to Lee Cohn of the property in Canal street, 59 feet south of Polk street, east front, 118x150 feet, with brick improvements, for an indicated consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $48,500.

Record was made of the sale by Solomon Darmstadter to Paul C. Loeber of the property at the southwest corner of West End and Crawford avenues, 225x150 feet, for an expressed consideration of $25,000.

COURT AUTHORIZES TRUSTEE TO SELL PROPERTY IN LOOP.

William T. Church, trustee under the will of Walter S. Williams, deceased, has been authorized by Judge Baldwin to sell the property at 106-12 South Wabash avenue, fifty-three feet south of Monroe street, east front, for $350,000, subject to an incumbrance of $90,000. The property fronts forty-seven feet with a depth of eighty-five feet and is improved with a seven story and basement building. The action of the court was in compliance with a petition of the trustee for the construction of the will.



WHITE
Custom Built

IT is significant that for years past, none of the highest priced cars in this country have made any radical change in the type of their engine nor lowered their price. Conservatism in design and stability of value are marked characteristics of quality. They appeal to a class of owners who will pay the price of unfailing luxurious service and demand that it be proof against complication or experiment.

The White is a conservative product. Innovations have never been permitted to complicate its well known performance, nor price to limit the refinement of its custom-made body.

JESS WILLARD BEATS FRANK MORAN

WILLARD FAILS TO USE K. O. PUNCH, SAYS COBB

Self-Restraint Best Policy, Seems to Be Champion's Idea of Boxing.

PLUCK MORAN ASSET.

BY IRVIN S. COBB.

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—At this hour the present champion is still the present champion.

The fight being over, that cardinal fact stands out. Otherwise by my humble way of thinking, this affair wasn't worth the money. Considered as a spectacle, it was all it should be; considered as a prize fight, it failed to give satisfaction to anybody except Moran. The sharps will hand the decision to Willard. So do I, even though much of the time he didn't seem to be trying. But they are saying now, when it's all over, that he crumpled up a bone in his right hand in the third round.

Willard Fails to Use Punch.

Personaly speaking, two things stand out in my mind as the main factors in the bout. Willard had the punch, and didn't use it. Moran had the pluck and he used it. I like Moran's grit, but if they ever do it over again I shall write my ticket on Willard.

"Meanwhile, in my mind's eyes a picture will endure—the picture of Moran in the last minute of the milling, his head bloodied but unbowed, striving with all his might to swing one over, and Willard, rearing above him life a giraffe above a table, able, apparently to land the hardest blow since the year of the big wind in Ireland, but for reasons best known to himself, not doing so. Maybe a champion doesn't have to extend himself. Anyhow, this one didn't. But he gets $53,600, so, perhaps, after all, self-restraint pays best.

Happenings of a Night.

Let us begin the story of this thing chronologically. It is 8 o'clock tonight. They have started the first preliminary, which is just one of those preliminary bouts. Under the 15,000 candle power focus of the Peter Cooper batteries, which are like long tubes of stained and bottled light, the two spindly unknowns whose job it is to open the most expensive show that New York has seen since the first boom in war stocks, are battering each other's front pieces under the languid eyes of a referee and a few gentlemen friends.

In that light their faces have the color of men drowned nine days, and where a gloved paw inflicts a small bruise upon the flesh the effect of the brilliance is instantly to change the skin from the texture of prime dressed beef to the shade tints of fresh calve's liver.

Little Interest in Preliminary.

Those already in their seats watch the commonplace progress of the opening skirmish. The rest are mainly concerned either finding their places and inserting themselves into the same. Because this great cave of the winds they call Madison Square garden is dark, except for the ring in the center and the white and red exit and entrance lights which mark off the mounting balconies with diamonds and rubies, spaced like studs in a gambler's shirt front, it is impossible from where we sit at the press benches to make out many of the faces in the boxes and tiers and aisles. But we know full well from what we saw getting in that everybody who is anybody in New York life is with us tonight. Those who go to make up physically this big town are on hand.

'Tis a Motley Crowd.

The climbers—two kinds, social and porch; all the more popular varieties of agents, including road, wine, and press; captains of industry, clubmen and club swingers, highbrows and anti-highbrows; scholars whose foreheads run up two floors, with a mezzanine landing atop of that; vapid youths of the gilded set hiding one pint heads under two quart hats; those whose names are familiar to all readers of "who's whosever," and those whose finger prints are among the most valued acquisitions of the Bertillon bureau at detective headquarters; millionaires and men who pawned their other shirt to pay the gate fee; actors, authors, dramatists—they are all here, sitting cheek by jowl beneath the stratified layers of blue cigar smoke rising up to the roof rafters above us.

Many Women See Fight.

There are women here, too, plenty of women, more women, they say, than ever before came to see a set-to of professional fisticuffs anywhere in the continent of North America. And the women, too, represent all the social divisions and subdivisions into which women are portioned off; altogether, one may state without fear of contradiction, that it looks like a big night.

It is 8:30 by my wrist. The second preliminary bout is now in its last stages. The two youths are attracting almost as much general attention as one liverwurst in a large delicatessen store would attract. Nobody on the premises has any thought for them; everybody is waiting for the main sausages. One of the young ones gets enough and more than enough. From the looks of his pouting lips he got most of it on his mouth. He quits to the accompaniment of a few languid cheers and a few perfunctory hisses.

Thousands Crowd Into Garden.

Bout number three is being vouchsafed us, the hour being 8:45 and the garden now fuller of expectant humanity than it has been in many long blue moons.

Above the stain of upholstered fists upon pink human meat one hears much financial gossip. For instance, one gentleman, presumably a relative of Charley Chaplin or an ammunition dealer, is reported to have paid a scalper $900 for a box containing six small chairs. And he won't be permitted to take the chairs away with him, either.

It takes a championship fight to properly restore prosperity, doesn't it?

Me lad in the green breech cloth and the 98 cent pair of tennis shoes claims a foul. The referee disqualifies the boy in the neat white panties, and a murmur of sound runs round the great packed oblong of the amphitheater. This sound betokens either approval or disapproval of the official judgment. It all depends on how one's own sympathies in the matter lean.

Levinsky Stops Savage.

For the semi-final Jim Savage meets Battling Levinsky. Both of these are large, rugged persons and evidently citizens of consequence in their respective communities. They bear themselves as such and, besides, there is added proof in the shape of such cheering as did not greet the ambitious but practically anonymous gladiators who have preceded them.

Beforehand the announcer states this is Mr. Levinsky's tenth fight this month, leaving the impression in the minds of some that Mr. Levinsky must lead a distracted home life. Be that as it may, he presently files Mr. Savage away for future reference. It isn't a knockout, for Savage lasted the sixth round out, but it might have been.

All Kinds of Quitter.

In the comparative calm which follows this result I overhear some one say that Mr. Savage has the reputation of being a quitter. I will only say this in passing. In my opinion this was the time when he didn't quit soon enough. Some men are born quitters, some quit of their own accord, and some have quitting thrust upon them as in this instance.

As the triumphant Mr. Levinsky departs I note for the first time that he wears his initials embroidered in his college colors and in large bright letters on his trunks. He may think he is a cozy corner pillow, but he doesn't deport himself as such in the ring.

After this ensues a short wait before the main event and to fill in the time a vocalist in a flannel shirt introduces a Mr. Rey Le Pearl, the singing blacksmith—isn't that a stylish name for a blacksmith?—who undertakes to render a patriotic air. The assemblage begs to differ with Mr. Le Pearl and he quits midway of the first verse.

No Place for a Tenor.

A daring tenor who follows him likewise encounters so much voluntary competition, especially from the upper gallery levels, that he likewise sees his way clear to shut off the melody. There is a third sweet singer, but he never starts even. It dawns on the management that this crowd didn't come to a concert.

Personally, I doubt whether Enrico Caruso could go very far in this assemblage. That is, unless he put on the gloves with somebody.

It's 9:40 and a howl that grows into a

AFTER THE BATTLE

JESS WILLARD.

THAT broken finger prevented me from stopping Moran early in the fight. I broke the finger early in the second round when I started an uppercut which landed on Moran's elbow. After that it must have been noticeable that I did not use my right much except for defense. My left, however, seemed to do enough damage. I was not in distress at any time, nor was I forced to extend myself. I found Moran easier than I expected. As I predicted before the fight Moran could not reach me. I must get the hand fixed up now. Have no idea what plans I will lay for the future.

FRANK MORAN.

I THINK I am entitled to the decision. If it had not been for me there would have been no fight. I did what fighting there was. That cut over the right eye was by a glancing blow which took the skin off. It stung. In fact, it was the only time during the fight that I was hurt. Willard is not a hard hitter. I took more punishment from Jack Johnson in four minutes than Willard gave me in the whole fight. Over a longer route I am sure I could win handily. I feel that I could keep right on going now.

CROWD OF 4,000 FANS SEES 'TRIBUNE' FLASH RETURNS OF BATTLE

Every member, seemingly, of that small minority of Chicago folk who could not afford the fare to New York and return journeyed as near as he could get last night to the northwest corner of Washington and Dearborn streets, there is to view THE TRIBUNE's electric light bulletins of the fight.

Although street car tracks at that corner and its vicinity are being repaired, a crowd of 4,000 people blocked the street at all points of vantage for the full thirty minutes from the time of the first bulletin:

"Society arrives at ringside."

The bulletins were flashed by electricity on a screen at the top of the building at the corner.

THE TRIBUNE telephone operating staff was pushed to its utmost endeavor by the number of calls from not-at-the-ringside fans.

The requests for information exceeded all previous records for any sporting event.

SMOKE OVERHANGS RING IN SPITE OF ORDINANCE.

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Joe Humphries, the clarion voiced anouncer, climbed through the ropes early and, raising his voice, spoke these words: "I wish to announce, I wish to announce, la-dies and gentle-men, the fire commissioner has prohibited smoking in this building. Please do not smoke."

Some observed the order; the majority did not. A thick pall of smoke hung over the ring.

DOCTOR FINDS WILLARD'S INDEX FINGER BROKEN.

New York, March 25.—Dr. Lewis Morris, who attended the champion at his hotel after the battle, said Willard had suffered a slight fracture of the joint of the first index finger of his right hand. He added that the big fellow otherwise was in good condition and that the injury to the finger would not trouble him more than a day or two.

There's Joy in Willard Home as Champion Defeats Moran

BY HARRIET FERRILL.

Mrs. Jess Willard passed through her second big fight for a world's championship last night. That is to say, she followed in suspense every blow of the champion heavyweight over the long distance, until the last victorious round, with her ear glued to the telephone in her residence at 1439 Pratt boulevard in Rogers Park.

"He won, as I expected he would. I never had the least doubt about it," she said.

"O, my papa is till the champion of the world," exclaimed Zella, the oldest daughter, hopping about on one foot in ecstasy after the good news had been received.

Mrs. Willard Happy Woman.

Mrs. Willard, who wore a loose robe and was constantly pulling her shawl about her shoulders, was almost as happy as Zella. Her dark beauty was radiant, although at present she is not in the best of health.

Long before the fight began in New York the relatives of Jess Willard had made preparations for the distant battle. Mrs. Willard had put Enid, the baby, to sleep and Jess Jr., who is past 2 years old, was persuaded to leave off his miniature combats as a boxer for the night. Frances, 5 years old, and Zella, 8, were given ermission to remain up after their bedtime—in honor of the exciting event in he household.

Fight Interferes with Plans.

The Willards, who recently moved to Rogers Park from Los Angeles, are merely having a makeshift at housekeeping for the present in their comfortable frame residence, with wide verandas and sunny windows. The big fight had interrupted and interfered with the furnishing of the place.

A Navajo rug in a "mountain prayer" pattern was spread as a welcome at the front door and a strip of red carpet extended down the corridor, which was bare of furniture, with the exception of a baby's carriage. The children's shoes were piled at the foot of the uncarpeted stairway. The reception room also was minus any pretense at extravagance in the way of easy chairs or rugs.

But their absence was not missed in the joyous house of Willard last night. Mrs. Marion Willard of Topeka, Kas., who came to encourage her sister-in-law with hope during the combat, assured every one that about the most important thing was Jess Willard's winning. Marion Willard is the oldest brother of the champion, who boasts that he is the only fighter in the family.

As a preparation for the suspense Mrs. Willard and her family took a long drive in her automobile in the afternoon.

To Celebrate Today.

Mrs. Willard waited for a long distance telephone message from her husband's own lips last night to learn his own account of his victory over Frank Moran. Today there will be some sort of celebration in the Willard household.

The police in Rogers Park expected a crowd to surround the Willard home, but when they got there found only a few reporters and photographers to disperse. The police sergeant called through the glass door, "Congratulations," and shook his hand to the family in a cordial greeting.

BIG BOUT DRAWS $151,254 GATE

New York, March 25.—Promoter Tex Rickard announced that the gate receipts amounted to $151,254. Of this amount the state received 7½ per cent of the gross receipts, which amounted to $11,344.05. Willard's share was $47,500 and Moran's $23,750.

Combined with the percentage taken by the state and the $7,500 paid for the rental of the garden, the expenses totaled $90,094.05.

To this must be added other expenses which probably will bring the total up to about $100,000, so that Tex Rickard and his partner in the entetrprise, Sam McCracken, will clear close to $50,000 profit on the bout.

BY ED. HILL.

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Jess Willard easily retained his title of champion puglilist of the world by outfighting Frank Moran in Madison Square garden tonight. He won despite the fact that he broke his right hand in the third round.

Willard was not merely too big and strong for Moran, he was vastly too clever. Round by round, he jabbed and uppercut his smaller opponent almost at will, although unable to land a knockout punch. Probably the first round—when Willard, much softer, fatter, and higher stomached than his friends would have had the public believe, was a little nervous—was even, but every other round was the giant cowboy's by a big margin.

Three Blows to Moran's One.

Willard not only landed three blows to every one scored by Moran, but he put more power into his drives. Moran, seemingly better trained, appeared to lack steam, to be deficient in sheer battering and hammering power. Never once did he seem to hurt Willard seriously. The prodigiously big conqueror of Jack Johnson was incessantly smiling and laughing, even at such few times as Moran was the aggressor. There was little of the typical bruiser about Willard. He seemed just an impossibly huge, good natured boy, actually refraining at times from battering Moran's poorly guarded face.

By no possible analysis could the result have been figured as anything but on overwhelming triumph for the champion. There were times when it seemed almost pitiful for Moran to keep charging into those pile driver fists of Willard's. Moran never had a chance. In twenty rounds, so the experts believed, Willard, given two good hands, would have beaten Moran insensible to the canvas.

Record Crowd at Bout.

More than 13,000 persons, the largest fight crowd ever gotten together indoors on Manhattan island, saw Willard's victory, although the great majority of them cheered for Moran. It was one of the most remarkable crowds ever gathered at a sporting event, consisting as it did of all sorts and conditions of men from statesmen and financiers and men of large affairs to the dregs of the town Women were there by the hundreds—at least 2,000, it was said—but they were not easy to find among vast banked tiers of men.

It was estimated that at least $150,000 was taken in from the ticket sale. Of this Willard received $47,500 and Moran $23,750. Each man earned his money, Moran particularly. What would have happened had not Willard broken his right hand can only be guessed; probably Moran would have been knocked out.

After the third round Willard used his left hand almost exclusively, jabbing with it, upper cutting with it, tearing Moran's face to ribbons, but Willard's right was practically useless.

No more courageous battle was ever fought than the yellow haired Moran made against tremendous odds. He weighed 201¼ to Willard's 259½. He stood 6 feet 1 inch to Willard's 6 feet 7 inches, but he wasn't daunted. He tore in like a wildcat, taking such punishment as few men have endured and kept on their feet. By the middle of the tenth round his left eye was gashed deeply, his nose was battered, his mouth was a swollen monstrosity. There was little human left about his face.

Challenger Takes Medicine.

In the seventh round the savage uppercuts that Willard drove to chin and jaw made him groggy and drove him to a clinch, but he weathered the evil moment and came back in the eighth round hungry for more punishment.

At most times during the thirty minutes of fighting Willard was the aggressor, forcing Moran to the ropes time after time. Willard fought standing straight up. Moran crouched awkwardly. Willard's blue eyes searched his opponent's constantly.

Referee Charley White, alert, quick-footed as a boy of 20 years, followed the fighters from point to point in the ring, his staccato commands ringing clear in the silence. "Break now—come on and box. Get away clean."

Obey Referee's Command.

White had little trouble with the two big men. Moran clinched a good deal towards the last, but he let go readily at White's sharp admonition. Willard was good natured all the way through.

FIGHT BY ROUNDS

FIRST ROUND—Willard jabbed Moran in the face with a left and Frank retaliated with three blows to the body which Willard partially blocked. Moran hooked a left to Willard's jaw and took three left jabs to the face in return. Moran swung right and left to Willard's neck and received a hard right on the body. Moran missed a right and went into a clinch, and Jess tore loose, landing right and left to the head. Willard smashed a terrific left to the face, dazing the challenger. Moran swung wildly with right and left, but Willard laughed as he blocked carefully. Willard's round.

SECOND ROUND—Willard took the aggressive, but Moran came back and they exchanged blow for blow. Frank broke ground and backed away. Willard followed Moran slowly around the ring and drove a right hook to Moran's eye, then battered him in the body. Moran was helpless against Willard in clinches. The champion staggered Moran with a left to the face as the bell rang. Willard's round.

SEVENTH ROUND—Willard started after Moran like a wild man and beat him all over the ring. Under the fusillade of blows, Moran was helpless, clinging to Willard blindly, as the blood poured down his chest. The champion fought coolly, picking his openings. White warned Moran against fouling. Moran swung wildly and catching Willard on the jaw, dazed him for a moment. The pair were fighting like wild men at the bell. Willard's round.

EIGHTH ROUND—Willard kept jabbing Moran in the face with his left and the latter was bleeding from a number of cuts. Moran swung two rights to Willard's jaw, and the champion appeared winded as he went to his corner. Honors even.

NINTH ROUND—Moran rushed from his corner landing right and left on Willard's neck. Jess used his left steadily. Moran scored two swings to the jaw, and repeated. Willard jabbed again and hooked a right to Moran's ribs. A left uppercut lifted the challenger off his feet. Moran swung to the jaw and Willard uppercut. They were clinched at the bell. It was an even round.

TENTH ROUND—They shook hands. Willard started by using his left jab almost exclusively. Moran swung a right to the jaw and left to the body. Willard battered Moran with rights and lefts, but the latter came back gamely. Willard uppercut Moran to the face and body. Moran swung right and left to the jaw and Willard retaliated. Willard caught Moran in a clinch and on the break was uppercutting with rights and lefts as the bell rang, terminating the bout. Willard's round and fight.

NOTABLES HOLD BOXES AT FIGHT

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—J. P. Morgan had a box seat close to the scene of action at Madison Square garden tonight. Nearby were Reginald Vanderbilt, Harry Payne Whitney, and Mayor Curley of Boston. Others near the ringside were Enrico Caruso, former Secretary of War Garrison, Charles F. Murphy, George M. Cohan, Diamond Jim Brady, Geraldine Farrar, Jay Gould, David Belasco, Russell Colt, John McCormack, Nat C. Goodwin, John Philip Souba, Allan Pinkerton, August Belmont, James A. Gilmore, Theodore P. Shonts, John K. Tener, Harrison Fisher, Howard C. Christy, Alan R. Hawley, Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, Mars Cassidy, A. E. Erlanger, and Joseph W. Harriman.

Manager Jones Claims Injury Occurred in the Third Round.

GIANT VERSUS PYGMY.

New York, March 25.
The decision of "The Tribune" representative is:
Jess Willard beats Frank Moran.
(Signed.) WILLIAM H. ROCAP.

BY WILLIAM H. ROCAP.

New York, March 25.—[Special.]—Jess Willard, product of the western plains, physical giant and heavyweight champion of the world, retained his title tonight at Madison Square garden. Frank Moran of Pittsburgh, a veritable pigmy in comparison, suffering a handicap of fifty-eight pounds in weight, five inches in height and corresponding reach, was his opponent.

When Willard had caught Moran repeatedly flush in the face with his left hand in the first round without a return and seemed able to hit him at will, the crowd of 13,000 fight fans looked for a knockout. But it never came. Why? Willard hit Moran often enough and on vulnerable spots. Moran at times had no defense. Then why did the bout go ten rounds?

Willard Breaks Hand.

These are questions which the sports are asking tonight. Tom Jones has answered them. He made a statement to the writer and his colleagues that Willard had broken his right hand during the bout. In which round? was quickly asked. The third, replied Jones. Come to the dressing room and see for yourself. In fifteen minutes the writer wormed his way to the dressing room, but a waiting limousine had flitted the champion away.

It was evident that Manager Jones in his excitement erred in naming the round, for trained eyes at the ringside recorded right hand uppercuts by the dozen in the intervening rounds between the third and seventh. In that session Willard bent every effort to win by a knockout. He rained left hand jabs on Moran's mouth, hooked him on the jaw with his left, and by way of variance he shot right hand uppercuts galore which landed on Moran's chin.

Punches Make Moran Groggy.

For the moment Moran was groggy. Willie Lewis yelled from the corner that Willard was hurt. It seemed to give Moran new inspiration. Thirty seconds before the bell ended the round Moran made a desperate rally. Half blinded by blood from a cut over his left eye, he tore in, swinging his right for Willard's jaw. Three blows landed flush on the vulnerable spot. They never feazed the champion. But for once he was wild.

Then it was patent to the initiated eye that something was wrong. He seemed to nurse his right hand. Late tonight the writers learned that he had broken a knuckle on the hand with which he had expected to send Moran to dreamland. The 13,000 sports left the Garden ignorant of the accident. No announcement was made In consequence Willard was the sufferer.

Fans Don't Know; Disappointed.

The died-in-the-wool sport who had paid $25 for a seat, coterie of professional men who had cheerfuly been separated from $200 for a box containing six seats, and hundreds of others were loud in their denunciation of the contest. They expected a knockout. That expectation was intensified after the first three rounds. As each round was tolled off and Moran was still on his feet their expectation turned to disappointment and they had no hesitancy giving vent to their displeasure.

But Willard's injury explained it all. It sort of placated matters. He won by a city block. And with one hand, too, for after the seventh round, when the writer discovered that he had but one hand for execution, he outboxed Moran three to one. In fact, in the ninth and tenth rounds he stabbed Moran as often as six times flush in the face without a return.

Moran Makes Desperate Spurt.

In the eight hround Moran, the quick thinker that he is, must have discovered that Willard's right was out of commission, for he sailed in and took a desperate chance. For the first time during the bout Willard was completely on the defensive. Moran was after him, swinging his right for body and jaw. He had Willard blocking and covering up. The champion was driven to the ropes in a neutral corner. Some of the blows he failed to block or duck.

Three rights landed flush on Willard's aw. They were sent out with all the force of 200 pounds back of them, but they never fazed Willard. The champion made a wild effort to fight back, but his left missed its intended mark, while his rights swished over Moran's head. This was Moran's round, the only one of the entire ten which he could be accredited with by any indisputable margin.

Crowd Delirous for Moment.

The crowd was delirious. It had a faint imagination of a new world's champion, but it flitted away as rapidly as it came. In the next two rounds, just to show his complete superiority over Moran, the champion stabbed him with his left almost at will. Several times he landed a half dozen lefts without a return, and also managed to keep his jaw outside the danger zone.

Neither man left the ring unmarked. Willard had a lump on his right forehead, a contusion on his left cheek bone, but escaped without a cut or even lacerated lips. Moran had a cut over his left eye and another on his left cheekbone.

Moran's left eye was completely in mourning while his lips were bleeding from the constant jabbing which he was forced to take. The physical advantage was too great for Moran to overcome. He fought a plucky contest against great odds, but the better man won.

Nearly a Riot at Garden.

It was only the arrival of two motion picture machine operators that prevented a small sized riot in front of the garden before the scrap. The huge crowd, which had been in line for two hours, was getting impatient and the police were finding it difficult to keep the ticket holders in line. The impatient ones in front were pushing forward when there was a sudden flash of light accompanied by the whir of the machines. Instead of carrying out its threat to batter down the doors the crowd pushed into the street to get into the picture. Madison Square garden was saved.

There was some delay in opening the doors. Thousands of chairs ordered for the occasion did not arrive until nearly 6 o'clock, the time the doors were supposed to open. It was 7:20 when everything was ready and the big amphitheater soon filled up. The police had difficulty in handling the enormous crowd, which was lined up for many squares.

"Deadline" Is Established.

A "deadline" was established two squares on each side of the garden and only those holding tickets were allowed to pass. It was estimated that 30,000 curious persons gathered near the scene of the conflict. Never before in the history of boxing were so many former gladiators of the ring among those present when the first preliminary was called. The boxers were lost in a maelstrom of ex-world champions, including the famous John L. Sullivan, Jim Corbett, and Bob Fitzsimmons.

Other celebrities were Kid McCoy, Abe Attel, Philadelphia Jawn O'Brien, Jack Skelly, Terry McGovern, and two heavily veiled women at the ringside.

"Masked Marvel" Females.

The mysterious females cautiously picked their way through the aisles, acting like two perfectly good masked marvels at an ice cream fête.

"Pipe the dames," said a special writer, who wore a tin ear, "they ain't got no right to be here if they dasen't show their faces. They must raise the curtains if they expect to see the big show tonight."

All efforts to learn their identities were futile.

The preliminaries drew scant applause, but the crowd, which refrained from smoking, was in good shape to enjoy the show when the main bout was called. Prior to the main bout there were four contests served up as appetizers. Three were scheduled as four round bouts, while the semi-windup was of six rounds.

Results of Preliminaries.

Nate Jackson of Oklahoma, 118, and Peter Slade, New York, 116, boxed an even contest. Young Marquard, New York, 116, beat Fred Mack of Newark, 123, in four fast rounds. Jimmy Murray, New York, 119¾, beat Charley Treyball, Chicago, 119, in three rounds, Treyball claiming he had been hit foul. Battling Levinsky of New York, 179, outboxed and outfought Jim Savage of Newark in five of six rounds. At 9:16 o'clock the preliminary program was completed.

STAKE RACES AT DETROIT DRAW LARGE ENTRY FIELD.

Detroit, Mich., March 25.—Headed by Peter Mac, often referred to as the fastest new trotter that any season ever had, the Merchants and Manufacturers' stake, principal event of Detroit's annual Grand circuit harness racing meeting, has an entry list of twenty horses, it was announced today.

The Board of Commerce stake, for pacers, has twenty-one entries; the Pontchartrain stake, for 2:15 trotters, has twenty-three; the Griswold stake, for 2:10 pacers, twenty-three, and the Wayne stake, for 3 year old trotters, sixteen. The whole list is considered a record breaker, both in size and quality.

Entries in the two leading stakes:

Merchants and Manufacturers' stake, $10,000, for 2:08 trotters—Ames Albingen, Konigton, Baselli, Dick Watts, Director Todd, Earlwood L., Guy Nella, Mabel Trask, Mr. Forbes, Omar, Peter Mac, Ruatcoat, Sadie S., Aprigan, St. Frisco, The Eno, Tramp Right, Vance, Virginia Karnette, Worthy Prince.

Board of Commerce stake, $5,000, for 2:06 pacers—Altawood, Ben Earl, Billy Dale, Del Rey, Fred Russell, Goldie C. X., Joe Patchen II., Lillian T., Miss Harris M., Peter Farren, Pat Carmody, Roan Hal, Sadie Densmore, St. Anthony Carter, Shipmaster, The Beaver, The Problem, The Savoy, Wilbur S., Whiteboy, Young Todd.

RIFLE MEN END SEASON; THREE SCORES PERFECT.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—The National Rifle association matches among high schools, in progress since Jan. 15, closed today. Aggregate scores will be announced next week. Scores for the final week were:

Iowa City, 969; Placer County High of Auburn, Cal., 965; Cedar Rapids, 961; Ogden, Utah, 960; District of Columbia Manual Training, 958; Warren, Pa., 951; Baltimore Polytechnic institute, 944; Salt Lake City, 941; Erasmus Hall, 928; Morris High, 919; Central High of Grand Rapids, 910; Sacramento High, 896.

In the matches in progress among college teams, Michigan Agricultural, Washington State, and Norwich made perfect scores of 1,000 this week. Other scores follow:

West Virginia, 997; Massachusetts Agricultural and Iowa State, 996 each; Vermont, 990; Cornell and Yale, 989 each; Idaho and Maine, 988 each; Princeton and Naval Academy, 987 each.

MRS. HURD LEADS GOLFERS.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 25.—Close play between Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, former national and British champion, and Mrs. R. H. Barlow, present united north and south champion, marked the qualifying round of the united north and south women's championship tournament today. Mrs. Hurd was low with 40—44—84, Mrs. Barlow getting 44—41—85. There were seventy-seven entries and all the first eight qualified under 100.

Northwestern Opens April 27.

Seattle, Wash., March 25.—The Northwestern league season will open April 27 with Butte at Seattle, Great Falls at Tacoma, and Vancouver at Spokane.

WILLARD HOLDS BACK K. O. PUNCH, SAYS IRVIN COBB

Self-Restraint the Best Policy, Seems to Be Champion's Idea of Boxing.

Niagara falls of sound goes up. Jess Willard, dressed in the conventional dressing gown, with red panties underneath, vaults over the white ropes and is in the ring, intrepidly facing a battery of infuriated photographers.

Noisy Greeting for Moran.

Moran comes in a minute later and the tumult doubles in volume. Side by side they line up before cameras, grinning cheerfully. Moran resembles a pink dreadnaught up ended, but Willard towers above him, a veritable mountain of meat. Each is accompanied by more trainers and camera men than there are pallbearers at a Tammany leader's funeral.

The preliminary announcements are made, the old time heroes, Jim Corbett, Kid McCoy, the immortal John L., old Bob Fitzsimmons, are all introduced in accordance with the ritualistic formula of high church fistiana. Charley White, the official referee, bald as the egg of the great auk and as self-possessed, apparently, as the last surviving stuffed museum specimen of that wholly extinct species, climbs into the squared space. Are we all set and ready? The answer is yes. We're off.

Cobb Gives Us Details.

FIRST ROUND—They are feeling about for each other and finding each other at home. Moran shoots forward under Willard's bulk, showing like a pestered piano mover working on the union scale and anxious to get the job in hand over before the whistle blows. They swap a few blows for technical description of some real expert reports, and Moran slugs hard and harder. Willard keeps as well covered up as though he were in bed with the quilts over his head. Then he laces out, his arms stretching like the limbs of a tall sycamore, and his glove strikes Moran's tawny topknot. The bell rings.

SECOND ROUND—I note what I take to be a rising invitation on Willard's part. He grins, but it is not a pleasant grin. They peddle wallops generously, and I think the round belongs to Willard. For further details of this round read the account of round one. That will save time for both of us.

THIRD ROUND—Willard wants to flirt and Moran wants to fight. Coquetting doesn't pay, for presently Moran, reaching high up under the giant's guard, lands a staggering lick on the map of Kansas worn as a face by Willard. He follows it with its twin. Willard gets really put out now and they slam each other briskly. Willard hits Moran a clout on the chin worth at least $2,500. Miscomputation is based on Willard's share of the purse. It jars Moran from stem to stern, or, perhaps I should say, from pit to dome. Anyhow it jars him. Moran lacks only two things as I see it—weight and height, but that's a good deal.

FOURTH ROUND—And it's all Willard's by my way of thinking. Moran is distressed, and I don't blame him. I'd be heartbroken. Just before the bell rings Willard strikes a blow which opens Moran's left eyebrow and half closes the eye itself. Red dye runs down his cheek, staining his pickled shoulders.

FIFTH ROUND—Moran, all bloody and bruised, shows the heart of a lion. He forces the fighting, but the wonderful blocking of the leviathan balks his most willing efforts. Willard returns the compliments with long, keen jabs, which rock Moran like a cradle. I think Moran will earn the money, no matter how much he gets.

SIXTH ROUND—I may be wrong, but I think I see something unpleasant coming. And it's coming Moran's way, or I am no judge, for Willard has got himself all mad. Protected by his superior altitude, he evades Moran's attempts to reach his skyscraping head. His jaw is safe by a margin of inches. He plays on Moran's sore eye until Moran grows wild. Moran has burst his leather glove casing, but he hasn't broken any other skin.

SEVENTH ROUND—I was right just now. This Willard man did lose his temper a minute ago. He falls on Moran like an animated avalanche, like a human landslide, like ten tons of brick. Moran suffers, but bears up. His nose is bleeding, his eyes, his ear. He hangs on head downward, falling, but falling inward. His face is a chunk of gory raw beef. But at the end he rallies and trades wallop for wallop. The trouble is he can't reach a vulnerable spot.

EIGHTH ROUND—There isn't a mark on Willard yet and Moran is a painted man—painted crimson. He lands a long swing on Willard's jaw and the big man's eyes blaze up and he wades in with fury in his looks. Yet it seems to me he is not doing his best or he would crush this tawny haired hellion.

NINTH ROUND—Moran just naturally jumps into his antagonist, almost overthrowing the referee in his rush. He smashes, then hangs on. His arms go over and around Willard's guard, but he puts one over which wipes the half angered, half derisive grin off the Kansan's face, for it lands on Willard's neck and jostles him. It is now that Moran splits Willard's cheek a little and the crowd whoops at the sight of new blood flowing. I call this round a standoff. This doesn't mean anybody else necessarily will agree with me.

TENTH AND LAST ROUND—And if I were Moran I would be very happy that it is the tenth. Moran starts one from away back yonder by old South Bend and his transcontinental flyer lands in Willard's stomach and almost shifts the center of population. Willard seems anxious to finish off his man, but somehow his blows lack steam. When the bell rings he is holding his weakened antagonist off at the length of his long twining arms and apparently trying for a knockout. But there is no knockout. The bell rings.

Results Disappoints Crowd.

The tall man almost unmarked and the lesser, pluckier man with his face hammered out of shape quit the ring. The crowd, very quiet now, files laboriously out. I figured it as a disappointed crowd. It craved a decisive climax for the last out and the show has ended with an almost quiet curtain. But one fact stands out. The present champion is still the present champion and Charley White is the prince of referees.

Frank Moran, Defeated Challenger for World's Title.

FIGHT ROOTERS HEAR RESULTS AT MAT SHOW

Old Time Fans Follow N. Y. Bout at Wrestling Program in C. A. A. Gymnasium.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

That boxing is still a popular sport with the members of the C. A. A., just as at the time when George Siler used to act as referee of the six round bouts in the Cherry Circle gymnasium, was shown last night when a capacity crowd saw the wrestling show and listened to the returns of the Willard-Moran fight.

One could hardly hear a pin drop when Joe Coffey read the results of each round. Following the reading the chatter would drown out the remarks of the nearest spectators.

Old Followers of Game.

Judges, politicians, and men prominent in every walk of life were seated around the ring. In adidtion the ham and egg wrestlers were around the roped arena to listen to the returns. The consensus of opinion among these personages—men who saw fights at Tattersall's, Battery D, and other places well known to the old followers of the game in Chicago, were elated when the final result was announced.

"It has been a long time since a crowd as large as tonight's gathering has been in this gymnasium," an old time fan said. "It remoinds me of the time we had George Siler to act as referee of fights in which Terry McGovern, Eddie Santry, Harry Forbes, Eddie Tancel, and other well known fighters exchanged punches for six rounds."

Double Attraction for Fans.

The gymnasium was packed with enthusiasts who not only wanted to hear the returns of the Willard-Moran fight but by mat fans, who came to see the semi-monthly wrestling show. The fans took a divided interest in the result of the wrestling bouts and fight.

In the main bout of the wrestling show Bill Hokuff defeated Jack Shear of Stanley, Wis., in straight falls. The winner, who hails from Omaha, Neb., and who has issued a challenge to Joe Stecher, won the first fall in 8:35 with a body scissors and wrist lock and the second in 8:43 with a double wrist lock.

Lou Talaber won from Charley Peterson in the semi-windup in straight falls. The winner won the first bout in 20:20 with a reverse nelson and the second in 10:48 with a double wrist lock.

Substitute for Pardello.

Young Chapelle won from Young Gardner in straight falls in the opener. Chapelle won the first fall in 12:33 with a body scissors and wrist lock and the second in 15:00 by means of the same holds.

The place of Leo Pardello, who was unable to appear against Paul Martinson because of a former engagement, was taken by Chief War Eagle. The Indian succumbed in straight falls. He lost the first in 6:55 with a wrist lock and body scissors and the second in 4:27 with a double wrist lock.

MYSTIC A. C. TAKES MEET.

In a dual meet last night at Chicago Hebrew institute the Mystic A. C. team defeated the Institute team, 57½ to 37½. Chris Stind of the Institute won the individual honors with firsts in the twenty-five yard dash and standing broad jump.

Stiehm Calls Football Men.

Bloomington, Ind., March 25.—E. O. Stiehm, the new Indiana university football coach, has announced that spring football practice will begin here on April 3. Stiehm is on his way to Lincoln, Neb., to complete arrangements for moving here.

"TRIBUNE" DECISIONS

AT MILWAUKEE—Billy Kramer beat Art Magirl (10.)

AT NEW YORK—Gus Christie beat Tommy Burke (10); Mike O'Dowd beat Terry Mitchell (8); Young Dominick beat Jerry Murphy (10); Myers Perkel beat Young Joe Dundee (10).

AT PHILADELPHIA—Jimmy Duffy beat Johnny O'Leary (6); Johnny Ritchie beat Andy Burns.

BLIND ATHLETES WIN MAT MEET

Kansas City, Mo., March 25.—That a blind person is the physical equal of an opponent with sight after the pair have come to grips was demonstrated in a wrestling match here last night, when wrestlers from the Kansas State School for the Blind defeated wrestlers with good sight in three bouts out of five.

The exhibition was arranged to show that the senses of feeling and hearing could be so trained that totally blind persons could engage in physical exercises.

The wrestlers were placed in the center of the ring and shook hands. The handshake informed the blind athlete of the position of his opponent, and with a rush the pair were locked. Once on the mat the sense of feeling was uppermost and sight became a secondary attribute.

The blind wrestlers were loyally supported by blind schoolmates in the audience. Persons with sight were seated so they told the eager fans just what was happening in the ring. So closely were the bouts followed that when a fall was secured the sightless ones knew all the holds taken and just how the shoulders were pinned to the mat.

FIGHTS MARK HOCKEY GAME.

Montreal, March 25.—In a game repeatedly interrupted by fights among players and onlookers, Montreal's Canadians tonight defeated the Portland (Ore.) Pacific Coast league winners, 6 to 3, in the Stanley cup hockey series, to decide the championship of America. Portland has won one game and the Canadians two thus far. Lalonde of the Montreal team and Johnson and Oatman of Portland were threatened with arrest by the police for battling with one another with sticks, skates, and fists.

DUFFY OUTFIGHTS O'LEARY.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 25.—[Special.]—Jimmy Duffy of New York City defeated Johnny O'Leary, lightweight champion of Canada, in six rounds tonight. Duffy excelled at infighting and had O'Leary tired when the bell rang. Andy Burns of Philadelphia lost to Johnny Ritchie of Chicago in six rounds.

Wabash "Y," 33; Emerson, 16.

Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A. won a lightweight basketball game from Emerson street "Y" tossers, 33 to 16, at the winner's gymnasium.

Training A. C., 38; Glen Ellyn, 5.

Training A. C. tossers won easily from the Glen Ellyn five, 38 to 5, at St. Francis hall. The losers were blanked in the second half.

MOB SURROUNDS GARDEN TO HEAR NEWS OF BATTLE

Ticketless Fans Flock to Scene of Fight to Get Quick Reports.

New York, March 25.—Thousands of fight-hungry men and women surged around Madison Square garden tonight, enviously craning their necks to watch the fraction of their number who were permitted to enter the historic building.

An impenetrable cordon of police, mounted and on foot, had been thrown around the garden hours before and only those who could show tickets were permitted to pass. Those who held the magic pasteboards were formed into what seemed endless lines stretching back from the entrances.

Late in Opening Doors.

When the doors were thrown open three-quarters of an hour after the expected time, the great throng, almost automatically, moved forward. It looked for a few minutes as if a panic would result, as hundreds tried to force their way in at the same time. It was a good natured multitude, however, and the police soon restored order.

Hundreds of stylishly gowned women and men in evening dress, who arrived in automobiles, were forced to leave their cars some distance from the garden. After struggling through the packed streets they had to form in line with the other ticket holders.

Scalpers Reap Harvest.

Speculators reaped a golden harvest. None of them appeared on the streets, but almost every store in the neighborhood held its quota of men who seemed well supplied with tickets.

Police officials declared the crowd the best behaved they ever had seen. Up to the time the fighters entered the building not a single arrest had been made.

Three hundred police raved, and slammed, and pushed, and pulled the 12,000 fight hungry fans at the doors of the garden long before 6 o'clock, when the doors were opened. There were at least 1,000 in line. The gates weren't opened until 7:30 o'clock, and by that time there were lines blocks long waiting, pushing, scrambling—and complaining—to get in.

At 8 o'clock several thousand were inside the big building. By this time society—with a big "S"—had begun to arrive. The women, for the most part, kept their low necked evening gowns covered by heavy coats, for it was just a trifle chilly in the hall.

Lozier Six

for the family of refined taste who demand elegance

THERE are cheaper cars on the market you can buy—and perhaps most of them are worth the price asked—but the Lozier Six is "For the Man Who Knows"—the man who demands luxury and conveniences for his family and guests—the man who has found from experience that the highest grade car is really the most economical car in the final analysis.

So to you, sir, this announcement is directed. The Lozier Six offers you a car that embodies a harmonious combination of mechanical perfection and true elegance. The outward appearance reflects the highest degree of beauty and gracefulness—the interior furnishings of the body suggest and render a luxuriousness of comfort so much sought after in the highest priced cars and so seldom attained—and in the power plant and other moving mechanism, here again the Lozier Six excels, if you will consider the speed of the car, the smoothness of the car, the flexibility of the motor and the method of operation, as well as the endurance and dependability. To fully appreciate the elegance, the comfort, and the easy-riding qualities, you must see and ride in the Lozier Six.

Immediate delivery after selection is made

Perhaps you know that just at this time there is a shortage of highest-priced cars and promises of prompt deliveries are not being made. With their usual foresight, the Lozier Factory has supplied us with Lozier Six models. We are, therefore, in a position to demonstrate the Lozier Six today, tomorrow, or at your earliest convenience, with the assurance that you can have your Lozier Six immediately, provided that you do not delay the demonstration.

The Lozier Six, Type 82, is a Seven-Passenger Touring Car, seating seven passengers easily, fully equipped, price $2775. The Limousine seats seven passengers comfortably, all facing forward, equal to or better in size and luxuriousness than the highest priced limousines you know, complete equipment, price $4,450.

Arrange to see the Lozier Six at once and then set the time for a demonstration.

FLYNN NEARING END OF CAREER AS TRIAL HORSE

Pueblo Fireman No Longer Able to Stand Blows of Heavy Aspirants.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Fifteen years ago Jim Flynn, who, throughout his ring career, has had "Pueblo fireman" attached to his fighting moniker, fought his first battle in his home town. He met a chap named Frank Chambers and scored a knockout in the fourth round with one of his overhand right swings.

That start was responsible for making Jim Flynn one of the notable fighters of the heavyweight division of pugilism. It made him decide to stick in the game and over the lapse of fifteen years he has been one of the leading glove wielders.

But that was the yesterday of boxing for this man Flynn, and as this yarn isn't written for the express purpose of eulogizing on the ring work of the Pueblo scrapper, we'll go right along and explain that it is written to inform the many fans that Flynn is "through." In the fifteen years that the Colorado heavyweight was performing before the public he put in just about as strenuous a time as any man who ever donned a padded mitt. How he managed to stand the hard knocks that were handed to him over that period of time is hard to figure out. But Flynn is one of those game boys and stood the gaff.

Iron Jaw Weakens.

But fifteen years of that kind of stuff has left its mark and Flynn today no longer is able to stand up before the younger heavyweights and take the hard wallops on the chin. A few years ago they called him the man with the iron jaw. Today his jaw no longer can stand the punches, and with this weakness the end, as far as Flynn is concerned in the ring, is marked by time and not much of it.

The beginning of the end of the Pueblo man came recently when he fought Jack Dillon of Indianapolis in a New York ring. Dillon is undoubtedly one of the most remarkable heavyweights who has fought since the good old days of Bob Fitzsimmons, for the Hoosier weighs only 170 pounds. He gave Flynn about fifteen pounds in avoirdupois and an awful lacing in every one of the ten rounds contested. Flynn never had a chance to stem the tide of defeat which always was bearing in on him. He struggled gamely to stick the limit and he succeeded, but when he left the ring he was a thoroughly beaten man.

Match Easy for Dillon.

There were some of those at the ringside that night who declared that Dillon had taken mercy on his opponent and had allowed him to hear the final gong. But that doesn't make much difference. Flynn was beaten and on his way to "hasbeenville." Taking that kind of a trimming never has done any fighter any good.

For several years, or, in fact, since they steered Flynn up against Jack Johnson in a bout for the championship of the world in Las Vegas, N. M., the fireman has been called the heavyweight trial horse of the game. At that time no one ever expected that Flynn, conceding weight and practically everything else that goes to make a winning scrapper, had much of a chance to beat the Negro. That was the correct dope, for it took Johnson only nine rounds to stop the white man.

Trial Horse for Years.

After that scrap with Johnson, Flynn, who had been taken under the managerial wing of Jack Curley, was used to discover how promising were the young men who aspired to the title held by Johnson. When they had worked up for the test they were sent against Flynn. He fought nearly every heavyweight hope with the exception of Jess Willard, and this match always was dodged because Curley had a financial interest in Willard's earnings as well as those of Flynn.

For the last couple of years the iron jaw possessed by Flynn has been undergoing the process of weakening, due to the punches that have connected with it. When Dillon hammered it in New York the fireman lauded Jack to the skies, calling him the greatest heavyweight in the ring. Flynn even declared that the Hoosier scrapper would knock out the champion if they ever meet.

However deserving Dillon may be of Flynn's praise doesn't cut much figure in this case. The fireman didn't seem to wake up to the fact that he had been taking the strenuous path for fifteen years and that sooner or later nature would get the decision. He boosted Dillon and went right along looking for matches. The first man he found looking for trouble was Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., giant, who appears to have a better chance of some time taking the championship than any of the others in the field.

Bumped Hard by Fulton.

Flynn came on to Milwaukee to scrap Fulton before the Cream City Athletic club, which is operated by Tom Andrews. They were to go ten rounds, and in this match the fireman was outweighed by nearly thirty pounds. In the second round Fulton hooked over a left to the chin and followed so fast with a right cross to the jaw that the ringsiders couldn't tell which punch had toppled Flynn. He went down on his hands and knees, then tried to get up, but couldn't and fell over on his back. It was nearly five minutes later before he could be taken out of the ring.

The result of the contest showed that one solid punch on the former iron jaw of the fireman was enough to knock him out cold. He never had a chance to beat his larger opponent and the victory was a "pickup" for the man from Minnesota.

In the Wake of the News

by RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

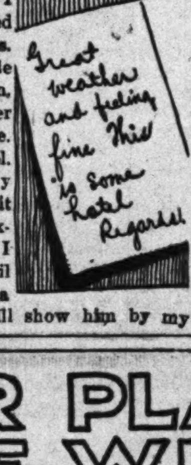
MARCH 22.

DIARY another day has gone and no word from he who holds my happiness in the hollow of his hand. O Diary is it fair that I should be made to suffer this way and perhaps it is my just punishment for the heartaches I have caused men of the opposite sex though it was never intentional but always with the most sympathetic feelings that I rejected there suit. A girl cannot control her feelings and it seems unjust that I must now suffer simply because in the past the men who lost there heart to me were not men who awoke mutual feelings in my own heart.

It is a week today that I mailed my first letter to Lennie and if the answer does not arrive tomorrow I don't know if I can bear the pain any longer or no. It is so easy now days to end everything, all the pain misery and sorrow that goes to make up a woman's life. But no, I will not play a coward's part but whatever comes I will face the world with a smile though my heart be breaking.

MARCH 23.

Last night I prayed that today would bring me word from Lennie and as if in answer to my prayers there was a post card waiting for me down to the office. Only a post card but O Diary how much better than nothing. It was a picture of the Tampa Bay hotel where the ball players are liveing in luxury and with pen and ink he had marked witn a cross the room where he and his room mate are located. I could almost conjure up in my mind's eye a vision of him sitting at his desk addressing the card to me and thinking, thinking what? Oh, that I could of conjured up his thoughts. On the other side was written, "Great weather and feeling fine. This is some hotel. Regards." Only ten words, but it shows he is thinking of me, but I will not reply until I have received a real letter and will show him by my silence that I must be won and am not throwing myself at any man no matter what my feelings towards him.



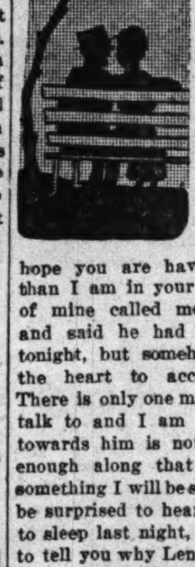
Great weather and feeling fine This is some hotel Regards

MARCH 24.

I have just written a brief and cool note to Lennie to show him that I will not write real letters except in answer to real letters from him. It was a hard struggle for me to keep my feelings out of my note, but I succeeded in writeing as I would to any casual acquaintance of the opposite sex and I think my attitude will show him that I am a girl who must be pursued and conquered and am not one of those pitiful kind that throws themself at a man's head.

"Dear Lennie," I wrote. "Your post card arrived. That surely is a beautiful hotel and I am sure you must be enjoying yourself down there. Things are rather dull up here though we have been enjoying some spring like weather. I was hopeing you would write me a long letter in answer to my letter and tell me some of the things I want to hear but I uppose the practice keeps you busy all day and you are so worn out at night that you dont feel like writeing letters. I assure you Lennie that I don't want you to waste time writeing to me unless you feel in the mood and want to write to me.

I read the reports of the team in the paper every morning and I keep myself posted on what your doing even if you don't take the time to write and tell me. But of course the reports do not state how you are spending your evenings and knowing men as I do I would not be surprised if you are finding plenty of company of the fair sex to talk to. I have not the right to object and I can only say have a good time and I hope you are haveing a better time than I am in your absence. A friend of mine called me up this forenoon and said he had tickets to a show tonight, but somehow I did not have the heart to accept his invitation. There is only one man I want to see and talk to and I am afraid my feelings towards him is not reciprecated. But enough along that line or I may say something I will be sorry for. You might be surprised to hear that I cried myself to sleep last night, but I am not going to tell you why Lennie.



YOUR LITTLE GIRLIE."

After I had signed the note I took pen and ink and marked out the word Your.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. Metcalfe

THE value of position in auction bridge is not sufficiently considered in bidding. For instance, holding the following cards; clubs, K, Q, 10, 4; diamonds, A, Q, 6; spades, 7, 6, 3, and hearts, 10, 8, 5, the writer bid one no trump after a bid of one club had been made at his right.

The knowledge that three of the first four club tricks could be won by this hand made it a good no trump, it being nearly certain that fourth hand could stop either hearts or spades unless the third hand bid one of those suits.

An easy game resulted, although the dummy was the weakest of the other three hands.

The following hand was held in Lake Forest during the last week by the player sitting north—hearts, ace, jack, trey; clubs, 9, 8, trey; diamonds, king, 7, 6, 4; spades, 8, 4, 3. West dealt and bid one heart, north and east passed, south bid two clubs, west two hearts, and north two no trump. North made two no trump easily, the opponents saving the game by clever play.

With the heart stopped twice, north was nearly certain to make his partner's club suit, and knew that south must have very strong clubs and some strength in either spades or diamonds.

The deal which follows illustrates not only bidding on account of position but clever play for position afterwards. The hands:

S—K, 9, 8, 6.
H—K.
C—6.
D—10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 3.

S—A, 7, 2.
H—8, 6, 3, 2.
C—A, Q, J, 4.
D—J, 4.

S

S—Q, 10, 5, 3.
H—A, 10, 7, 4.
C—10, 8.
D—K, Q, 2.

S—J, 4.
H—Q, J, 9, 5.
C—K, 9, 8, 7, 5, 2.
D—A.

Score, 0-0. South dealt.

The bidding—First round—South, 1 club; west, 1 no trump; north, 2 diamonds; east, 2 no trump. Second round—South, pass; west, pass; north, pass.

North had the opening lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	D7	D2	DA	D4
2	6C	10C	7C	4C
3	D3	3C	2C	JC
4	HK	HA	H5	H2
5	6S	3S	4S	AS
6	8S	QS	JS	2S
7	D5	DK	5C	DJ
8	D6	DQ	8C	H3
9	9S	H4	HJ	H6
10	D8	H10	HQ	H8
11	D9	H7	H9	7S
12	D10	5S	9C	QC
13	KS	10S	KC	AC

West secured nine tricks.

The knowledge that south held the king of clubs greatly improved the value of the cards held by west and made his no-trump bid sound. With two probable reentrees, north had reason to believe that a diamond opening might do more good than the lead of the singleton club.

The play for west began after the fourth trick. Unless north was false-carding the original holding by south was one diamond, six clubs, four hearts, and two spades. West placed the king of spades with north on account of the bidding and play by that player, and went up with the queen of spades at trick six.

Tricks nine, ten, and eleven show very pretty play on the part of south and east, each player trying to lose a trick in the heart suit in order to secure a favorable position for the last two tricks. The play of the ten of hearts at trick ten, however, gave west a well earned game.

In the diagram of the deal published on March 12, the east and west hands were reversed, but the bidding and play made the situation obvious.

Evans Swamps Sawyer, 9-8, In French Lick Tournament

BY J. G. DAVIS.

French Lick, Ind., March 25.—[Special.]—Setting a tournament record of 70 in the morning and playing almost as brilliantly in the afternoon, Charles Evans Jr. of Edgewater defeated D. E. Sawyer of Wheaton, 9 and 8, in the final for the Taggart cup and the championship of the French Lick Springs Golf club today.

Chick evidently remembered his 6 and 5 defeat by Sawyer in the national championship at Detroit, and as he holed a ten foot putt on the first green he played confidently the rest of the route. It was one of the best games of his career, as early morning rain made the course slow, and from the fourteenth hole the rest of the morning play was in a heavy downpour, the putting greens being dotted with casual water.

Evans Makes Holes in Par.

After luncheon the weather cleared. Whatever hope Sawyer had of victory was dissipated when he lost the first three holes in the afternoon, Evans getting three par fours. Evans' card of 142 for the double round was one stroke under the amateur record. They played off the tie for the Cockrell cup, Evans winning, 78 to 72.

Kenneth Burns of Glen View won the handicap with a card of 79-6-73 after a tie with Judge Sabath of Chicago. A. P. Keifer of Wilkesbarre, won the blind bogey. The prizes were distributed by Miss Marie Dressler.

Evans played unbeatable golf in the morning. He missed only one shot. He made 20 foot putts on the seventh and tenth greens, and a 10 footer on the first. Sawyer holed a rainbow putt in the eleventh.

Leads Sawyer by 6 Up.

Evans gained a lead of four up on the first nine and at the end of the round was 6 up. Cards:

Evans—Out	3	4	4	4	3	4	3	4	4—33
Sawyer—Out	4	4	3	5	4	4	4	4	5—37
Par—Out	4	4	4	4	3	4	4	5	5—36

Sawyer—In	5	3	6	4	5	5	4	4	4—40	—77
Par—In	4	4	5	3	4	4	4	4	4—36	—72

Sawyer missed several putts in the afternoon. Evans was 10 up at the fifth hole, but missed putts on the next two greens, reducing his lead to 8. Cards:

Evans—Out	4	4	4	4	3	5	5	5	4—38
Sawyer—Out	5	5	5	4	4	4	4	5	4—40

Mrs. Dunbar Severely Shocked.

The morning play produced a near tragedy. Just after Evans and Sawyer had driven from the fourteenth tee there was a flash of lightning, followed by a crash of thunder. Mrs. E. A. Dunbar, a prominent horsewoman of the South Shore Country club, who was in the gallery carrying an umbrella, received a shock in her right arm which nearly knocked her over, but she recovered in a few minutes. Several others in the gallery were shocked slightly.

William G. Allen of the Portage club of Akron, a former Chicagoan, won the second flight trophy, defeating F. L. Whitcomb of Chicago, 2 and 1. G. H. Hutzler of Hollywood, N. J., defeated Tom Prindiville, Exmoor, 1 up, 20 holes.

In the fourth flight W. A. Ireland of Columbus, O., defeated J. E. Reynolds, Fort Smith, Ark., 3 and 2. J. Schaefer of Idlewild and Dr. T. M. Hardie of Flossmoor had a neighborly duel, which the former won, 1 up. The sixth flight produced the best finish, J. L. Mullen of Duluth, after being 5 down and 6 to play, getting square on the home green by jumping a stymie and defeating F. W. Plant of the Minikahda club of Minneapolis at the nineteenth hole.

CHICAGO PIN TEAMS HAVE BEST CHANCE FOR TOLEDO TITLES

Toledo, O., March 25.—[Special.]—Chicago stands to win all four of the championships of the American Bowling congress tournament, which will come to an end Tuesday night.

For five days the Commodore Barrys have topped the fives with 2,905, and the Knights of Columbus bowlers are considered almost certain to repeat their victory of a year ago at Peoria.

Sykes Thoma and Hank Marino have topped the doubles for twelve days with 1,279. Frank Shaw has led the singles in a deadlock with Ben Huesmann for top honors for eleven days, the Cincinnati man equaling Shaw's mark two days after the Chicago man shot 685. Thoma has dominated the all events for almost two weeks with his 1,919.

May Bowl Off Singles Tie.

Huesmann and Shaw, if not beaten before the finish, will roll one game at 6 o'clock Wednesday night for the national individual title, according to notices sent them by Secretary Abe Langtry today. The failure of either man to appear will give the other man the title by default.

Minor event players spent another quiet day. Frank McRill of Marion, O., put up the only count of consequence in singles with 646. Carl Maudlin and H. Kilbuck of Kokomo, Ind., ran best in the doubles with 1,218. McRill opened with 427 for two games. He broke under fire in the last game. Six counts over 600 were made in singles during the day.

Macks, 12; Jacksonville, 3.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 25.—The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Jacksonville South Atlantic league team, 12 to 3. Batteries: Philadelphia, Richardson, Ray, and Schang; Jacksonville, Barze, Gingrich, Hawkins, and Wilkes.

SOME HAIRS from the TIGER'S TAIL and OTHER TALES

by Sam Summerfield

ANY—OLD—COLLINS!

ONE of the best known sporting characters of Chicago when boxing was in vogue was poor old Jim Collins, who died several years ago. He was one of the quaintest characters imaginable, devoted to only three things—viz.: witty repartee, booze, and punching the bag.

These three accomplishments he practiced assiduously to the almost entire exclusion of any others. He inherited a tidy sum at the death of his father, with which he immediately opened a Turkish bath establishment.

The baths were dispensed either in a complimentary fashion to his numerous friends and acquaintances or else on credit. Naturally the finish was quick and certain, and the bath, to use a synonym, evaporated and left nothing behind.

After that Jim drank often and worked occasionally. During his infrequent periods of sobriety he could always find work at one of the stores handling athletic and sporting goods as a demonstrator of the punching bag, and so great an attraction was he to visitors in that line that his employers would even condone his lapses of virtue.

Collins' skill as a bag puncher was certainly marvelous. He could slam that leather spheroid around in more different ways than anybody else ever thought of. He could make it walk, talk, and take care of the baby. He could play any and all sorts of tunes on it from a dirge or "Yankee Doodle" to Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" or the overture from "Lohengrin." He would bang away at the dangling oval for hours practicing some new and intricate pas de seul.

While he was occupied in this manner at one time there entered two square toed, square jawed furtive looking men, who stood quietly by watching him for a few moments.

"Excuse me," one of them ventured, "is your name Collins?"

"Yes, sir," the possessor of the name answered without interrupting his exhibition.

"Cuckoo Collins?" anxiously interrogated the second man.

"Any—old—Collins," carelessly replied Jim, punctuating each word with a resounding whack of the leather.

There was an ominous click, and the dismayed and astonished bag puncher was gazing at a pair of steel handcuffs which ornamented his wrists.

"You are wanted at central. You will have to come with me," the first spokesman tersely vouchsafed.

No amount of questioning could elicit any information from the minions of the law, and poor Jim, undecided whether he had committed murder or should do so now, was forced to accompany them to headquarters. There the mistake was soon rectified and Collins was allowed to go free and return to his beloved bag.

Now comes the answer. Some time prior to this a robbery of some magnitude had taken place in Denver. In broad daylight an unknown man had hurled a brick through the show window of a jewelry store, seized a tray of diamonds, and, sprinting with the speed of a quarter horse, easily distanced all pursuers and escaped.

Here were the deductions of the western police:

Evidently the miscreant was a vandal, a robber, and a runner of extraordinary ability. Failing to identify an individual who could lay claim to all these titles, and the first two being applicable to too many, they set about to find some one whom the last would fit.

Had there been any foot races in town? There had—a gent by the name of Collins, whose Christian name had fallen way from him, like a dilapidated garment, to be superseded by the euphonious appellation of "Cuckoo," signifying in the slang of that day a possession of superlative ability or accomplishments.

Was the gentlemen still in the city? Being non est, he must be elsewhere, and the country was flooded with circulars earnestly requesting the apprehension and detention of said Mr. Collins, and some of the handbills, reaching the Chicago police, were productive of the temporary embarrassment of the first Mr. Collins.

INTUITION.

At a fashionable club in this city a number of prosperous business men were playing poker, one of the players being a clothing merchant from a distant town, who was there by invitation of a member.

In the midst of an interesting pot this man was paged by a bell boy and a telegram delivered to him, which he received in a rather hesitating manner. He laid it down in front of him, and, resting his head on one hand, appeared lost in thought. One of the other players, becoming impatient, spoke up:

"Hey, there; come on. What's the matter with you? What do you do?"

The one thus addressed looked up. "Say," he said, "please don't bodder me for a minnit."

Then, picking up the still unopened message and, pointing it at the questioner, he continued: "Vould you be in such a hurry if you chust got vord dat your shtore burned down?"

FRENCH CUEIST RULES FAVORITE IN TOURNEY HERE

Cassignol Is Choice in Balkline Meet with Cochran and Schaefer.

Firmin Cassignol, who this week will compete in the triangular balk line tournament with Young Jake Schaefer and Welker Cochran, is conceded to be the most finished player France has produced. He is 47 years old, and his long experience in tournaments and academy games makes him a favorite over the two Chicago youngsters.

The tournament, which will start tomorrow, is for a purse of $500, donated by Mr. Munsey. The experts will play twice around, each game being at 400 points at 18-2. First prize is $250, second $150, and third $100.

Cassignol has held the French title since 1910, when he defeated the late Maurice Vignaux. Young Schaefer has been practicing steadily, as he is anxious to defeat Cochran, who for several weeks has been touring with Cassignol.

With a record of no defeats in nine starts, Gosney tops the contestants in the Bankers' league pocket tourney at Bensinger's. Langlotz holds second position with seven wins and two losses. A handicap three cushion tournament will start tomorrow with eleven players. Standing in pocket billiards:

Player—	Hcp.	W.	L.	Player—	Hcp.	W.	L.
Gosney	45	9	0	Hagemeyer	50	3	4
Langlotz	40	7	2	Sullivan	40	3	4
Walsh	40	7	3	Monihan	50	2	3
Wolfer	50	5	4	Crear	30	1	4
Mitchell	45	4	4	Hinzer	40	1	2
Quinn	50	4	4	Schmach	35	0	8

The players in the three cushion tourney, with handicaps: Forrest, 40; Gritz, 40; Vetzorick, 40; B. Thompson, 40; Cara, 40; T. C. Thompson, 33; Burmeiser, 32; Kearney, 32; Gauer, 32; Moer, 32; Zetnick, 31.

The Forum room holds undisputed honors in the South Side Three Cushion league with twelve victories and two losses. Willis & Hart's players are second with ten wins and two defeats. Standing:

Yanks, 5; Birmingham, 5.

Birmingham, Ala., March 25.—The New York Americans and the Birmingham club of the Southern association played a 5 to 5 tie today. The game was called at the end of the ninth on account of rain. Batteries—Grimes, Perryman, Black, Pender, and Hauser, and Smith, Piercy, Tipple, Nunamaker, and Walters.

K. C. Nines Clash Today.

Madonna and St. Patrick's council teams will meet this afternoon at St. Francis' hall in the fourth game of the Knights of Columbus Indoor league finals. The national champions are tied in the series with one lost and one won each.

AMATEURS TO PICK LEADERS.

Directors to represent the different classifications in the Chicago Association of Amateur Baseball leagues will be chosen at a meeting Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock at the Hotel La Salle. Teams in the league will compete in these classes: Commercial, Catholic, Protestant, fraternal, political, parks and playgrounds, juvenile, and miscellaneous.

Umpires Hold Meeting Today.

Minor league umpires, who make their winter quarters here, will meet at 1:30 this afternoon in room 401 of the Morrison hotel. About sixteen umps are expected to attend.

MEET FOR PURPLE CO-EDS.

Northwestern university co-eds will hold a track meet with their sisters of the University of Wisconsin, but will not violate the college rules which forbid participation in other than intramural sports. It sounds like a puzzle, but the answer is the telegraph. The meet will be held in three weeks.

At first the Purple students were anxious for a real meet, but the Badger coeds could not secure permission to enter a contest in track clothes at the other school.

BY EVAN STONE.

Oregon High school and Evanston academy tied for premier honors in the seventh Northwestern university indoor interscholastic track meet last night in the Patten gymnasium with 27 points each.

Oregon gained the lead early in the meet by the work of Landers and Loomis, but lost it to Evanston academy in the relay races. The purple preps jumped to a lead of 27 to 22, but in the belated broad jump event Landers viewed the score board and took a leap of twenty-one feet for first place, five points, and a tie for total honors for his team.

Landers Gets 15 Points.

"Flip" Landers further established his fame by grabbing individual honors with fifteen points. His blond haired teammate, Loomis, who has a brother, Jo, casually known as a track athlete, captured the other 12 points of Oregon's total. Following came Culver with 14½ points, and La Grange with 11 points. Keen competition raged throughout the meet, which was run off smoothly and quickly.

Zeuwer of Lewis Institute equaled the world's record, :06 2-5, in the 60 yard dash. Allman, University High, broke the shot put record of Spears, Kewanee, of 48 feet 5½ inches, when he tossed the iron 49 feet 6¼ inches.

Close Race in Quarter.

The quarter mile developed into a pretty contest, with Beynon of Englewood leading by a ten foot margin until the last lap, when Hamm, Evanston academy, apparently a laggard in the race, pushed to the front and breasted the tape in :56. Cary of University High held second place throughout the race. Hamm again distinguished himself by overcoming a lead in the medley relay and winning the event for his team.

An accident to Clendinning, an Elgin quarter miler, was the only untoward event of the gala night. Clendinning received a bad spiking on one of the turns. A physician was summoned to stop the flow of blood.

Evanston Academy Wins Swim.

Swimmers from Evanston academy won the track meet with fifty-two points. Evanston High school was second with 16 points, and Harrison third with 11. The other teams trailed. Two new records were set.

Max Hayford and Ralph Huszagh of the winning team ran a tie race for individual honors. Each got ten points. Huszagh is a brother of Ken Huszagh, the Chicago A. A. tank star. Jones got most of Harrison's points.

Hayford Sets 2:2? Record.

Hayford won the 220 yard swim in 2:41 3-5, bettering the previous record of 2:43. He also won the 100 yard backstroke, contributing ten points to his school's total. Huszagh got firsts in the diving and forty yard dash.

Olmstead, Evanston High school's star, set a new record in the plunge, covering the sixty feet in :24 4-5. The former mark was five seconds slower.

Summary of Events.

Twelve pair—F. A. Belknap, 19; L. W. Parks, 18; D. Raymond, 17; Dr. Lewis, 17; Judge Carpenter, 14; R. Davis, 14.

VOLLMER SETS TANK MARK.

New York, March 25.—Hal Vollmer of Columbia university made a new record in the 100 yard swim last night at the intercollegiate individual championships. His time, :57 3-5, was three-fifths of a second faster than his record of a year ago. He also won the 220 yard swim. Summaries:

JO LOOMIS BREAKS WORLD DASH RECORD; HONORS FOR CHICAGO

St. Louis, Mo., March 25.—[Special.]—Chicago athletes gathered most of the honors in the invitation track and field meet of the Missouri Athletic association tonight. Jo Loomis of the Chicago Athletic association furnished the feature of the night by setting a new world's record of :05 1-5 in the 50 yard dash. Knight of the University of Chicago held the former record, :05 2-5.

Harry Goelitz and Earl Eby, two teammates of Loomis, added to the Cherry Circle laurels by landing firsts in the 50 yard hurdles and 600 yard run, respectively. Ed Knourek of the Illinois Athletic kept up the speedy pace set by the other Chicagoans when he annexed the pole vault with a leap of 12 ft. 6 in. Knourek tied with Floyd of the Missouri A. A., then went 12-6 in the leapoff and the St. Louis vaulter was not able to equal the mark.

Maroons Defeat Illinois.

University of Chicago runners, inspired by the example of their fellow townsmen, went out and trimmed the Illinois university relay team in a special mile relay.

Pennsylvania university's relay team defeated the Cornell runners in the medley relay race. The distance of 2,420 yards was made in 5:13 2-5. Cornell's first three men gave Windnagle a fifty yard lead, but Ted Meredith soon cut this down. On the last lap Windnagle challenged Meredith, but was unable to pass the Pennsylvania captain.

Summary of Events.

600 yard run, handicap—Won by L. Fey, Chicago A. A., scratch; Harry Irons, C. A. A., 4 yards, second; J. E. Minton, University of Missouri, 9 yards, third. Time, 1:15 2-5.

440 yard dash, invitation—Meredith ran against time, as Daggy of Missouri, Campbell of the University of Kansas, and Clark of the University of Chicago, refused to compete. Time, :51 2-5.

50 yard dash, handicap—Harry Goelitz, C. A. A., 2 feet, first; Gus Aronson, Columbian A. C., scratch, second; Eugene Irwin, Missouri A. A., 6 feet, third. Time, :05 3-5.

Missouri valley conference relay—Won by Kansas university [Elliott, Campbell, O'Leary, Rodky]; Missouri, second. Time, 3:31 2-5.

One mile invitation—Won by Mike Mason, Illinois; D. F. Potter, Cornell, second; Myers, Illinois A. C., third. Time, 4:21.

50 yard dash, invitation—Won by Loomis, C. A. A.; Mahl, C. A. C., second; Hohman, University of Illinois, third. Time, :05 1-5. [New western intercollegiate record.]

WHITE SOX LACE FT. WORTH, 8-0, IN FRIGID CLASH

Eller and Russell Divide Hurling Honors in Mineral Wells Game.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Mineral Wells, Tex., March 25.—[Special.]—Shauno Collins' White Sox Volunteers had an easy time taming the Fort Worth Panthers today in a game that resulted 8 to 0. Shauno might have made it worse, but he gave his followers some practice in base running, and Betts, whose arm is in condition, threw out four of them. Five of the Sox got by with the thief stuff, however.

Eller and Russell divided the whitewash job. Both ought to have been scored on. Leibold saved Eller's bacon in the second inning by stabbing a line drive with one hand while on the run backward. That came right ahead of a three base hit, which was wasted. Six hits were made off Eller in five innings, but no other chance to score occurred.

Russell Lucky in Sixth.

Russell was tagged for three hits in the sixth inning, and the third one would have socred a run but it hit a Panther base runner close to third base and retired the side. The Panthers did not get anything that looked like a hit after that inning.

McMullin, Collins, and Moriarity led the Volunteers at bat with three apiece. One of McMullin's was a triple and one of Shauno's was a double. Moriarity contented himself wth singles, but ought to have had four of them. Manda leaped high and pulled down one of them with his south hand.

Eller Uses Spitball.

Eller practiced his new spitball against the Panthers and got by in swell shape in the first inning. In the second they called the turn because he used more time in pitching it than he did when he delivered a fast one. Then Ed Walsh coached the youngster some more, showing him how to consume the same amount of time with each delivery, and the youngster stopped them thereafter.

Only a handful of folks saw the game, for it was overcoat weather, on account of a norther which arrived during the night. Texans don't like to be outdoors when the thermometer is below 80, and the only spectators were resorters.

President Comiskey and his family left for Chicago this noon, taking Secretary Grabiner along, to get ready for the opening of the season. Before departure Comiskey practically signed up with Mineral Wells people for his 1917 training trip.

More Grass Next Spring.

All Commy asks them to do is to grow a little grass on the ball park to help keep the dust out of the players' eyes and throats. The committee has promised to do that before another spring, and the master of the White Sox does not doubt the promise of a Texan.

Nevertheless, knowing the manana tendencies of the south in general, Comiskey will send a scout here about next October to see how the promises are being fulfilled, so that there may be time to change his training plans if necessary. They can grow grass in Texas in the summer time with the help of a little water, but they can't grow it "in der vinter dime."

BRAVES DOWN MACKS AGAIN.

Miami, Fla., March 25.—The Boston Nationals defeated a team of the Philadelphia Athletics today, 12 to 3. It was the Braves' third against the Macks. Score:

HOUSTON FALLS BEFORE SOX, 11-2; E. COLLINS STAR

Houston, Tex., March 25.—[Special.]—That Sox wrecking crew wrecked Houston today, 11 to 2. Eddie Collins got six hits, equaling Jackson's record of yesterday. One was a double and the rest singles. Fournier, Jackson, and Lynn had three hits apiece. The Sox made twenty all told.

Cicotte pitched seven innings in good style, and Williams finished. Houston had beaten the Giants, Browns, and Cardinals, but the Sox were the first hard hitters they faced.

The Weaver-Terry combination again worked nicely. Buck handled some hard chances brilliantly. The same teams will play tomorrow. Scott will pitch for the Sox. Score:

MUDHENS LAND COMSTOCK.

Toledo, O., March 25.—A message from Roger Bresnahan tonight at Dawson Springs, Ky., where the Toledo American association club is training, says Pitcher Ralph Comstock has been made a member of the team. Bresnahan also stated he is negotiating for Alex McCarthy, who played second and third base for the Chicago Cubs last year.

SHECKARD TO BE MANAGER.

Reading, Pa., March 26.—Promoters of the Pennsylvania State Baseball league announced today that they have signed Jimmy Sheckard, former Chicago Cub outfielder, to manage the Reading team. Sheckard will report early in April to get things into shape. He probably will play an outfield position.

BURMAN TAKES COAST RACE.

San Diego, Cal., March 25.—Bob Burman won the fifty mile Panama-California international exposition cup race of fifty miles here today. The time was 57:30 4-5. The course was slightly over one mile.

Teddy Tetzlaff was second in 58:20 2-5, Barney Oldfield third in 59:15, and Clifford Durant fourth in 1:02. No others started.

Burman's time was considered remarkable by experts in view of the dangerous course. Tetzlaff also drove a remarkable race. From the eleventh lap on he pursued Burman closely, at no time being more than thirty seconds behind. Oldfield, after jumping into the lead in the first lap, was unable to maintain the pace. Although fourth at the finish, Durant is given the credit for driving the fastest lap of the race in 1:13.

GOULD WINS AT RACQUETS.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 25.—Jay Gould, the world's open court tennis champion, today won the singles title of the racquet club by defeating W. H. T. Huhn in straight sets in the final round, 6—0, 6—2, 6—2. Gould and Huhn, holders of the national doubles championship, won the doubles handicap tournament by defeating W. J. Hallahan and W. H. Folwell in three sets, 6—2, 6—4, 7—5.

SCHOFF WINS GOLF FINAL.

W. W. Schoff of Wheaton won his second leg on the C. E. Davis cup at the Rothmoor indoor golf course yesterday, defeating G. H. Driscoll of Garfield park in the final, 1 up, in thirty-nine holes. The sixth and final leg will be contested next Saturday. Another victory will give Schoff permanent possession of the cup.

SENATORS WIN BATFEST, 9-6.

Charlottsville, Va., March 25.—In a free hitting contest the Washington American league team defeated the University of Virginia, 9 to 6, the collegians getting five runs off of Gallia in one inning and one off of Walter Johnson in the remaining eight. Batteries—Johnson, Gallia and Henry; Rixey, McCall and Green.

PHILS CAPTURE FIFTH STRAIGHT FROM CUBS, 10-2

Tinkers Fail to Hit Tincup and Oeschger—Errors Help the Quakers.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Tampa, Fla., March 25.—[Special.]—That long waited pepper and spirit which the Cubs were supposed to have today failed to appear, and Pat Moran's Phillies won again. It was the fifth straight victory for the champions in the spring training series.

The score this time was 10 to 2, and the made-over team which Joe Tinker put on the field did even worse than the former combination. The Phillies really deserved three of the ten runs, so would have won just the same if the Cubs had cut out the bum stuff.

The Cubs earned both their tallies, but looked as if they could not have made another in a week.

Williams Gets Fluke Homer.

A three base blow by Heine Zim in the first inning drove home one run and started the Chicagoans off in front.

A home run by Cy Williams in the ninth accounted for the other. Cy poled a long fly to right and Gavvy Cravath took a gambler's chance that it would be foul, so didn't run after it, and Gavvy didn't figure on the wind, which swerved the ball enough to make it hit the line and bound to the race track for a four base hit.

Those two blows, with a two bagger by Schulte in the fourth, a single by Flack in the third, and a safe swat by Pierce in the eighth, were all the hits made by the Cubs. They were a helpless lot of hitters all through the contest before the sharpshooting of Ben Tincup and Joe Oeschger, two Philly pitchers, who have been trailing as morning practice hurlers.

Tinker's Hurlers Look Bad.

The second string pitchers of Moran's team look fairly good, however, compared to Tinker's all star staff at the present time. Perhaps the real reason for the defeats lies in the condition of the Chicago slabmen.

So far there hasn't been one of them deliver anything that will get by after the season opens, but they have more than two weeks left, and may get their wings in flying form by that time.

Tom Seaton and Filbert Pierce were the hurlers picked for duty and just breezed along at about the same pace they had on the second day out. At that they might have given the champions quite an interesting fight if they had been given sturdy support.

Their mates were flighty in many instances, and their recklessness proved costly.

A Comedy of Errors.

Once Max Flack droped a long, high fly ball when two men were on the bases with two out. That mistake cost one run. Once/with two men on and two out Cy Williams kicked a single to center when he might have stopped the ball and retired the side runless by putting a man out at the plate. The ball rolled a mile, more or less, with the other two outfielders standing in their positions watching Cy turn and retrieve it. That run came in. Once Eddie Mulligan fumbled one and it cost one run.

Another item, with a runner on first, the ball was smashed to Heine Zim, and there was a chance for a double play. Mulligan and Zeider got muddled on which one should do the second base end of the play, with the result that no one was put out. Two runs came over because of that blunder.

Cubs Lack Teamwork.

To one who sits back in the shade and looks on it seems that the Cubs have a bunch of stars with no unity of action, and Pat Moran has an assortment of common, every day ball players who work together like a machine. Perhaps Pat has the best of Tinker on pitching, too, but before this training trip ends the Cubs are liable to arise in wrath some day and win.

NOTES FROM CAMP CUB.

After the result of the game today one need not be surprised if Manager Tinker makes further changes in the lineup of the regular team.

Tampa, Fla., March 25.—[Special.]—Two more games are booked between Cubs and Phillies. On Monday they play in Tampa and on Tuesday in St. Petersburg.

President Weeghman, accompanied by William Walker and family, will leave tomorrow for Chicago. They are convinced there is [illegible] chance for the Cubs to win while they are here.

Eddie Mulligan executed two or three sparkling plays at shortstop and proved he has the speed so much desired. He and Zeider form a fast pair around the middle bag, but need more time to work well together.

The Phils returned to St. Petersburg tonight and will come back Monday. Pat Moran doesn't like to let them have three days of fancy eating in their hotel in St. Petersburg [illegible] could be printed on a postage stamp.

The Cubs even pulled bad stuff on the bases. Once Max Flack was on first with one out and the call on Williams was three balls and one strike. Max tore for second on the next pitched ball, which was in the groove. Williams took the strike and Max was pegged out at second.

FIVE BALL GAMES CARDED BY JUNIOR LEAGUE TODAY.

The Chicago Junior Baseball league will be in the spotlight today with [illegible] playing, weather permitting. The juniors meet every Tuesday night at headquarters, 120 North Dearborn street. Secretary Enders announces that the prospects for this year are better than ever before. Managers with teams averaging between 12 and 18 years old are invited to attend the meetings. Games for today:

Original Iroquois and Berwyn [illegible], [illegible] second avenue and Sixteenth street.

Melrose Sox and St. Stanislaus, [illegible] playgrounds.

Johnson Grays and Frankes, [illegible]

North Ends and Burnside Terriers, [illegible]ere park.

New Orleans, 4; Reds, 3.

New Orleans, La., March 25.—Except for the first inning, when Griffith's home run [illegible] the Cincinnati Nationals three runs, [illegible]linger for New Orleans [illegible] the local team won, 4 to 3. Batteries—[illegible] McKenery, Mitchell, and Clark; [illegible]linger and Deberry.

ETHEL

Reproduction of a painting by RALPH PEACOCK

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By ANNE ELLIS.

ETHEL in her frame and Ethel out of it are quite two different persons. The artist has realized this situation and made an excellent compromise in her portrait. She is the young girl wearing the overemphasized dignity of her approaching womanhood and hiding behind company manners the insistent desire to kick her feet about and put her thumb into her mouth.

Somewhere in the realms of philosophy women are accused of having dual personalities. The philosopher, no doubt, meant that all women are potentiallly mothers and vampires. Whether he is right or not is a matter for conjecture, since statistics are impossible, but it is certainly true that the old saying, "The boy is father to the man," can be used in the feminine.

The age of adolescence is the age of dual personality—of conscious dual personality, which causes the possessor much discomfort. In the young girl of 12 or 14 the child and the woman are at strife. The woman says that the child must have dignity, and the child mocks at the woman for her attempt at it. The child wants to play with her doll, and the woman is ashamed to let her. The child is a glutton, and the woman makes up for it by a sort of burlesque daintiness of manner at table. The woman is vain of her looks, and the child is ashamed of the vanity, even to the extent of tousling her hair in the presence of her playmates.

The child's old companion, Mischief, calls to her all day long, and the woman's new visitor, Responsibility, holds her back. Most of the time Mischief, like all old companions, has the stronger hold, but when Responsibility does triumph the woman has defeated her own purpose, for the child uses the occasion for self-aggrandizement. The animal spirits of the child claim an outlet in violent exercise, and the newborn consciousness of soul in the woman loathes the ungrace of violence.

The woman is ashamed of the child's taste. The child loves, above all things, to suck a lollipop; but she foregoes the joy while she reads "Black Beauty." To such an extent does the woman prevail in this matter that when the child has reached a point where the call of the lollipop is too strong to be resisted she buys two and goes for moral support to the little girl next door, who isn't old enough yet to be conscious of the woman in her.

The child is ashamed of the woman's taste. The woman loves "Forgotten" and "The Rosary," but they are love songs, anathema to the heart of the child, so she makes fun of them when her boon companions are about and confides to Miss Grey that she thinks the music is b-e-a-u-t-i-f-u-l.

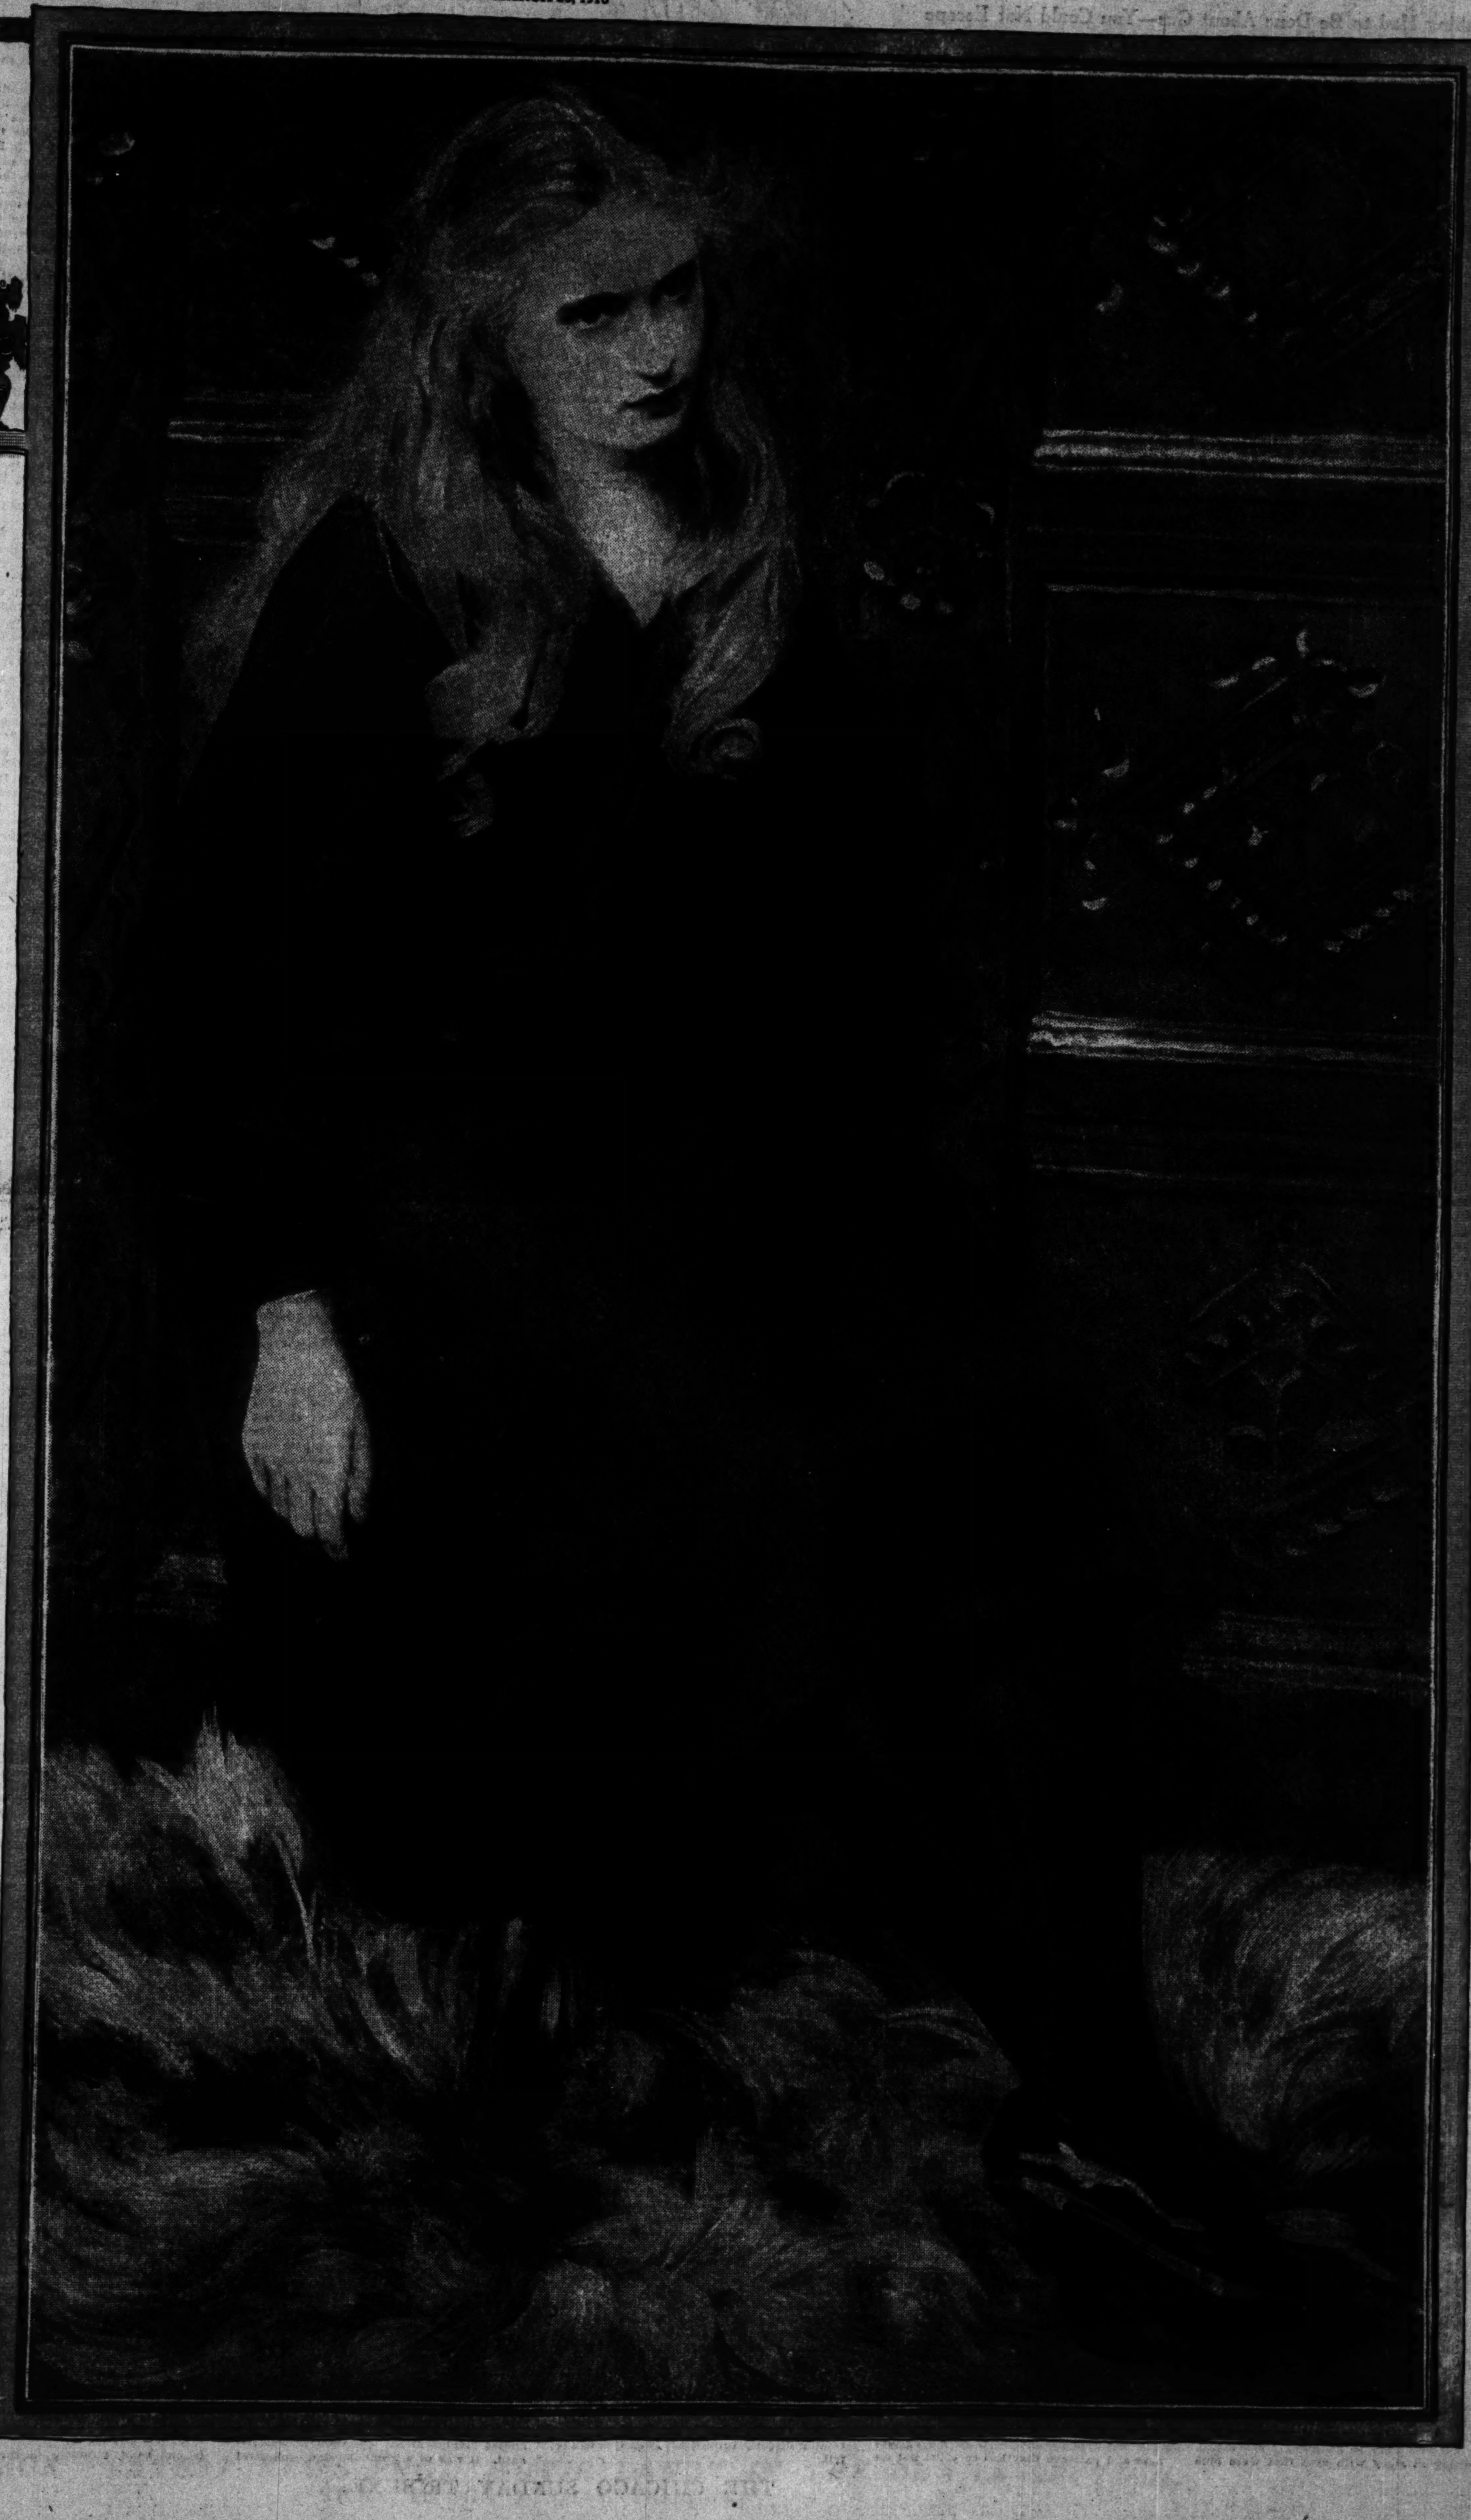
Usually in the midst of this strife comes the first consciousness of sex. Boys until now have only been amazing in their appetite for the grewsome. Their only claim to consideration was that they could pick up angle worms and tear the wings off dead birds. Now they are society to be scorned by the child and coveted by the woman—to be giggled at in a group and played up to singly. The child puts out her tongue at Willie Jones, and the woman ties a careful bow on her hair because the new boy at school has serious gray eyes.

Such was the dual personality of Ethel. A critic tells of interviewing the artist after the picture was first hung, and the artist told him that Ethel confessed that once when his back was turned she put a tiny orange colored cross on the forehead in the picture. Yet when the artist looked at the sitter again she was poised on the stool in all the calm dignity of overshadowing womanhood.

Ralph Peacock painted "Ethel" in the year 1898, and marked his first assured success. Before that time he had considerable vogue as a portrait painter, but his exhibits at the Royal academy until that date had lacked a certain initiative which "Ethel" supplied. The canvas brought him many new sitters and a deal of comment in the press. The "Ethel" of this picture also appears again in his canvas called "The Sisters." They are probably the artist's own daughters, as he is the father of three.

"Ethel" was purchased under the Chantry bequest for the Tate gallery, London.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.



PUTTING IT OVER by Samuel Merwin

Something Had to Be Done About Gus—You Could Not Escape Him—and Something Was Done When He Unintentionally Bared His Mind and Showed Another Than the Lighter Side He Presented to All Women.

WHEN Mary Bentley slipped away alone to the quaint little inn at Harper's Mills-in-the-Pines she confidently hoped to arrive at a decision that would settle for all time the persistent question of Gus Grenfell.

Certainly something had to be done about Gus. There he was. You could not escape him. Her mother admired his energy and ability, his fighting spirit. Her father considered him the best salesman in the employ of the company and meant, she knew, to make him sales manager within the year. She herself liked him. There were moments when she liked him very much, indeed. There were other moments when she felt a little like a "deal" that he was about to close. He rarely failed to close deals. At these moments she would wait, in a state something between excitement and a sort of fantastic dread, for the event to arrive.

Then there were her twenty-six undeniable years to consider. Like Gus—there they were. She was still slender and pretty, but—there they were. When her mother had asked her how much longer she expected to drift, she could not answer. And so she had run away to Harper's Mills, where Mr. and Mrs. Williams could be relied on to make the inn a home to her.

How she came to return, a week later, in doubt about two men instead of one, and how she was led unexpectedly to a decision, will be told—with a side glance at some little problems in ethics and respectability.

Mary Bentley leaned back against a tree trunk and looked, now off through the pines and across the shining lake to the pale green bank beyond, now at the giant figure of a man that was stretched full length on the ground at her feet.

The giant was moodily digging into the matted brown pine needles with his pocket knife and heaping them up in straight little rows. She was humming, softly but blithely, the "Willow Waly O" from "Patience." Down at the water's edge a 7 year old girl was sailing boats of bark.

Nothing that had happened during this astonishing week could possibly be so. It was all dream stuff. She looked at the giant again. After all, he was certainly so. And she was so. And life was running sweet, if strange.

For her giant—digging there among the needles and thinking of her, as surely as she was sitting here and humming and thinking of him—was, to be conservative, one of the six best known men in the American speaking world.

Certainly, to several authentic millions of small and not so small boys he was a more worshipful and durable hero than Achilles, or Alexander, or Cæsar, or Napoleon, or Roosevelt.

Locally, it had been discovered to her that in the estimation of Innkeeper Williams he was a tried and proved leader of men—a master of difficult, often heartbreaking, situations, and an extreme exemplar of the practical value, in dollars and in character, of steady habits and an almost abnormal self-control.

To Mary he was a number of things—but principally a new sensation so engagingly different from any other experience in her life that he fascinated her simply by being what he was—a naïve and vigorous and real person, and a Greek god in physique.

In mere fact, Mac Hornaday had been for some years the preëminent pitcher of the New York Giants of the National League of Baseball Clubs, and of the entire United States and Cuba (the rest of the world by default). And the key to this fame lay—to tell the whole truth and get it over with—in his utter technical mastery of the particular style of pitching that is distinguished by the process of moistening two fingers or the thumb with the tip of the tongue before delivering the ball.

It was this thought that caused a faint, whimsical smile to play over Mary Bentley's face as she hummed the "Willow Waly O"—the absurd, the grotesque, the delicious thought that, for the time at least, she could be actually happy in the company of "the world's greatest spitball artist."

That her conduct was outrageous, she was quite aware. Also aware, she knew, were the half score of other guests, feminine guests, at the inn. Not a side glance, not a raising of eyebrows, not a whisper was lost on her. But her only response was a barely perceptible heightening of color now and then, a brightness about the eyes, and a marked tendency to hum merry little ballads as she dressed in the morning and undressed at night. Her life was racing along toward—something. But never mind. Time enough to look it in the face when she was back in New York—back where Fate was a spider that spun his gray web thicker and closer about one with the years. Down here at Harper's Mills, Fate was an invisible vagabond painter who touched the earth lightly and lovingly with the joyous yellows, and greens, and whites, and blues, and golds of Maytime.

"So you're going tomorrow?" he observed soberly, still working away at the little heaps of pine needles.

She had been looking down at him, noting how buoyantly the tiger-like grace of his long body belied the sober, 32 year old face with the lines in it. At his remark her song broke off.

"Yes," she replied, "I must."

"I'm sorry," he said. "It has been the best week of my life. I don't want it to end."

"It has been too good to last," she murmured.

"Don't say that—please." He raised himself to a sitting posture and nursed an ankle that was bandaged under the sock. "I'll be back myself in another week. I wish you would stay over—until I go."

She shook her head.

"Can't such times ever last?"

She averted her bright eyes, and made no reply.

"They seem to—with some lucky people."

She shook her head again—rather vaguely.

"I wish you wouldn't go."

It was almost said. He was looking down and jabbing his knife among the neat little heaps of needles. Her thoughts were running wild, and she was letting them go.

Suddenly matters were taken out of their hands. There was a rustle beside them. She gave a nervous start; he merely looked up.

The child was standing there, primly, her arms hanging at her sides.

"Do you have to go away?" she asked, looking at Mary with eyes that were blue and steady, like her father's.

"Goodness, child!" cried Mary softly. "You frightened me. . . . Yes, yes, Ethel, I'm afraid I must."

"I wish," said the child slowly and distinctly, "that you would come and live with father and me. I don't like to stay at aunt's. I like to be with father. And I like to be with you."

Mary tried a little laugh, but it was not wholly successful. The color was coming into her face. Two pairs of steady blue eyes were fixed on her now. She felt herself the victim of a sudden conspiracy.

"Will you?" the child persisted.

The situation was all out of her control now.

"I'll think about it, Ethel," she finally managed to say. "Now run back to your boats."

The child stood for a moment, then obeyed.

There was a long silence. She was gazing out over the lake, but she knew his eyes were watching her with that restrained, almost sad, pleading in them.

"Will you—think about it?" he asked, finally.

"Please——" she said; "that isn't quite fair."

"Isn't it?" He stabbed at the ground. "Well, I suppose it isn't. I oughtn't to think about you this way. I've tried not to."

"Have you?" she murmured.

"Yes—but it is hard. I've tried to keep realizing how different our lives are. But I couldn't help feeling that you like to be with me——"

He hesitated.

"Well, I guess—I know—it's got me. Of course, I suppose you couldn't marry a ball player——"

"It isn't that," she interrupted, then faltered.

It was that.

But a chemistry so subtle that it has baffled the research of the ages was working in her spirit as in his. His position, so ingenuous, so humble, gave her the situation again. Her heart went out to him. And dinner was nearly over when they walked up the steps of the inn and, with a long look and a low word, parted in the doorway. She ran upstairs. He turned away to deliver his daughter to her worried aunt.

At twilight a half score of women, sitting in a row on the veranda, saw them start out again, and a whisper ran from end to end of the row.

They sat again beneath the pines. But their relations had changed even during their brief separation at dinner. The chemistry had worked its magic.

"I wonder if I shall see you at all," he said, "up there in the city."

"You have my address," she replied.

They fell silent again. She dropped her hands to her sides and ran her fingers in among the soft needles.

He changed his position—his right hand brushed accidentally against her left—hesitated—lingered—then timidly took possession of it.

She did not—could not—draw it away.

"I'm glad you care," he said simply, after a long time.

She sat erect and looked about, then trembled a little, withdrew her hand and pressed it, with the other, against her face.

He watched her anxiously, but made no remark.

She got to her feet. "I must go back," she said.

He rose and limped to her side.

"No—please! Don't come with me. I've got to be alone."

He stood motionless and let her walk away toward the inn.

Mary Bentley was really frightened for the first time in her life. A confused jumble of fears and doubts made consecutive thought impossible. But one thing was clear—she must not be swept away like this. Perhaps it was to be Mac Hornaday, for better or worse—the phrase rang again and again in her troubled mind—but it must not be settled in this way. Her life was more than a lake and a spangle of moonlight and a man's hand on hers. She owed it to her family, to herself, even to Gus, to wait and face the thing fairly with her normal, New York mind. If it stood the test, if she were to give herself forever to this ball player, to this—she framed the outlandish, impossible phrase almost bitterly—this "spitball artist," well and good. The answer to that question lay in workaday New York, not here in this gravely unreal little paradise.

She slipped around unobserved to the side entrance, entered the inn, and quietly appeared at the front door.

Then occurred a scene that gave the row of whisperers on the veranda a really dramatic little thrill.

The station bus backed up to the steps and a man stepped out carrying a light handbag. As he came up into the light it was evident that he was a presentable, even prosperous appearing, person. His attire was the standard attire of the brisk and successful young business man, correct at every point. His face bore a look of aggressiveness that broke into a firm, confident smile when his eyes rested on the slender, pretty girl in the doorway. He stepped rapidly forward with outstretched hand.

"Here I am, Mary," he said in a clear voice that had in it something of the aggressiveness of his face.

Mary's first impression was one of intense relief. Her dream had to be shattered, and no device for the purpose could possibly have equaled the sudden appearance of Gus.

But after the first few moments she found herself looking at him with new eyes. When she introduced him to the innkeeper a new, critical faculty seemed to spring into being within her. She wondered if his smile had always had that almost professional cast. She felt a curious hint of insincerity in the quick, automatic way in which he bent forward, fixed his eyes on those of the other men and heartily gripped the hand that was extended to him.

After he had established himself in the room assigned to him they found chairs at a far corner of the long veranda.

"Well," said he cheerfully, "you're looking fine, Mary. The rest seems to have done you good."

At his tone her heart sank a little. She knew him so well. He was going to show her only his breezy, impersonal side this evening. He was not the man to expose himself to any sudden defeat; his one great question would not be repeated until he himself had arranged the preliminaries and set the scene.

It was this consciousness of his adroitness and patience that had so often got on her nerves. It was maddening sometimes to know that she was not even to have the privilege of refusing him until he was ready.

"Interesting old character, that 'bus driver," said Gus pleasantly, lighting a cigar.

Her giant did not smoke.

"He tells me that you've got a celebrity here—Mac Hornaday."

"Yes, Mr. Hornaday is here." Her voice was low and carefully controlled.

"That was the unluckiest of the many unlucky things that have happened to the Giants this year—Mac's getting hurt. We need him bad. The team doesn't play so well behind the other pitcher. They say he is rather a decent chap, too, for a ball player."

"I like him," said Mary quietly.

"Have you seen much of him?"

"Yes—a good deal. I was walking with him just before you came."

She knew that he was watching her narrowly. But he merely asked, after a pause and a slow mouthing of the cigar, "He is able to walk then?"

"He has to be careful. He uses a cane. He was spiked, you know."

"Yes, I know," she murmured and suppressed a shudder.

"I'm rather sorry," said he after another pause, "that you've been going around with him. He's married, isn't he?"

"No."

"O, I thought he was."

"He lost his wife."

"M-m-m!" The cigar gleamed red. "After all, Mary, he is a ball player, you know. He's a great pitcher—the greatest, easily enough—but he's no fit companion for a respectable girl."

"How do you know?" she asked.

"O—why—anybody in our class will tell you that. It is a rough life. It doesn't fit a man for anything. Mac gets a good salary, of course, and the fans have done a lot for him—safe tips on the market and all that—but his life is nearly over—his real life. We admire him, yes—exactly as we might admire a trapeze performer or a really first class fighter. But he isn't—he never can be—one of our kind."

Mary excused herself early. She found it impossible to talk. She later found it impossible to sleep, but in the morning her smile gave no hint of that fact. Gus, after his one unguarded little outbreak, was suave and steady, his customary attitude of blended chivalry and confident masculine superiority quite restored.

She found it a relief to be packed off on the morning train—her tickets and baggage and connections all attended to, even her train luncheon ordered for her. Gus did this sort of thing well. She felt grateful to him for being so quietly efficient.

Back in the home environment she again became conscious of Fate, the spider, weaving his close, gray web around her. She avoided Gus; but though he held aloof she knew that he was merely biding his time. Day by day she watched her father and mother for some sign that they knew. And day by day, in a fever of unrest, she secretly bought the afternoon papers and scanned the sporting pages.

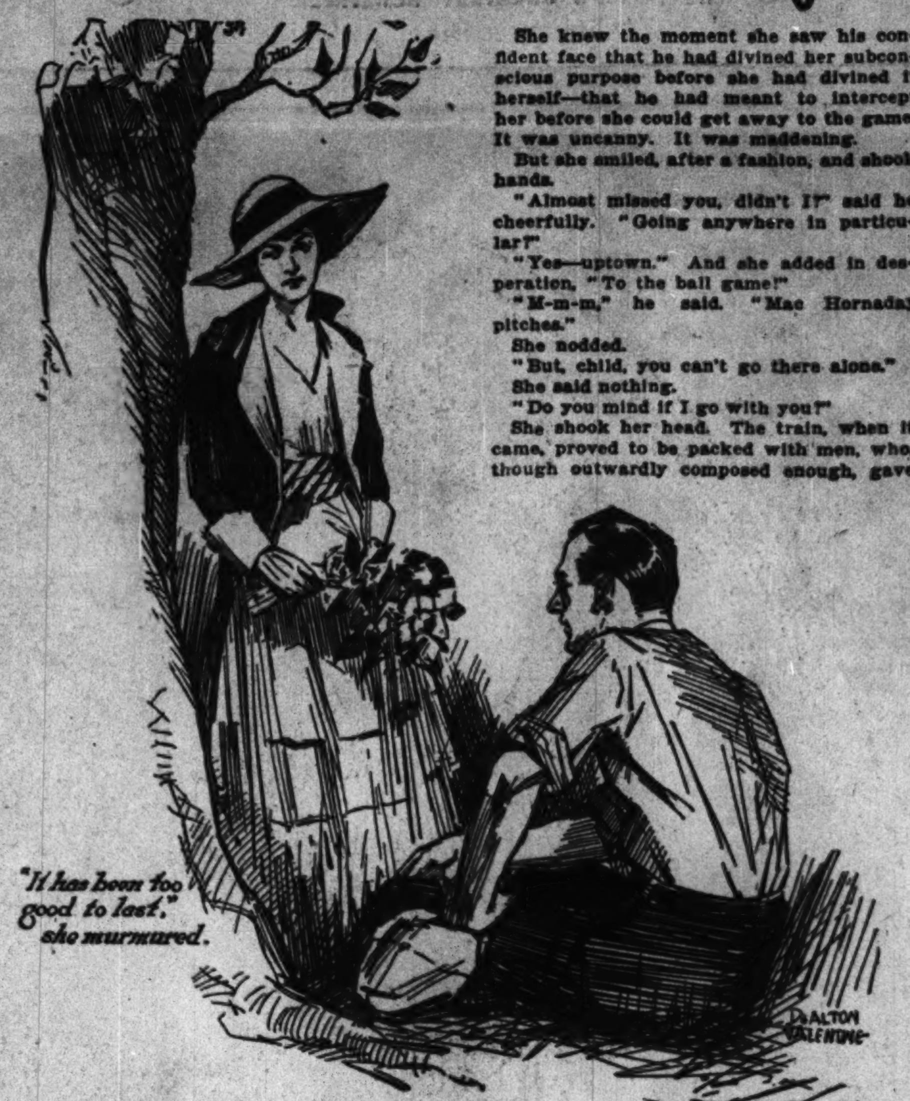
Every day bulletins appeared about the great Mac Hornaday. His ankle was better. It was worse. It was better again. There were mysterious hints to the effect that blood poisoning had "set in." No, he was almost himself again. He was himself. He had returned to the city. He had told the reporters that he would be ready to pitch by Saturday. It was Saturday—and before breakfast, wrapped in a kimono, Mary hurriedly slipped down to the lower hall, secured the morning paper, and with quick beating heart turned to the sporting page.

There was his picture—three columns wide. He would pitch this day. It was high time. The Cubs were at the Polo grounds for a four game series. The losing streak of the Giants had demoralized the team. If Mac Hornaday could not pull the men together and stop this losing streak nobody could. A great crowd was assured for the afternoon.

At noon, by a coincidence in which the great gray spider must have played a diabolical part, the storm broke at home. Mrs. Bentley had been shopping—had met friends—had learned of her daughter's infatuation for a ball player. And Mrs. Bentley's world fell in with a crash—became a smoking ruin.

How she got through that luncheon with her weeping mother, what she said, whether or not she ate a morsel, Mary never knew. She only knew that she must get away—out into the air. And once out in the air, heavily veiled, she knew she was going to that game.

She started straight across town toward the elevated, walking rapidly. On that first corner, turning west from Broadway and coming directly toward her, was Gus Grenfell.



"It has been too good to last," she murmured.

She knew the moment she saw his confident face that he had divined her subconscious purpose before she had divined it herself—that he had meant to intercept her before she could get away to the game. It was uncanny. It was maddening.

But she smiled, after a fashion, and shook hands.

"Almost missed you, didn't I?" said he cheerfully. "Going anywhere in particular?"

"Yes—uptown." And she added in desperation, "To the ball game!"

"M-m-m," he said. "Mac Hornaday pitches."

She nodded.

"But, child, you can't go there alone."

She said nothing.

"Do you mind if I go with you?"

She shook her head. The train, when it came, proved to be packed with men, who, though outwardly composed enough, gave out none the less a subtle impression of inner unity in purpose and mood.

It was all new to Mary. She had seen various college teams play baseball and understood the game well enough to follow the play, but she never had been to any of those immense stadiums in which masculine America spends the latter half of each summer afternoon. The attitude of the typical baseball crowd—with its rough good humor, its intense partisanship, its bottomless and boundless statistical and scientific knowledge of the game—was to her an undiscovered country.

Swinging from a strap, she listened to the talk of the various friendly groups at her end of the car.

One conversation made her pulse beat faster. It took place between a palpable New Yorker and a no less unmistakable "upstater."

"I've never seen Mac Hornaday pitch, Bill. I hope he'll be working today."

"Sure to," replied the all knowing New Yorker. "When he's fit, MacGregor almost always pitches him on Saturdays. You see, nobody else draws the crowds he does. And the papers all say he's in shape again. Yes, you'll see him."

"He's still good, isn't he?" queried the visitor anxiously. "There's been some talk in the papers up our way that he's gone back a lot—slowed up."

"Not so you'd notice it," replied his mentor with a touch of hauteur. "Of course, he hasn't the speed he had three years ago, but his headwork makes up for that."

"He's good for some years yet," put in a third straphanger. "Believe me, a man that keeps himself in perfect condition the year round like Mac does is there, my friend—there."

Gus and Mary found seats back of third base that permitted an unobstructed view of the field. Gus pointed out the various players of the two teams, as they romped through the preliminary practice, and related many an amusing anecdote hinging on the characteristics or physical peculiarities of the most prominent among them. Gus could be really entertaining when he chose.

But during the greater part of the time Mary's glance was flitting about the field in search of a familiar figure.

There was a sound of applause and cheering far out there in the right field bleachers. Her restless eyes sought the cause. A giant figure of a man was walking out on the field from the gate beneath the bleachers—a man in a black cap, a heavy brown sweater, knee trousers that had once been white, and black and white stockings. He carried a fielder's glove in his left hand. On his right shoe a pitcher's toe plate glinted for a second in the sunlight.

Instantly she knew him. There was no mistaking the inimitable grace of his body as he swung easily along. The applauding and cheering swept on ahead of him in a mighty wave.

A few moments more and he stepped out for the last ten minutes of warming up. He had thrown aside the brown sweater and stood revealed in the simple outlines of his playing costume. When he swung his arm in a long circle, wheeled half around and deliberately, easily, brought every part of his powerful frame into the final pitching motion she suddenly knew why he always had looked a little out of place in ordinary clothes.

The game was on. She watched the men run out to their positions. She felt the tension when Mac Hornaday, after a slow look around at his fielders, faced the first batter, leaned forward to see the catcher's signal, and delivered the first pitched ball of the game—a called strike.

The crowd cheered and roared for luck.

Hornaday shot in another strike. And then, instantly after receiving the ball from the catcher, he held his glove before his face for a moment, moistened two fingers, gripped the ball, swung his arm in a full revolution, and let go. The batter spun clear around with the force of his futile swing, and walked dejectedly back to the bench.

Mac had struck out the first batter on three pitched balls. It was master work—more, it was a good omen. The crowd surged to its 30,000 feet and lifted its 15,000 voices in sheer delight. Mac had returned. The run of defeats was to be broken, that was clear.

"O, you Mac!" shouted a man back of Mary. "'At a boy! Put all you've got on it. That'll pull this bunch together! That'll remind 'em who's who! O, you Mac!"

The next two men were retired as easily, one on called strikes and the other on a weak roller to the pitcher. It was Mac's own inning, a fact which the fifteen thousand voices made clear beyond dispute.

A curious memory flashed into Mary Bentley's mind as she watched the Chicago players trotting out to their stations. She smiled involuntarily. The thought was absurd. It was of a great German orchestral leader, Felix Weingartner, who had been in New York some years earlier. Yes—she might as well admit it—the two men, Weingartner, the genius of musical interpretation, and Hornaday, the master of the pitcher's art, had made much the same impression on her.

This man had the same rare quality. She smiled again. O, it was—it ought to be—preposterous, of course! But the fact remained. In his very pose as he took his position on the pitcher's mound, in his wonderful physical control, in his steady eyes, in his tigerlike movements was that same unmistakable sense of purpose and mastery. And this great crowd of spectators felt it with the players. After all, had not Gus himself, that keen, practical psychologist, said "the team doesn't play so well behind the other pitchers"?

The Cubs had pitted their ablest pitcher against the great Hornaday. It was the left handed "Stevedore Smith." The two old opponents were not unevenly matched. If the one time stevedore lacked something of Hornaday's dominant personality, still he was a great pitcher. The Giants were determined to break their losing streak. The Cubs were determined to continue their winning streak. Each team made one run in the fourth inning. The Giants made another in the fifth. The Cubs tied the score again in the seventh. In the eighth the Giants, by daring base running, including a clean steal of home by Shortstop Bachman, added another.

When the Giants took the field for the first half of the ninth inning the score was 3 to 2 in their favor. The boys had done their best for Mac Hornaday in response to the stimulus of his presence. They had given him the extra run to win with. It only remained for him to hold the Cubs scoreless during this last half inning.

Mary sat motionless, far forward in her seat, intent on every detail of the play. She had all but forgotten the existence of Gus Grenfell. Even her giant out there, this active, fighting side of him at least, was little more than an impersonal fact. At first she had been stirred by Hornaday's dominant personality, and by the marvelous manual skill and speed of the other players. Then she had come under the almost grim spell of the conflict itself. Now she felt the tension to a degree almost painful. It was apparently New York's game, her giant's game; yet the smallest accident, the slightest turn in the luck might throw victory into the hands of the visiting team.

The first batter bunted. The ball, a teasing, perverse little sphere, rolled slowly along the foul line toward third base. It moved first to fair ground, then to foul. Mac Hornaday hovered over it, waiting to pounce upon it the moment it was unmistakably foul. The third baseman danced by his side. Their two pairs of eyes watched that miserable little ball as a cat watches a mouse. Suddenly it struck a tiny bit of earth thrown up by the spikes of a base runner. It wavered, almost stopped, then, with a final revolution, came to rest a clear two inches inside the whitewash line. Hornaday seized it and threw like a flash to first base. He was too late. The base umpire crouched low and spread out his hands. The runner was safe.

The next man sacrificed. The base runner had too good a start to permit of his being caught at second. Peters, the catcher, called for the play at first, and Hornaday, fielding the ball cleanly, got his man.

One out and a runner on second.

Hornaday surveyed the situation, pulled up his belt, studied the batter coolly for a moment, and then pitched with all his force. The batter chopped at the ball. It glanced off the top of his bat and sailed high in the air. Peters ran back nearly to the boxes, swayed, ran forward and backward, then lunged sideways, caught the ball in his capacious mitt, stumbled for a step or two, and fell headlong. He held it firmly, but, cumbered with chest protector and clumsy shin guards, it was a long moment before he could get to his feet. And in that moment the runner managed to cover so much of the distance between second and third that Peters' throw was too late to catch him.

Two out, and a runner on third! Every man on the white clad team had played perfectly, yet that runner had moved all the way around from the batter's box to third base with the help of three successive bits of pure baseball luck.

It was evident, even to Mary's untrained eyes, that the white team was a little nervous. They clapped their hands and dug their spikes into the dirt and shouted a bit overconfidently at their great pitcher. That important person took his time. He dropped the ball on the ground, took off his glove, and with a calm glance at the prancing base runner retied his shoe. The crowd was screaming encouragement at him. The umpire was haughtily waving him to proceed with the play. The man at the plate was nervously gripping his brown bat and shifting his weight uneasily from foot to foot. But the most famous of pitchers deliberately finished his quite needless little undertaking.

Every man and woman of the fifteen thousand understood perfectly. Every one knew that nothing so unnerves a ball player as the thought that the "break in the luck" has definitely turned against him. And every one saw what the great Mac Hornaday purposed, here and now, lifting and steadying the spirits of the eight men behind him.

He was ready. He pitched, using every ounce of speed that was left in that weary arm and fixing his whole mind on the delicate manipulation of his fingers on the ball at the precise moment of releasing it.

The batter swung blindly—a fraction of an inch too high. The ball struck the ground in front of the plate and bounded slowly but directly into the hands of the third baseman. The batter was the fastest man on the Cub team, one of the fastest in the whole world of baseball. He ran for first as he had never run before. The Giant third baseman, as he caught the ball looked about and wavered. The tension had reached his nerves. Hornaday was shouting at him to throw to first, but he hesitated a moment too long. Then he threw to the plate.

Peters received the ball perfectly. The runner, two-thirds of the way home, stopped in his tracks and turned back. Peters started to run him down. Hornaday hurried in and covered the plate. The other basemen all came rushing across the diamond to get into position for a "run up."

The runner dashed for third. Peters threw. The runner darted back.

And then, while the fifteen thousand rose to their feet and did their utmost to split their fifteen thousand throats, something happened. The ball rolled on the ground. Bachman, the shortstop, who was close to the play, pounced on it, whirled, and threw to Hornaday at the plate. He was too late. The runner, plunging earthward in a desperate slide, was easily safe. The cheering sank into a groan and then into silence as suddenly as if a great blanket had been thrown over the fifteen thousand.

But all was not over. The umpire, mask in one hand, indicator in the other, arms thrown wide apart, was still standing over the play. Hornaday received the ball, knowing well that it was too late, and looked down. There lay the runner, a foot short of the plate, his face white and pinched with pain, his left leg doubled under him at an angle that could not possibly be assumed by a leg that was not broken, and badly broken.

Hornaday, ball in hand, looked at him with pity, and with a painful thrill of the fellow feeling every thoughtful ball player knows, the feeling that it may be his turn next.

"Touch the plate," said Hornaday quietly.

The prostrate man lifted an agonized face toward him, then, with an evident effort to collect his wits, reached painfully out and rested a hand on the rubber.

"Safe!" bawled the umpire.

An ambulance appeared and the injured man was hurried away. Hornaday returned to the pitcher's mound and struck out the last man.

The score was tied, 3 to 3. And the astonished crowd that had a few moments before worshiped their pitcher as a hero now heaped mad anathemas on him. They shouted and jeered. They were disappointed, angry, ugly. They uproariously accused him of throwing the game.

"That was fine," she said.

Gus Grenfell smiled queerly and shook his head. "I guess you don't understand, Mary," he said, with a firm, hard note in his voice. "He absolutely should not have done it. He had no right to. He is paid to win games, and you can't win games with sentiment. Sentiment is a nice thing, of course, in its place. But you can't win ball games with it. And you can't close deals with it. The moment you think of the other fellow you're lost. You've got to put it over—don't you see, Mary? It may not be the pretty thing, but it's what you must do to succeed, just the same. When you've got your man groggy, knock him out. That's the law of fighting, of baseball, of business, of life. There's no escaping it. . . . Of course"—there was now a trace of contempt in his voice—"if you're not out to succeed, why, that's different. The world is full of men who think pretty thoughts, who do things fairly well, who are good enough to last until something happens. It's the man who can deliver the punch when the something does happen that counts."

He broke off. It was the longest set speech she had ever heard him make. It was the first time he had ever bared his mind to her; hitherto he had always presented to her the lighter side that he presented to all women.

And curiously, with a quick flash of perception, she knew, and she knew he knew she knew, that he had said too much. A little stiffness, of a new sort, grew up between them in that moment. She made an unusual effort to overcome it. Not since the early days of their acquaintance had she been so agreeably sunny with him. For some reason the remainder of that close, brilliant game seemed to matter not at all to her. The tension that had gripped her so—that continued to grip all the others of the fifteen thousand until Mac Hornaday's own three bagger drove home the winning run in the fourteenth inning and restored him to his niche in the fans' hall of fame—was over so far as she was concerned. There was a light in her eye and a quick responsiveness to the humors of the crowd and to the yellow glow of sunlight that some invisible and quite irresponsible painter was splashing prodigally over the beautifully smooth turf of the outfield.

When they parted, at her door, she thrust out her hand with a frank, pretty gesture.

"Gus," she said gently, "we've been friends a good while. I have a whole lot of admiration for you. I think I shall always like you. But it is not right for us to go along—as we have been—because I know I shall never, never be willing to marry you." Her voice faltered, but she finished bravely. "I'm sorry, Gus—sorry it has to be this way. But it is this way, and we can't either of us help it."

Then she pressed his hand and fled indoors.

The telephone rang. Mary herself answered the call.

"Yes," she said, then lowered her voice—"yes, Mr. Hornaday."

"I've come back to town," he said. "And if—if you care to see me——"

"I should be glad to see you," she replied in a voice that was astonishingly steady.

"Well—I guess you know how I feel about it," he stumbled along. "If it could be soon—you see, it got pretty lonely down there at Harper's Mills after you left."

She hesitated, then, in spite of herself, gave way to a rippling little laugh. "I shall be at home this evening," she said.

This is how it came about that the great and humble Mac Hornaday came to Mary Bentley's house and claimed her for his own.

After it was all over; after he had told her and she had told him; after the perturbed Mrs. Bentley had found her hand in the gentle grip of an immense person who looked down at her with a respect and a simplicity and a really irresistible sense of unconscious power that was, to put it mildly, bewildering; then the two of them, the big man who moved so easily and gracefully and the slender, pretty girl, strolled out across Riverside drive and seated themselves on a bench where they could see the river glisten under the rays of a full moon, where they could idly watch the anchored battleships and the electric soap advertisement and the twinkling lights of the amusement park on the cliff across the river. They were quite alone, sheltered from the impertinent glare of the drive by the dense foliage of early June. His arm, with a thrill that for the moment destroyed all power of speech in him, slipped about her shoulders. And she nestled happily against him, for she was his.

After a time she said softly, almost timidly: "I was very, very proud of you today, Mac."

"Proud of me!" he echoed blankly.

"Yes—when you let that man have his run."

He bent his head down and looked into her eyes in some astonishment. "Why," he said, "why—were you at the game?"

She nodded brightly.

"It was a fine thing to do," she murmured. "I loved you for it."

"O—that," he said thoughtfully. His manner grew sober, as it always did when he was speaking of the work which had for so long given him a great name and an excellent livelihood. "No, that was wrong. I shouldn't have done it. It wasn't baseball. But when I saw the shape the poor devil was in—well, it struck me that I'd rather put it over by pitching. It was foolish, I guess."

She said nothing, merely nestled closer and sighed a happy little sigh and looked with misty eyes across the shining water at the electric soap advertisement. He did not know that he had used Gus' phrase "put it over," and used it with a difference.

Well, it didn't matter. Nothing mattered.

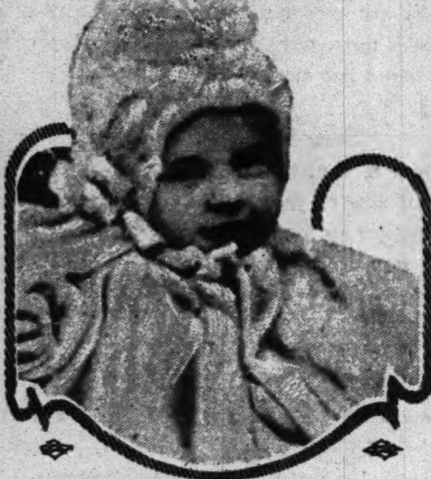
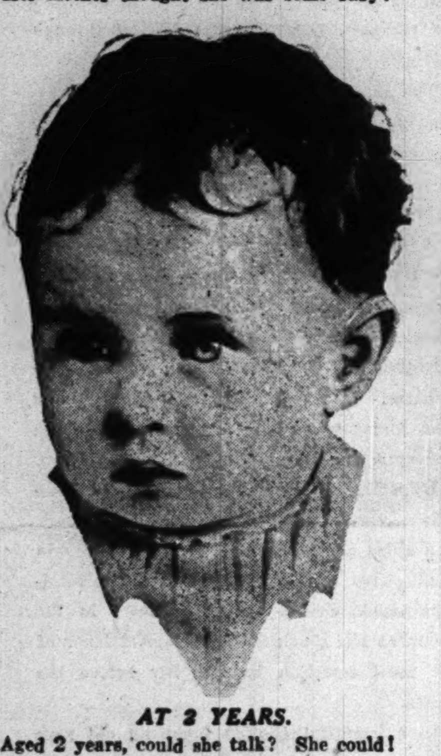
BILLIE "JUST GROWED" —LIKE THIS.

When Billie Burke came into the world, Billie Burke's mother—Mrs. Burke—after the manner of mothers, being thoroughly convinced that unto her had been born a seventh wonder of a seventh wonder, decided to keep an album in which she would place from time to time portraits of what the gods had given her. Little Billie—in truth a lovely baby—promptly began to fulfill expectations. She grew into an adorable child, budded into a flower of a girl, and as a woman has been acclaimed one of the most beautiful in the world. The pictures contained in the album interested me so much that I begged them for you. You're going to be so wonderfully interested in the new serial in which our Billie will appear that I think it would be rather a nice idea for you to start a Billie album of your own. Was denkst?



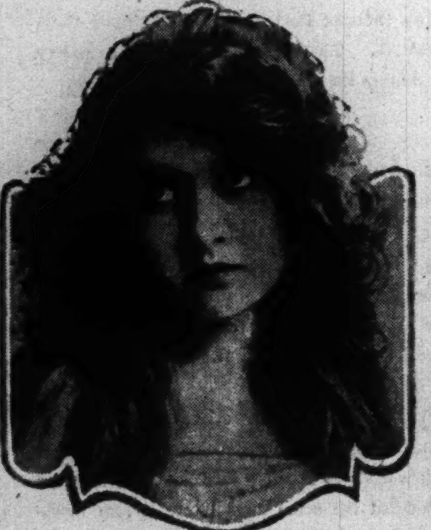
AT 3 MONTHS.

At 3 months old, we think, maybe
Her mother thought she was some baby!



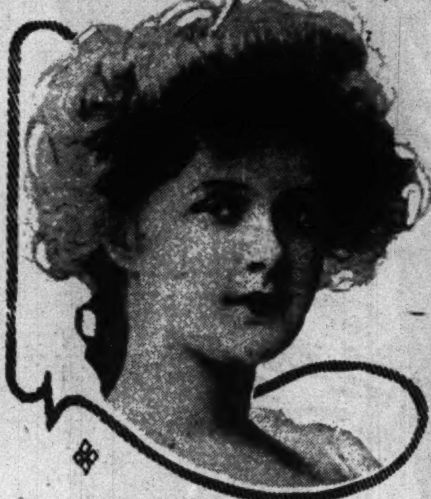
AT 2 YEARS.

Aged 2 years, could she talk? She could!
Though only mother understood.



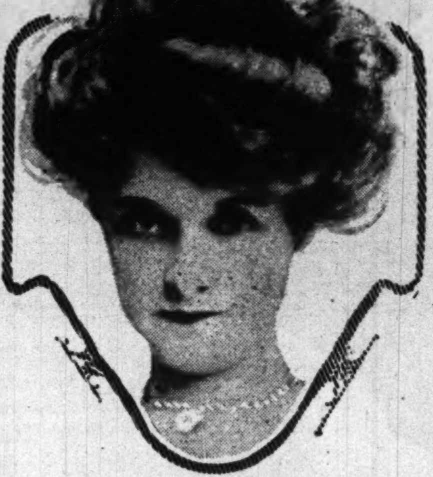
AT 14 YEARS.

To London, then, the maid did go—
They thought 'twould help her singing so—
Then toured. In pantomime the rage—
Soon left it to go on the stage.



AT 16 YEARS.

George Edwards saw her—hair a curl,
Engaged her for his play "Schoolgirl."
As "Mamie" she took her first cue.
She sang a song, "My Little Canoe,"
Which made a hit, gave her a name,
Gave her a running start toward fame.



AT 19 YEARS.

At 19 years—The Fates were true.
Miss Burke played leads. With whom? John Drew.

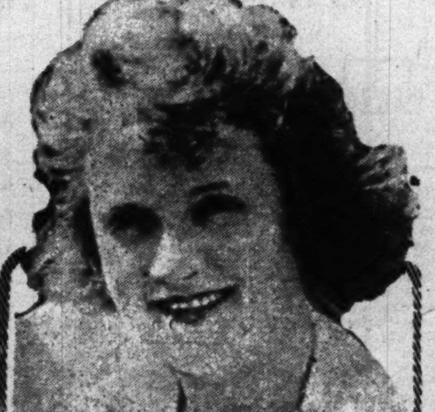
SINCE THEN—

She's been in myriad parts and plays,
Subject alike to "knocks" and praise.



AT 24.

And then Success, with flag afurl
She won o'er night in "Mind-the-Paint-Girl."

AT 26.

And more success then, in a hurry,
Was hers when she was starred in "Jerry."

AND NOW.

And now—ah, now—she reigns imperial,
Queen of the world's best movie serial!

(I have always longed to burst into poetry. Whether or not this is poetry is a question in my mind. Annyhow, it's the burst I can do.)

Vote for the Picture of Your Favorite Player.

Vivian Martin received the highest number of votes this week. Her picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon, the following six are the leaders: Wilmuth Myrkel, Marshall Neilan, Mignon Anderson, Mary Miles Minter, Marie Dressler, and George Field.

Duncan McRae

GOOD looking Duncan McRae of the Arrow Film company, formerly of Edison, is a "bloomin' Britisher," having been born in London some thirty-five years ago. Mr. McRae, who is without doubt one of the best looking men in pictures, was on the stage before entering pictures. You may have seen him with Fannie Ward, Charles Wyndham, or other well known stars. He is a versatile young man, can play almost any sort of a part, but his specialty is heavy leads. Mr. McRae has been married. He has brown hair, blue eyes, is five feet nine and one-half inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. His hobbies are golf, motoring and boating. Mr. McRae, you will be interested to know, is a brother of Bruce McRae and a nephew of Sir Charles Wyndham. He came over here just eleven months ago to go into the photoplay business. Look him up, girls; he's well worth seeing.

Told by the Stars on the Stars

JACKIE SAUNDERS.

Pretty little Jackie Saunders of Balboa, known as the Maude Adams of the films, was born on the sixth day of October, and comes under the sign of Libra. It, therefore, falls the lot of the young lady to—

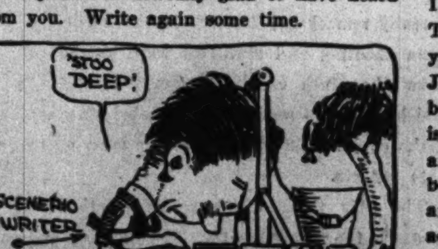
Wear a topaz—his birthstone. Choose his friends among those born between Feb. 20 and March 21 and between June 22 and July 22.

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

ADDA: Yes, Mary Pickford has light hair. Her eyes are blue—or maybe these are changeable eyes, since you say you heard they were blue at times, gray at times, and violet. I am awfully glad you like the Right Off the Reel page well enough to read it every Sunday. It's perfectly nice to be 12 years old and inquisitive, isn't it, Adda? Beverly Bayne is in her twenties. No, little lady, you are not too inquisitive. Awfully glad to have heard from you. Write again some time.



MARION: If your plot is too deep to write a synopsis on, rest assured it'll be too deep for a scenario editor, no matter how patient, to wade through. But whadda yuh mean "too deep"?

E. L. R.: It gives me much pleasure to inform you "Ladies of the West" that Thomas Meighen is with the Lasky company, Los Angeles, Cal., and will no doubt be pleased to answer your letters if you inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply. Yes, he is vurr handsome, girls!

JOHN E. A.: Charles Chaplin in real life is unmustached. He is about 25 years of age. Lottie Pickford is married. She has brown hair. So has Marguerite Clark. Charles Chaplin is not married. I dinna ken how much he gets a week. If he had a habit of walking in real life like he does in pictures I don't think he would be allowed to walk far if there was a perfectly good, healthy policeman on the job. O, land, I don't how how many automobiles he has. The chances are he uses taxis. You wish you were he? Well——. No, Mary and Jack Pickford are not twins. They are brother and sister. Jack is 19, while Mary is about 22 or 23. Am I married? Echo answers, Am I? How old am I? Ask somebody else. Mr. Bushman is not Irish, he is an American. Whether or not he is a good actor is something you will have to decide for yourself, I'm afraid.

JANE: I disagree with you, Jane, when you say you are a poor writer. I should call you a "happy writer," for you have that God given faculty of making every word you put down mean something pleasant to the recipient. The little lady who took the part of Rosina in "An Alien" was Blanche Schwed (I mean that just the way it is spelled; don't think it is German for Blanche Sweet). Yes, I remember Gertrude Quinlan vurr well. I interviewed her. She was in pictures for a time, but recently I have heard nothing of her. When I do I will put a note in the paper.

WILLIAM N. T.: To know that I brought comfort to the heart of an exile from home makes me very happy. How nice of you to let me know how much you appreciate the Right Off the Reel page. I do hope I may continue to keep you interested. Regarding Jean Dumar, about whom you inquire, I am glad to give you all the information I have. Miss Dumar was born in Pittsfield, Mass. A year ago she came to New York to make a name for herself. She applied for a position at the Vitagraph studios, and, even though inexperienced, secured a position. During that year she has worked with Vitagraph, also with Mr. Griffith in the Reliance brand of the Mutual company, and has also done work for the Famous Players. She just recently joined the Edison company. She is still in her teens. Please write to me at any time I can be of help to you and don't be lonesome. One hundred and twenty-five miles isn't so vurr vurr far away.

J. O. N.: "Better known as 'Pee Wee' or 'Happy.'" How do you do! If you don't mind, will you please tell me why you are better known so? The Fairbanks twins are 14 years old. Yes, I think Blanche Sweet is quite as sweet as her name. She is about 22 years old. Lottie Pickford is 20 years old. No, Mr. Chaplin has not been forced to quit playing for any reason whatsoever. Florence La Badie is pretty. She is 21 years old. You have not been a bit of trouble. Indeed, you may write again, the sooner the better.

BUSHMAN ADMIRER: The fact remains that Mr. Bushman is married, and has been for a number of years. He has five children. His wife is not an actress. Beverly Bayne is not married. Marguerite Snow is with the Metro company, 1465 Broadway, New York. James Cruze is working with the Lasky. He will probably send you his picture if you will write and ask for it, inclosing a quarter or stamps for that amount. Vurr wekkum.

B. R. S.: Better hang on to your goat. I'm sure Mr. Kerrigan wouldn't know where on earth to keep it. It would be a case, I'm afraid, of your getting his goat instead of his getting yours. "Some observash!" quoth she.

HELEN: Yes, Marguerite Clark played a double rôle in "The Prince and the Pauper." You would like to know how it is done? Well, I have an article on the doubling process that I can send you if you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write again some time. I love to receive letters.

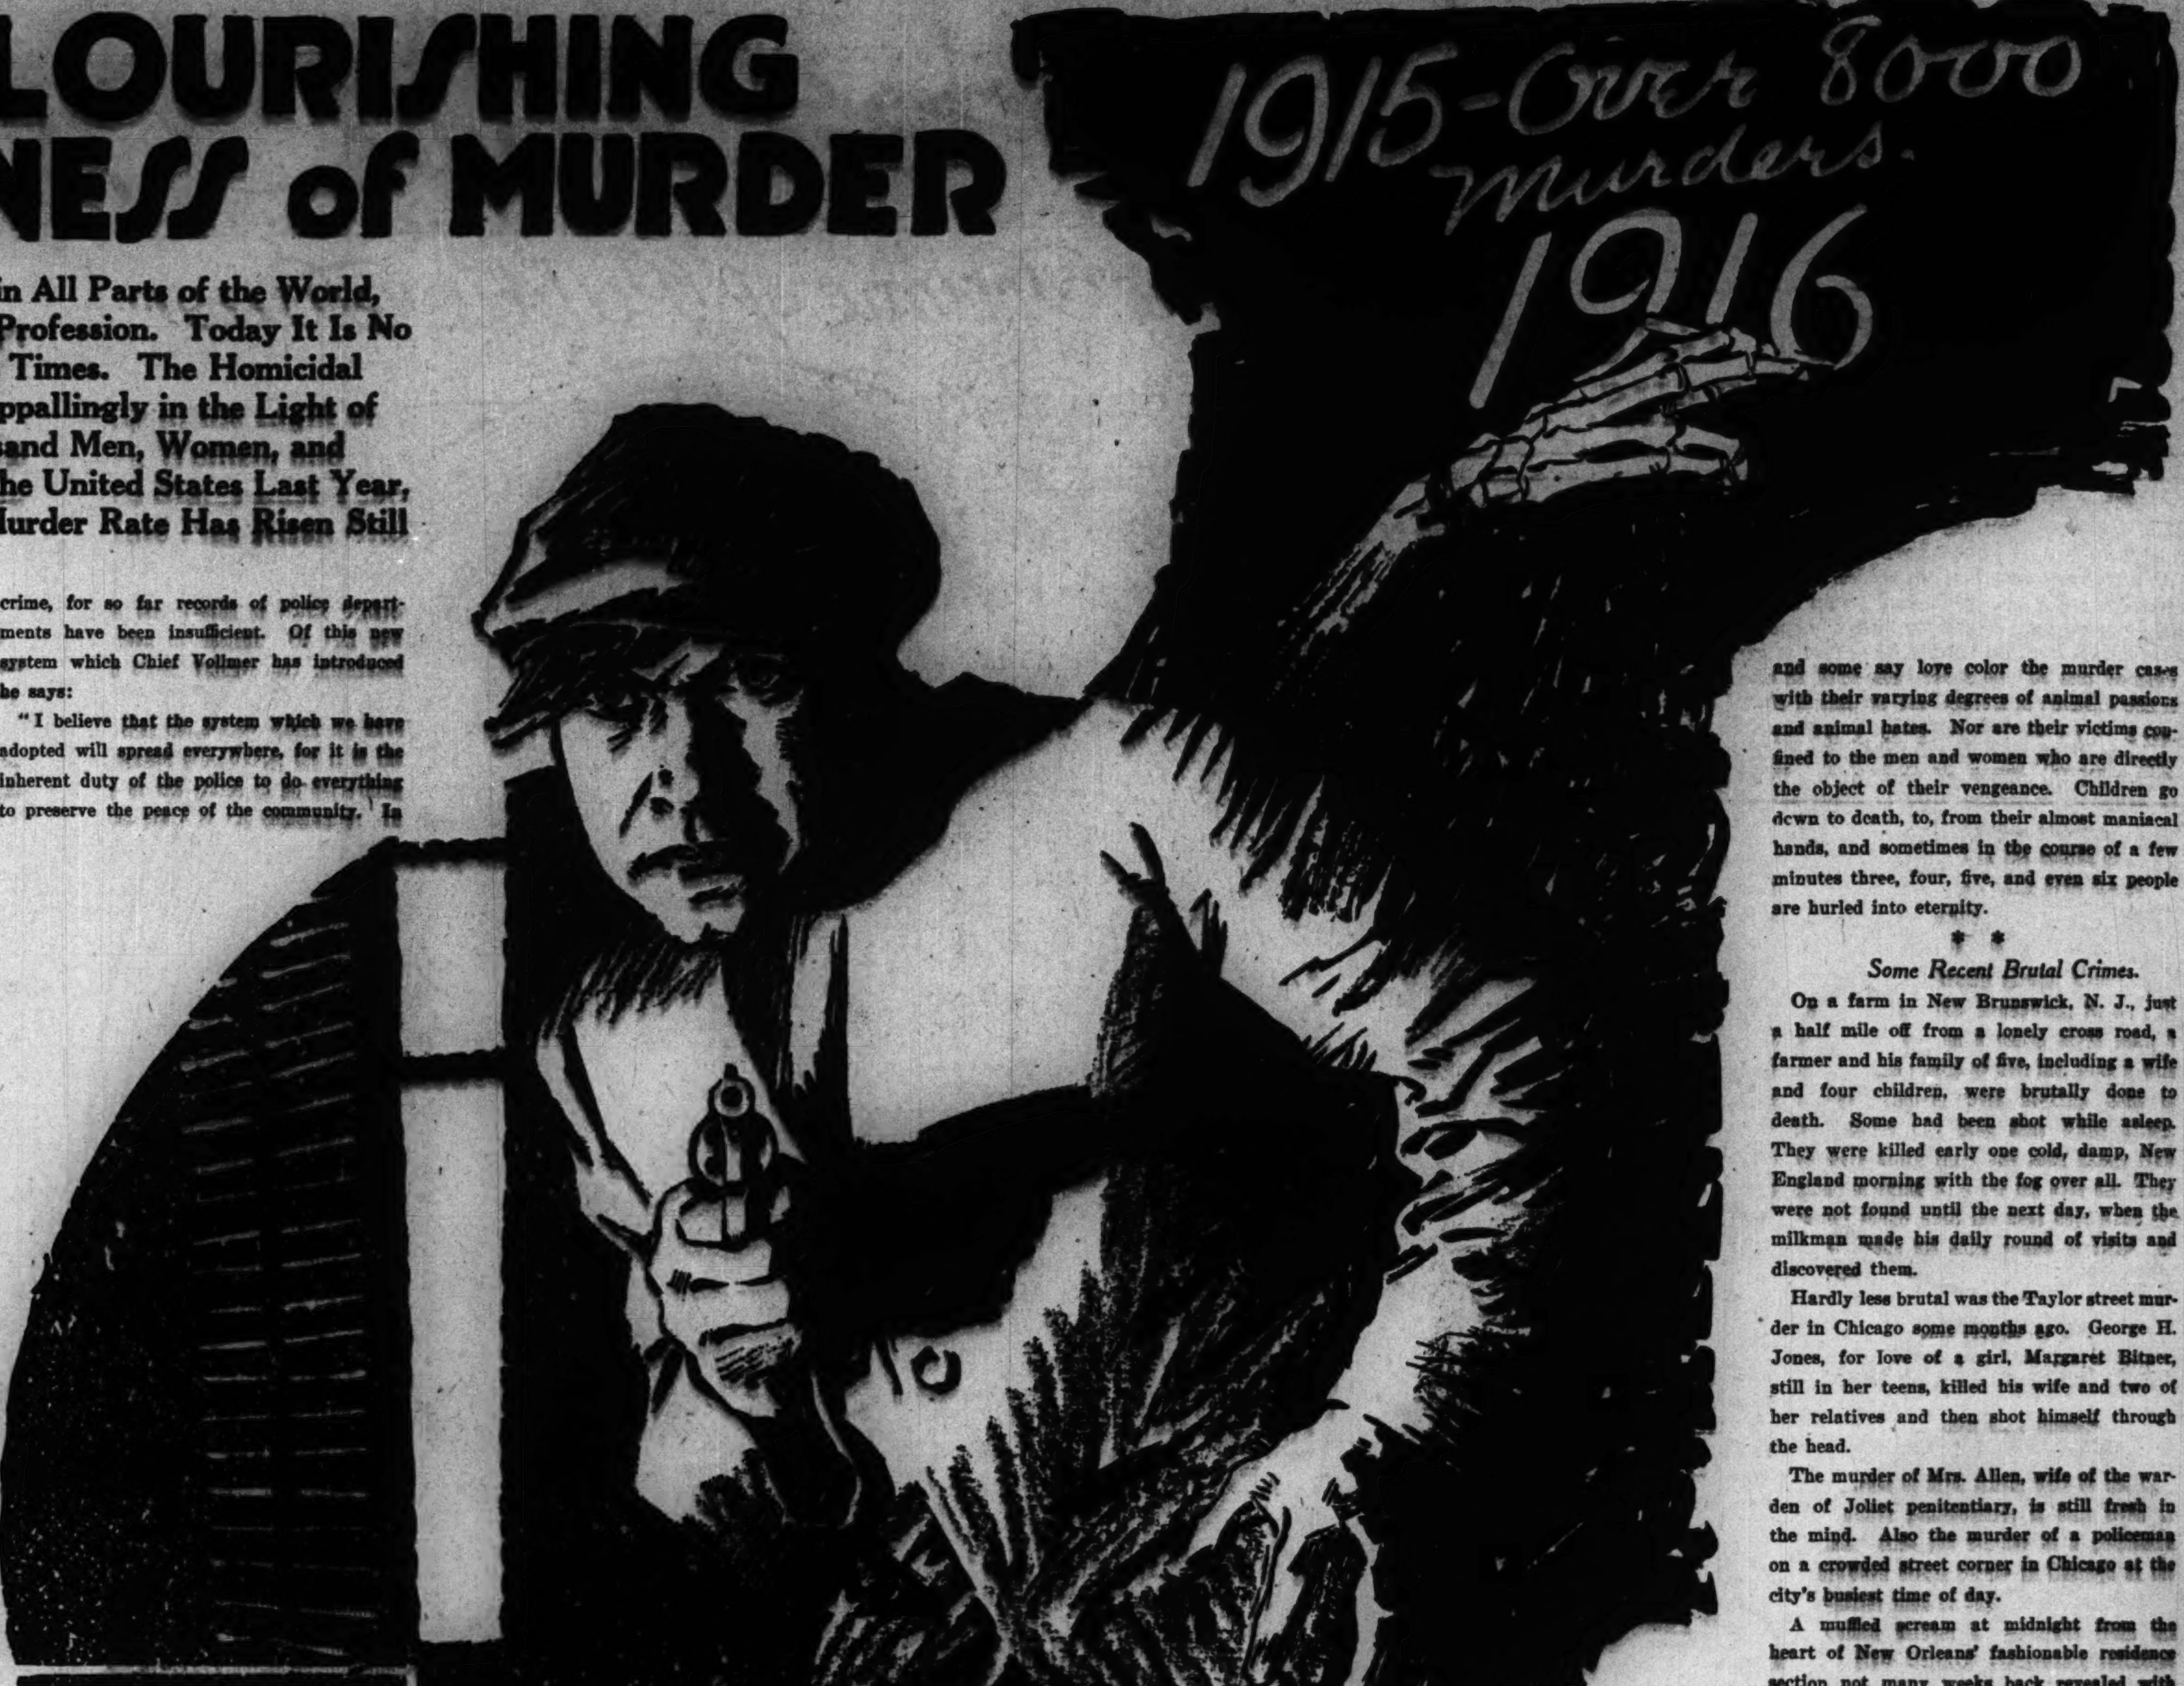
THE FLOURISHING BUSINESS of MURDER

Homicide, in All Times and in All Parts of the World, Has Been a Much Practiced Profession. Today It Is No Less Popular Than in Other Times. The Homicidal Passions of Men Show Up Appallingly in the Light of 1915 Statistics. Eight Thousand Men, Women, and Children Were Murdered in the United States Last Year, And So Far This Year the Murder Rate Has Risen Still Higher.



MURDER! Murder!! Murder!!! Grim visaged, blood red, it stalks day and night, night and day, all over the land. A big business it is here in the United States, and, even more than a business, it has become a full fledged, flourishing industry. No hint of hard times in the wholesale manufacture of murders.

Last year this giant industry broke all previous records in numbers and outfictioned all fiction in horrors. Over 8,000 men, women, and children were murdered in the United States in 1915. Just the precise number had not been accurately determined, but, judging from the statistics on hand, there are nearly a thousand more than the year preceding.

Various efforts are being made in different parts of the country to combat this evil. One of the most unique and interesting is the new school for policemen which has been started in Berkeley, Cal., by Chief Vollmer of San Francisco. Police are to be taught efficiency in the handling of criminals and degenerates, as well as the ability to recognize degenerate and subnormal elements in the men in their own particular districts. For the experience of years in all large cities has developed the principle that in the degenerate lies the key to the problem of discovering the perpetrator of the crime. And it is just this principle which has been overlooked by the majority of the defenders of the law.

Every week policemen meet in Berkeley and take their lessons in the science of criminology, and every week the men apply their knowledge in practical form and bring in the results of their week of observation.

To take a case in point, if a brutal murder has been committed the first move in discovering the perpetrator of the crime is to take account of all the subnormals and degenerates in the community. With trained policemen who know how to recognize the subnormal in men a roundup of the suspects is not difficult and in six cases out of ten the criminal will be among those men apprehended.

Officers Give Advice

The reports handed in at the end of the week show interesting developments in the minds of the pupils. One policeman observes: "There is no excuse for not recognizing the moral imbecile early in his career and treating him as all mental defectives should be treated. An enormous percentage of crime would come to an end in this way." Another officer writes: "The law could be speeded up to excellent advantage in an enormous number of cases. If we could administer prompt and efficacious punishment on all criminals and delinquents the number of offenses would assuredly be diminished enormously."

The police are taught also the great need of discriminating between the man who is simply intoxicated and the man who has fallen in an apopleptic state, or, again, the man who has received a blow on the head and is in a condition of stupor. Further, the causes of drunkenness, of delirium tremens, and of paranoia, the last the most dangerous of all the diseases, are gone into carefully. The policemen are instructed to look after those victims of delusions who plan the murder of their supposed enemies and those who are suffering from various peculiar mental diseases. In many cases the policeman is the first to come in contact with the erratic man. He is tearing about creating a disturbance and it is "up to the police" to find out whether he is criminal or whether he is mentally sick.

One of the most frequent mental diseases is that which is called maniac depressive insanity. The victim may be a prominent man in town before the germ fastens itself upon him. He begins by letting his business slide, getting excited easily, and yielding to impulses to "show off." It is not long before he yields to one impulse too many, goes to pieces completely, and the police are sent for. It is important then that the policeman should be able to recognize that the man's conduct is brought about by disease. He should be treated as a sick man.

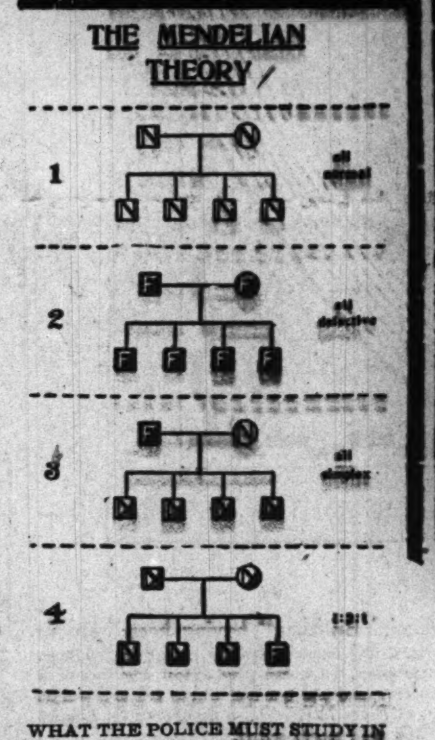
Believes System Will Spread.

It is expected that the police departments will be much helped by the data which has been systematically gathered and compiled by these trained men. No legislative body so far has ever been presented with facts underlying crime, for so far records of police departments have been insufficient. Of this new system which Chief Vollmer has introduced he says:

"I believe that the system which we have adopted will spread everywhere, for it is the inherent duty of the police to do everything to preserve the peace of the community. In the past they have devoted themselves to the punishment of the criminal—from now on they are going to devote themselves to the prevention of the criminal act as well."



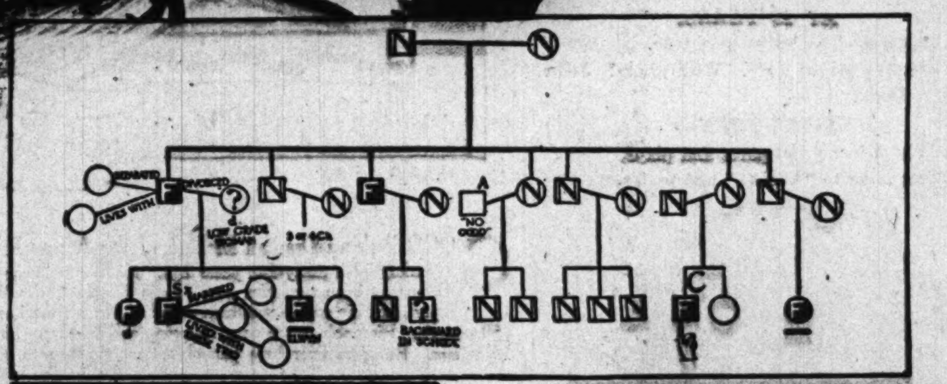
WHAT THE POLICE MUST STUDY IN ORDER TO UNDERSTAND CRIMINALS

The Mendelian theory of heredity, as outlined on the chart above, must be thoroughly mastered by the guardians of Berkeley's peace and order. On the chart, squares represent males and circles females. "N" stands for "normal" and "F" for "feeble minded," while black and gray shadings indicate subnormal characteristics. For example, chart 1 shows that the children of normal parents will be normal, and chart 4 shows that a subnormal father and mother will have one normal child, two children with mentality equal to that of the parents, and one feeble-minded child. The chart errs in only one particular—all the children are indicated as males.

The charts shown on this page must be well mastered by the police if they are going to understand the fundamental principles underlying crime and the criminal; if they are going to lessen materially the fearful increase in this business of crime.

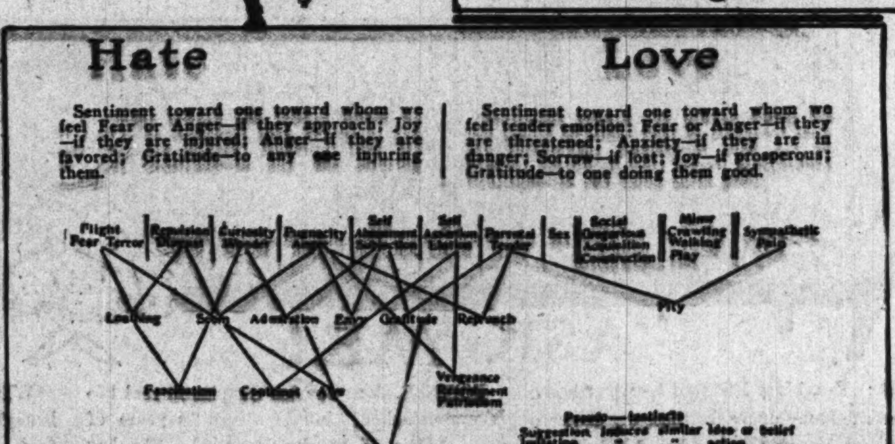
From the standpoint of wanton assassination Memphis, Tenn., is the most dangerous place in the world to live in. The rate of people murdered there was 72.2 per 100,000. Not even the darkest spot of crime infested Russia approaches these statistics. Up against this was Reading, Pa., with a per cent of 1 per 100,000, which makes Reading the safest place in the country. Charleston, S. C., follows Memphis with a rate of 33.2 per 100,000. New York has a murder rate of 6.1 per 100,000, while Chicago outmurders New York by 3 per cent with a rate of 9.1 per 100,000.

The south steadfastly refuses to give up its lead in this murder industry. Of course, much of the percentage is due to Negro troubles. Then, to, there is that emotion heated climate to be considered. This, coupled with the whisky drinking and gun toting, helps to reap the bloody harvests.



FIXING RESPONSIBILITY FOR CRIME.

This family history was more complex than the other record of degeneracy, for it was a case where a weak strain broke out occasionally in a group that was otherwise normal. It showed, however, that each bad child tainted following generations, as in the case of the man on the left. "C" indicates "criminal," and marks the person on the chart whose ancestry interested the police. The whole study introduced to the police one of the difficult problems encountered in working out a scientific treatment for crime.



Hate: Sentiment toward one toward whom we feel Fear or Anger—if they approach; Joy—if they are injured; Anger—if they are favored; Gratitude—to any one injuring them.

Love: Sentiment toward one toward whom we feel tender emotion: Fear or Anger—if they are threatened; Anxiety—if they are in danger; Sorrow—if lost; Joy—if prosperous; Gratitude—to one doing them good.

ANALYZING EMOTIONS FOR THE POLICE.

The chart reproduced above was used to make clear the interrelation of emotional reactions so that the police could better understand excited and hysterical people with whom they had to deal. Thus, for example, "contempt" is composed of self-assertion and scorn; "scorn" in turn is composed of anger and pugnacity, fear and terror, disgust and repulsion. Typical analyses of hate and fear, according to the data on the chart, are also reproduced.

Murders Increase in Number.

A careful perusal of the police records shows beyond doubt that no fiction story is so fantastic that real life does not in some way approach it. Indeed, there are those who claim that fiction produces fact from psychological causes and the hideous French murder in Paris of Mlle. Marie Christophe, which is said to repeat the most remarkable and essential features in Edgar Allan Poe's tale, "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," carries out this last theory.

The appalling increase in the number of murders for this last year has come as a surprise to many people who were of the opinion that with the vanishing of the drug evil a similar slump in homicides was resulting. Indeed, last summer there were all sorts of optimistic articles to the effect that there was a really remarkable decrease in the homicides from shooting and statistics were quoted to show the truth of the statements. All of which statistics seem to have faded into the realm of fiction in the light of the most up to date reports.

The only thing which seems on the decrease is the use of bombs. Blackmailing and the Black Hand devotees are not flourishing as in former days. Only thirty-five persons were killed in the United States from the Black Hand last year and nineteen by the highbinders and tongs.

But there were 4,256 murders from quarrels, 2,832 from unnamed causes, 728 from jealousy, 389 from liquor, and 135 cases of infanticide—over 8,000 murders last year. There were 118 persons hanged and 96 lynched. Again, of course, the southern states ran high in the lynchings, with thirty in Texas and three in Oklahoma. One man was lynched in Illinois.

Killing Is Safe and Profitable.

According to all signs of the times, murder appears to be one of the safest of crimes. That is, in this country. In one week last fall more murders were committed in the state of Kentucky than in the whole British empire. In this country, too, about one person in 100 is punished. In England one person in three who commits a murder is put to death.

The price of murder is going up. Murder is about the only business that can keep its price up no matter how many are involved in it. A year ago an ordinary knockdown job would cost about $10 and the thug would have to make his own getaway. A killing cost about $500. Now, though, a killing has jumped to $2,500 and carfare out of town. Also an automobile is included to aid the fleeing criminal. Louisville is about the only city where the price of killing has not gone up considerably. There a flat price for murder is maintained of $250.

In India there is a fantastic and fatal religion of murder called Thuggee. And there, with only a mild protest from society as a whole, the believer pursues his course with an even less number of fatalities annually than here in America!

All passions play their part in contributing to the fearful toll. Lust, greed, hate, jealousy, and some say love color the murder cases with their varying degrees of animal passions and animal hates. Nor are their victims confined to the men and women who are directly the object of their vengeance. Children go down to death, to, from their almost maniacal hands, and sometimes in the course of a few minutes three, four, five, and even six people are hurled into eternity.

Some Recent Brutal Crimes.

On a farm in New Brunswick, N. J., just a half mile off from a lonely cross road, a farmer and his family of five, including a wife and four children, were brutally done to death. Some had been shot while asleep. They were killed early one cold, damp, New England morning with the fog over all. They were not found until the next day, when the milkman made his daily round of visits and discovered them.

Hardly less brutal was the Taylor street murder in Chicago some months ago. George H. Jones, for love of a girl, Margaret Bitner, still in her teens, killed his wife and two of her relatives and then shot himself through the head.

The murder of Mrs. Allen, wife of the warden of Joliet penitentiary, is still fresh in the mind. Also the murder of a policeman on a crowded street corner in Chicago at the city's busiest time of day.

A muffled scream at midnight from the heart of New Orleans' fashionable residence section not many weeks back revealed with morning light a girl's body. She had been strangled and then burned quite beyond recognition. It was thought that the girl had been forced to swallow a bottle of corrosive antiseptic fluid to bring about her own death.

By a Mrs. Mary Palams of San Francisco was committed one of the year's worst crimes. She killed a poor cripple, cut up his body in small pieces, and then, stuffing them in a wardrobe trunk, shoved the trunk down in the basement and continued her peaceful tenor of life until detection brought her before the courts.

In a beautiful Florida home an old man and woman were found murdered in their beds. From the peaceful expression on their faces it was thought that death had trapped them unawares. They were killed for a paltry few dollars that they had in a writing desk.

As Told by Poe.

Hundreds of small girls were put to death during the year. One of the worst cases was that of little Anna Cohn, 5 years old, who was killed in New York, hardly a block away from her home, at 7 o'clock in the evening. Her body was found, fearfully mutilated, in a pool of blood hardly fifteen minutes after the crime.

Still another ghastly crime was that of a young Polish girl in Brooklyn, N. Y. The body was thrown into a city pool and was not discovered till some days later. From newspaper descriptions the body was in "fearful condition." A description of Poe's "Marie Roget" describes it better than any other.

"The face was suffused with dark blood, some of which issued from the mouth. No foam was seen as in the case of the merely drowned. There was no discoloration in the cellular tissue. About the throat were bruises and impressions of fingers. The arms were bent over on the chest and were rigid. The right hand was clenched and left partially open. On the left wrist were two circular excoriations apparently the effect of ropes or of a rope in more than one volution. A part of the right wrist also was much chafed as well as the back throughout its extent but more especially at the shoulder blades. The flesh of the neck was also much swollen. There were no cuts apparent or bruises which appeared the effect of blows. A piece of lace was found tied about the neck so tightly as to be buried in the face and almost entirely hidden from sight. This alone would have sufficed to bring about death. The dress was much torn and was of fine muslin, while the dainty little hat was still caught about her neck by long velvet streamers."

This is only an "ordinary" crime, too, atrocious as it may seem! There is nothing "outré," as the French would say, about it. It happens again and again, many, many times a year. It is only one of 8,000. And the rate is going up every month!

Doris Blake Says

That woman's weaknesses, vanities, virtues and vices remain unchanged with the passing centuries may be readily concluded after reading the Advice of an Aztec Mother to Her Daughter written in the Fifteenth Century and reprinted below. In fact, since the days of Eve, woman has changed only in the cut of her clothes—and no braggable change at that.

WHEN you meet a maid in State street with "come-on-along" eyes, "ah-there" brows, scarlet lips, and much rouged cheeks, ten chances to one, if you have passed the 40 mark, you say, "Dear, dear! How different were the girls when I was young!"

When you read that Mr. Brown is seeking a divorce from Mrs. Brown on the grounds of a soulmate incident of Mrs. Brown's monotonous career, you shake your head and say, "When I was young a married woman gave no thought to any but her husband."

When you hear your neighbor talking about dresses, hats, and frivolous adornment, you say, "It's all the modern woman lives for." And you heave a despairing sigh for the good old days—the mythical old days—when woman gave little or no thought to personal adornment.

When you hear the high pitched, strident tones of a girl seated near you in the public conveyance, you say regretfully, "These modern girls are losing all their sweet womanliness in the strife for independence." And if the tone be nasal you blame American parentage.

If her walk be hurried, you say, "It is the rush and bustle of our modern mode of living." And you put violent emphasis on this last decision if "nerves" overtake her.

If you detect her casting sidelong glances in the direction of a passing male, you rebel at the carelessness of modern mothers in not instilling the cardinal virtue of modesty in their daughters.

If she be married, and seeks to find excitement or favor in the eyes of another than her husband, you blame the American business man for his unfortunate devotion to business, or you lay the cause of matrimonial discontent to a too early marriage or some other like cause.

No matter what the vice, folly, or indiscretion, in your opinion, modern conditions are at fault. Never the woman herself!

Not a Modern Product.

Now, the frivolous, foolish, fascinating little flirt is not a product of modern conditions. The little miss who paints her cheeks and stains her lips is not a twentieth century novelty in womankind. The married woman who gives favor to another than her husband is not generative of the easy divorce methods of today. Since the beginning of time woman has changed only, perhaps, in the cut of her clothes. The weaknesses, the vanities, the vices, and the virtues of the girls who frequent the "movies" and the matinées, the dansants, and the cabarets are identical with those of the first frail daughters of humanity and all the succeeding generations of frail feminine humanity upon this shore of time.

We read the counterpart of some of our wives of today in the history of one of the women of the old Roman nobility, Julia, wife of Agrippa, "who was possessed of a passionate, imperious, bold, and impudent temperament. She affected silks purchased at great price which ladies of the older type considered a ruinous luxury, not alone because of the expense but because of the indecency and the prominence which they gave her figure. She loved extravagant festivities and the joyous company of elegant youths."

Aztec Mother to Her Daughter.

In "The Conquest of Mexico," by William Prescott, there is a letter highly illuminative of the unchangeable femininity of women of every age. It is called the "Advice of an Aztec Mother to Her Daughter," translated from Sahagun's "Historia de Nueva Espana." The Aztecs were one of the tribes that occupied the tableland of Mexico on the arrival of the Spaniards in America. In this letter of the Aztec mother almost every phase of feminine folly, vanity, and vice as it is known today is touched upon; the tendency to turn the head to look at this and that when going through the street; the temptation to allure the other sex by colorful cosmetics and frivolous clothing, the vicious habit of restlessness and instability which we call "nerves" today, the nongentleness of voice, temptations of the married woman, and so on. And the allegory told as a warning and example for living aright is as applicable to the 1916 debutante as it was to the Aztec maid of the eleventh century.

That woman is and always has been a creature of the same emotions, the same capacity for good or evil, will scarcely be disputed after you read the letter of the Aztec mother to her daughter as printed herewith:

My beloved daughter, very dear dove, you have already heard and attended to the words which your father has told you. They are precious words, and such as are rarely spoken or listened to, and which have proceeded from the bowels and heart, in which they were treasured up; and your beloved father well knows that you are his daughter, begotten of him, are his blood and his flesh; and God our Lord knows that it is so.

Although you are a woman, and are the image of your father, what more can I say to you than has already been said? What more can you hear than what you have heard from your lord and father, who has fully told you what is becoming for you to do and to avoid? Nor is there anything remaining, which concerns you, that he has not touched upon. Nevertheless, that I may do toward you my whole duty, I will say to you some few words.

The first thing that I earnestly charge upon you is that you observe and do not forget what your father has now told you, since it is all very precious, and persons of his condition rarely publish things; for they are the words which belong to the noble and wise, valuable as rich jewels. See, then, that you take them and lay them up in your heart and write them in your bowels. If God gives you life, with these same words will you teach your sons and daughters, if God shall give you them.

The second thing that I desire to say to you is that I love you much, that you are my dear daughter. Remember that nine months I bore you in my womb, that you were born and brought up in my arms. I placed you in your cradle and in my lap, and with my milk I nursed you. This I tell you in order that you may know that I and your father are the source of your being; it is we who now instruct you. See that you receive our words and treasure them in your breast.

Fantastic Fashions Condemned.

Take care that your garments are such as are decent and proper; and observe that you do not adorn yourself with much finery, since this is a mark of vanity and of folly. As little becoming is it that your dress should be very mean, dirty, or ragged, since rags are a mark of the low and of those who are held in contempt. Let your clothes be becoming and neat, that you may neither appear fantastic nor mean.

When you speak, do not hurry your words from uneasiness, but speak deliberately and calmly. Do not raise your voice very high, nor speak very low, but in a moderate tone. Neither mince when you speak nor when you salute, nor speak through your nose; but let your words be proper, of a good sound, and your voice gentle.

In walking, my daughter, see that you behave becomingly, neither going with haste nor too slowly, since it is an evidence of being puffed up to walk too slowly and walking hastily causes a vicious habit of restlessness and instability. Therefore, neither walk very fast nor very slow; yet, when it shall be necessary to go with haste, do so: in this use your discretion. And when you may be obliged to jump over a pool of water, do it with decency, that you may neither appear clumsy nor light. When you are in the street, do not carry your head much inclined or your body bent, nor as little go with your head very much raised, since it is a mark of ill breeding; walk erect and with your head slightly inclined. Do not have your mouth covered, or your face, from shame, nor go looking like a near sighted person, nor on your way make fantastic movements with your feet. Walk through the street quietly and with propriety.

Show Serene Countenance.

Another thing that you must attend to, my daughter, is that when you are in the street you do not go looking hither and thither, nor turning your head to look at this and that; walk neither looking at the skies nor on the ground. Do not look upon those whom you meet with the eyes of an offended person, nor have the appearance of being uneasy, but of one who looks upon all with a serene countenance; doing this, you will give no one occasion of being offended with you. Show a becoming countenance, that you may neither appear morose nor, on the other hand, too complacent.

See, my daughter, that you give yourself no concern about the words you may hear in going through the street, nor pay any regard to them, let those who come and go say what they will. Take care that you neither answer nor speak, but act as if you neither heard nor understood them, since, doing in this manner, no one will be able to say with truth that you have done anything amiss.

See, likewise, my daughter, that you never paint your face, or stain it or your lips with colors, in order to appear well, since this is a mark of vile and unchaste women. Paints and colorings are things which bad women use—the immodest, who have lost all shame and even sense, who are like fools and drunkards, and are called rameras [prostitutes]. But, that your husband may not dislike you, adorn yourself, wash yourself, and cleanse your clothes; and let this be done with moderation, since, if every day you wash yourself and your clothes, it will be said of you that you are overnice, too delicate; they will call you taþepetzon tinemaxoch.

My daughter, this is the course you are to take, since in this manner the ancestors from whom you spring brought us up. Those noble and venerable dames, your grandmothers, told us not so many things as I have told you; they said but few words, and spoke thus: "Listen, my daughters; in this world we travel by it is necessary to live with much prudence and circumspection. Hear this allegory which I shall now tell you, and preserve it, and take from it a warning and example for living aright. Here in this world we travel by a very narrow, steep, and dangerous road which is as a lofty mountain ridge on whose top passes a narrow path: on either side is a great gulf without bottom, and if you deviate from the path you will fall into it. There is need, therefore, of much discretion in pursuing the road." My tenderly loved daughter, my little dove, keep this illustration in your heart, and see that you do not forget it; it will be to you as a lamp and a beacon so long as you shall live in this world.

Warns Against Pitfalls.

Only one thing remains to be said, and I am done. If God shall give you life, if you shall continue some years upon the earth, see that you guard yourself carefully, that no stain come upon you; should you forfeit your chastity, and afterward be asked in marriage and should marry any one, you will never be fortunate nor have true love—he will always remember that you were not a virgin, and this will be the cause of great affliction and distress; you will never be at peace, for your husband will always be suspicious of you.

O, my dearly beloved daughter, if you shall live upon the earth, see that not more than one man approaches you; and observe what I now shall tell you as a strict command. When it shall please God that you receive a husband, and you are placed under his authority be free from arrogance, see that you do not neglect him nor allow your heart to be in opposition to him. Be not disrespectful to him. Beware that in no time or place you commit the treason against him called adultery. See that you give no favor to another, since this, my dear and much loved daughter, is to fall into a pit without bottom, from which there will be no escape.

According to the custom of the world, if it shall be known, for this crime they will kill you, and they will throw you into the street, for an example to all the people, where your head will be crushed and dragged upon the ground. Of these says a proverb: "You will be stoned and dragged upon the earth, and others will take warning at your death." From this will arise a stain and dishonor upon our ancestors, the nobles and senators from whom we are descended. You will tarnish their illustrious fame and their glory by the filthiness and impurity of your sin. You will, likewise, lose your reputation, your nobility, and honor of birth: your name will be forgotten and abhorred. Of you it will be said that you were buried in the dust of your sins.

And remember, my daughter, that although no man shall see you, nor your husband ever know what happens, God, who is in every place, sees you, will be angry with you, and will also incite the indignation of the people against you, and shall be avenged upon you as He shall see fit. By His command you shall either be maimed or struck blind, or your body will wither, or you will come to extreme poverty, for daring to injure your husband. Or, perhaps, He will give you to death and put you under His feet, sending you to the place of torment. Our Lord is compassionate; but if you commit treason against your husband, God, who is in every place, shall take vengeance on your sin, and will permit you to have neither contentment, nor repose, nor a peaceful life; and He will incite your husband to be always unkind toward you and always to speak to you with anger.

My dear daughter, whom I tenderly love, see that you live in the world in peace, tranquillity, and contentment all the days that you shall live. See that you disgrace not yourself, that you stain not your honor nor pollute the luster and fame of your ancestors. See that you honor me and your father and reflect glory on us by your good life. May God prosper you, my first born, and may you come to God, who is in every place.

Bang!
Preparatory to a nice little $300 explosion

"Scotty" McLean

THE camp appeared on the prairie, just off the flat country road, some three miles out of Blue Island. There were probably a dozen tarpaper shacks comprising the three year old "town," which had for a background a jagged, peaked wall of earth and rocks. Here, on the edge of Chicago, there was under construction a piece of modern engineering—the Calumet-Sag canal—but to all appearances the place where the laborers were fed and housed might have been a mining camp in the pioneer days of the golden west or a moving picture setting for the portrayal of rough life in Alaska.

"Howdy, pardners!" I called to a group of men lounging on the porch in front of the tarpaper combination store and office. "I reckon you're aware I'm a stranger in these yere parts, but I trust you all don't hold that agin me. My name's Sweet—Oney Fred Sweet, long accent on the 'O'—and I'm out looking for adventure."

As I shook hands all around I could see they were sizing up my costume—my broad rimmed sombrero, the blue polka dot handkerchief about my neck, my hip boots.

"I know I'm a tenderfoot," I explained, glancing about cautiously; "I know I'm a tenderfoot, but you can't make your thrills come any too fast for me. That's what I'm looking for—thrills and adventure; I eat up that kind of stuff. I——"

But my discourse was interrupted by the clanging of a triangle over in front of the cook shanty. Immediately I ceased to be the center of attraction. "Scotty" McLean, now in his fifty-ninth year and threatening to retire as soon as he should reach 60, was announcing that he had dinner ready.

"Come on over and 'get your feet under the table,'" welcomed Barney Schnable, looking like William Farnum in "The Spoilers," with his high laced shoes and his blue shirt and his belted trousers. "I've got ya on that adventure stuff. I know what we'll do; we'll turn you into a 'powder monkey.'"

Fetching a Box of Dynamite.

There were twenty-eight of us to sit down to "Scotty's" fried fish and boiled potatoes at the long tables in the mess hall—twenty-eight of us, counting Contractor Quinn, who has been digging canals nearly all his life, and the "walker boss" of the entire section, who happened to be in our neighborhood at the time. Across the table from me sat Harry Kuhnke, the camp's regular powder monkey. Maybe you don't know what a powder monkey is. Well, I didn't know, either, but I was looking forward to finding out.

Harry Kuhnke was a tall, black eyed, red faced giant of a man who had been in the Klondyke in Alaska and up and down our western coast, powder monkeying in the mines these last ten years. I told him he could lay off for the rest of the day if he wanted to, but he "'lowed" as to how he would stick around.

"Honest," I says, "I ain't after your job."

"I've only your word for that," the big fellow answered dryly, as he led the way out of the mess hall and down the camp street until we had mounted one of the peaks of the thrown-up miniature Rockies. "Now, over yonder, you'll find the sod shanty where we keep the explosives. You might go over and fetch a box of dynamite to where we're getting ready for another blast. Be careful and not get any cigaret ashes in it, because explosives have gone up 200 per cent since the war started and the stuff comes mighty high; we can't afford to have any of it wasted."

As I traversed "the cut" it reminded me of the pictures I've seen of the Panama canal. Here we were in a war with nature, and she always puts up a stiff old fight. Harry needn't to have told me to be cautious with the dynamite. I handled it with care and I brought it safely to the spot where the "hunkies" were drilling holes in the hard rock preparatory to a nice $300 explosion. There at the drills Sava and Tony and Nick and Masso—half of them Austrians and half of them Serbs—were working together like brothers.

"You should have heard Masso play the bass fiddle on Saturday nights when he first came here," reminisced the powder monkey, as he began opening the box of dynamite with a spade. "That was before the war started. I've seen fellows come into camp with everything from a whistle to a bugle, but this was the first time I ever saw a bass fiddle brought onto a job. When the war started I used to say to Masso: 'Why don't you go back home and fight?' and he used to answer: 'No, me save all my money and go back home and get a farm and get married.' Now he says, with a shake of his head: 'My poor country all gone; me stay here,' and he don't play the fiddle any more. He's started to hit the booze on Saturday nights."

Like Miniature Earthquake.

Dynamite doesn't look a bit like I thought it did. The box I fetched was packed tight with what they called "sticks." The sticks were really round paper packages, eight inches long and three inches thick, that were filled with what looked like harmless white sand. After the hunkies had drilled some sixty holes in the hard rock—holes that were twenty feet deep and three and a half inches wide at the bottom—the powder monkey and I began packing the sticks into the holes. We put about twelve of the sticks into each hole, making what he called a "cartridge" of the stick in the middle. This cartridge was made by tying two electric wires about it, the wires coming up out of the hole to be connected with a lead wire which, in turn, was connected with a battery a thousand feet away. When we had finished filling the holes and filling them in with sand the powder monkey gave the signal and the whistle over on the engine that manipulated one of the steam shovels emitted a warning toot for the crew to get under cover.

"Yes, it's about to rain rock and dead lizards that used to be on the surface along about 3,200 years ago," commented the powder monkey. "You bet they all know enough to get in out of the rain, too. Watch 'em hit for cover! Not long ago a hunky got curious and stuck his eye up to a hole in the shed over there to see what the exposion looked like. A rock whined over and put his eye out. You see what curiosity will do sometimes. Listen! It's as still as death."

And through the silent, uninhabited "cut" the powder monkey and I passed until we came to his battery on the top of one of the jagged peaks.

"See," explained the powder monkey, "all I have to do is push down this lever."

"Zowie!"

I can imagine something of how it must have been at Ypres. There was a deafening roar and the earth on all sides of us began to shake. A great cloud of dirt and smoke and rock lifted itself toward the heavens, hung for an instant sixty feet in the sky, and then settled again in a crumpled mass, tiny bits of rock hurling in all directions like sparks from a Roman candle.

"There was a piece of channel a hundred and twenty feet wide, sixty feet long, and eighteen feet deep in that cloud," explained the powder monkey. "Beats digging it out with a spade, don't it? Look out for those friendly rocks! Hear 'em splash in the water below there! Don't turn and run or you're apt to get the worst of it; keep your eye on the explosion, always."

When Two Minutes Isn't Long.

It was all over, so far as the big explosion was concerned, but the time was not ripe as yet for the big shovel, reached forth by what seemed a powerful human arm, to scoop up the debris in three and a half cubic yard handfuls. The "dobe shots," for taking care of the big rocks left in the mass of prehistoric deposit, were necessary before that long iron arm, pawing out 120 feet, should viciously scratch together five tons of the world at a grab and swing about to place the load 235 feet from the point where it had been picked up.

The powder monkey let me assist him while we prepared these "dobe shots," going from one to another of the big rocks, laying on each a half dozen small dynamite sticks, attaching a cap to one of the sticks in each instance, and packing the dynamite over with clay, leaving a two foot fuse emerging from each little mound.

Say, a two foot fuse isn't so very long when you stand in the middle of a bunch of 'em like that! Those clay piles made me think of so many cannon crackers all ready for action on an insane Fourth of July. By the time we got 'em all fixed and patted down they made me think of volcanoes.

"The whole idea," explained the powder monkey, "is this: Now, each of these fuses is cut to last two minutes. When we start to light 'em we must rush from one to the other and get 'em all to going before we make our getaway. You can light some of 'em and I'll light some of 'em. Be sure you don't miss any or the job's a failure. A man't got to be more or less scientific on this work. You know about how long two minutes it, don't you? If we don't get well out of here before the first fuse gets down to the dynamite—well, it isn't like any other sort of accident, where there's something to hold a funeral over. You simply disappear. Hold on there a minute with those matches! I'll tell you when to start. I remember once out west when a pal of mine, after getting all the fuses properly lit, happened to stumble in making his getaway—hit his head upon a rock, was knocked unconscious, and when the smoke cleared away—well, they hunted and hunted and couldn't find so much as a piece of his shirt. Understand now why they call us fellows 'powder monkeys'? No wonder you can't keep that match going the way your hand trembles. Remember what I said—when you hear the explosion look back to see which way the rocks are going, so you can dodge in the right direction. I recall one time——"

"Sizz!"

"Sutter!"

"Sizz!"

The sparks were certainly beginning to eat up the fuses. At the first "sizz" I began thinking how short two minutes could be sometimes. The second "sizz" and I was beating it across "the cut." I'd like to describe what the "dobe" explosions looked like, but I haven't the slightest idea, let alone observing which way the rocks flew. I didn't look back until I got clear to Blue Island.

by EDWIN BALMER

Herewith is presented the fourth installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieut. Barrett, suspicious of the presence in the North Atlantic of the combined fleet of the European league of former enemies, defied the government's orders and directed the course of the U. S. Scout cruiser Salem in search of the league's fleet. When the Salem encountered the foreign fleet the latter fired the first shot—a deliberate act of war. The number and class of vessels of the fleet and the fact that it had fired on the United States vessel without cause was wirelessed back to Washington, and the small cruiser, against terrific odds, engaged the enemy fleet. After sinking one of the largest of the enemy vessels the Salem was sunk.

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a U. S. navy lieutenant, and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archetype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of the imminence of danger to America, and his deafness is shared by his son. They are impatient with Bob and Agnes' talk of war and impatient with Bob's refusal to leave the service and take a high salaried job with a concern owned by one of Ashby's friends. In the Ashby works there are two foreigners, expert chemists, whose night work, together with the discovery in the factory of an incendiary bomb, arouses Bob's suspicions. After a visit to the brass works at night Jim and Bob, while driving down a lonely road, discover the two chemists on motorcycles ahead of them. The chemists accelerate their speed, and as Bob and Jim dash after them one of them hurls back a bomb that explodes with terrific concussion near the car. A duel with revolvers ensues, and one of the chemists, who are in reality league spies, is killed by the explosion of one of his own bombs.

On the dead body of Ingouf, the chemist, Bob and Jim find an envelope with the address, "S. D. Marlatt, Insurance, Chicago," and a torn note showing that Ingouf and Enloe are spies who had received orders for their duty at the start of war. Enloe has escaped. Bob on returning home learns from his wife that he has been recalled and is to report to Newport News for service. She has learned there is a special train out of Chicago arranged by the navy department, and Bob takes his leave of her. Jim drives him to Chicago and when they reach the station the newsboys are crying the extras stating the President has called a special meeting of the cabinet. There is a large crowd of men around the station, most of them speaking a foreign language.

[Copyright: 1916: By Edwin Balmer.]

"WHO are you?" Jim suddenly challenged one of them.

The fellow gazed suspiciously and shook his head.

"Who are all these men?" Jim demanded. "What nationality?"

The man moved away and another retreated at the same challenge. Jim returned to his car.

"The recall that came to you is general." He handed over the paper to Wendell and started the car. "Some news reached Washington at about 10 o'clock which made the president call a cabinet meeting at once."

The car rushed through a district of flat buildings where newsboys were shouting the alarm of the news. On both sides window after window was flashing into light and men and women, startled from their sleep, were leaning out hailing the news carriers. It was ten minutes before train time when the car reached the union station. Instead of the single passenger car added to the mail train—of which Wendell had learned over the telephone—a long line of lighted coaches stood on an eastbound track with a sign at the end: "Special, for Washington and Newport News." Two young men about Bob's age were there; they were in ordinary clothes, but before they saw Wendell or he spoke to them Jim knew they were officers also recalled. They hailed Bob quietly; he shook hands with them and introduced them to Jim.

"Why the train?" Wendell inquired.

"We're taking some of the sailors from the Lakes Training station east with us."

Wendell nodded. "Where's Sibert?"

"You got anything for him?" the other two asked together.

"You bet."

"What?"

"Tell you on the train."

The sound of marching men brought them all about, gazing back toward the station. The gates to the tracks were being opened wider, and the railroad men stood back as the first of a column of bluejackets descended the stairs from the street and streamed out to the cars. They were just active, lithe, strong young men, Jim saw—they were little older than boys, most of them—such boys as Mart Ware of the machinists' apprentices in the brass works at Elgin; but, as these boys marched by in order together with easy, swinging step, heads up and hands at their sides, Jim warmed with his blood beating through him. They were wanted at Washington or at the seacoast! At this hour of the country's danger the nation had called upon them for protection, and at the call they were responding, each boy disciplined and ready, each trained to do what his country now called him to do.

Jim turned at a touch on his shoulder. Bob drew him aside and introduced—as "Mr. Sibert of the secret service"—a stocky, quiet, direct eyed man of about 40.

"Mr. Wendell has told me what you have done tonight and has given me the evidence which you obtained," Sibert said. "If you are questioned or connected in any way with Ingouf's death I will know it and will advise or assist you."

Sibert moved off. The forward coaches were filled with bluejackets; the officers who had accompanied them came back and shook hands with Wendell. The train conductor addressed the officer in command. You are ready, sir?"

"All ready."

Bob extended his hand to Jim. "It was a mighty good thing, as it turned out, that you insisted on running the car in. Sibert is much pleased with what we gave him; he thinks it was just what he needed."

Jim flushed. Sibert had spoken to him as one who might require aid, not as one able to give aid to those working for the nation in this emergency. Bob was giving him credit for having done something which he had not been expected to do. "I've told Nellie that I believe it's best if she stays in Elgin, for a while anyway," Bob went on. "I know I don't have to ask you to look out for her for me. Good-by, Jim!"

"Good-by!" Jim replied, but held to Bob's hand. "I'm going back to Elgin; but I'm not going to stay there!"

"You mean——"

The train was about to start and Jim spoke quickly. "Was that gun you used on the road yours or the government's?"

"Mine," said Bob surprised.

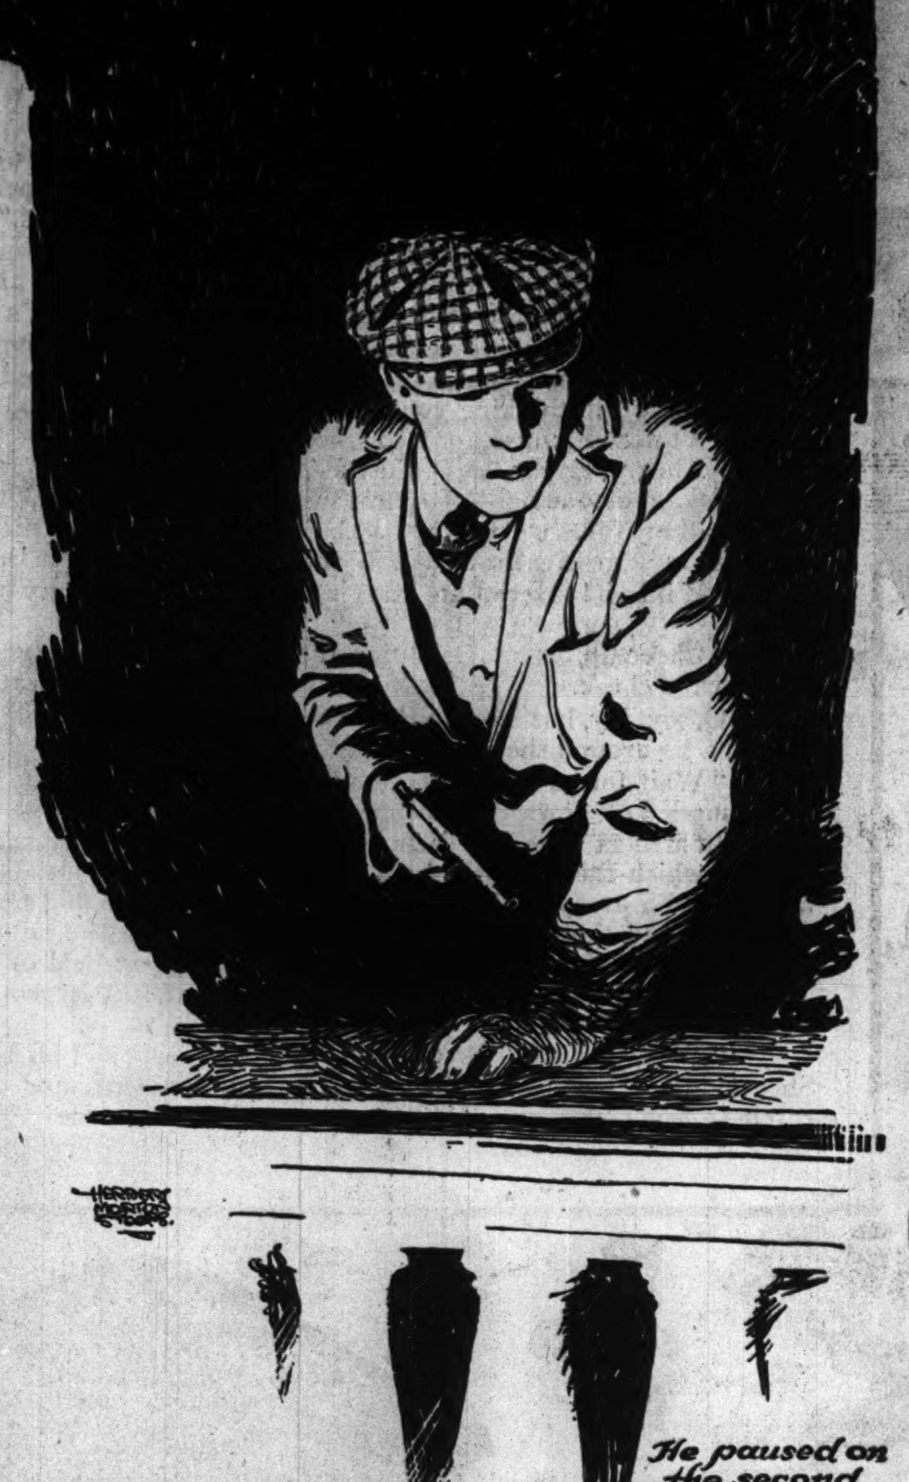
"Then give it to me! Never mind why I want it. Give it to me!"

He seized it and the cartridges as Bob pulled them from his pocket. Wendell leaped for the platform of the train and caught it. The train moved from the station, the baggage porters and switchmen and the station attendants all standing and staring as the crowded cars left the sheds. They watched the cars—those men used to the departure of a hundred trains a day—until the tail lights had entirely vanished or become lost in the red and green glow down the yards. As they moved away, a porter took the placard from the iron stand which had been at the rear of the train. "Special; to Washington and Newport News." It had been hastily improvised with letters pasted on cardboard. But how many times again would it be used? How many more signs must be printed to stand at the rear of trains and guide marching men before the war, which was begun that night, would be won?

For now Jim knew indeed that war was begun. It was an errand of war—before the declaration, indeed, but still no less an errand of war—upon which Ingouf had been riding when he had been overtaken; it was war which Bob had waged with him and which had destroyed the regent's agent; it was war—war being waged, silently perhaps and only in the issuing of orders here in Chicago at the spies' headquarters, from which Ingouf's letter had come. Jim held his hand in his pocket over the revolver which Bob had given him and he searched eagerly about the station. He had obtained the revolver with the purpose of joining with Sibert and his men when they went to the address which Ingouf's letter had given. But now Sibert had disappeared from the station, and if any of his men were about Jim did not know them.

"President calls army chiefs to midnight meeting! Extry! New extry!" a newsboy was shouting in the street as Jim came from the station. "Army and navy chiefs called to White House!"

Jim now neglected the papers. He jumped into his car and turned it toward the business center of the city. The address upon the letterhead which Bob had found on Ingouf's body was that of a well known business block; the office was 312; that meant it was on the third floor. It was the name and address which—Bob said—were valuable. So Sibert probably had started for that office to seize its contents.



He paused on the second floor and listened.

Here and there all night restaurants were open; other lighted windows proclaimed hotels or newspaper offices; but the rest of the business district was black, except for the street lamps, and particularly black was the great building which—according to the evidence of Ingouf's body—housed the headquarters of the regent's spies. A little beyond this building, however, a motor car—a private touring machine, not a taxicab—was standing at the curb; a man was waiting in the driving seat and the engine was running. Jim passed this car and turned the corner into the next street, where he left his machine. He came back on foot and examined more carefully the front of the tall business block. As he gazed up now he saw a glint in a window on the third floor—a glint from a light within, not a reflection from the lights in the streets. Jim's pulses leaped as he saw it. He looked about the street, but except for the man waiting in the touring car, no one was in sight; the man had turned in his seat and was watching Jim as he went and tried the front door of the building. The door was locked and Jim went around to the alley.

There was a small door there, with glass in the upper half, through which he could see a lighted entrance to be used by janitors and scrubwomen after the main door of the building was closed. This door also was locked, but there was a bell beside it which Jim pushed. He rang but once before a janitor, in blue shirt and overalls, appeared and opened the door. Evidently he had recently been roused, and he seemed to expect rather than to be surprised at this call at his door.

"Can I get into this building?" Jim asked him.

"What office are you connected with, sir?"

"S. D. Marlatt—the insurance office on the third floor."

The man stepped back; the reply seemed to be exactly what he expected. "Mr. Marlatt's up there now. You know the way, sir?"

Jim stepped in, his blood beating hot through him. So there was indeed light in the office and Marlatt himself was up there. Clearly, after rousing the janitor to get in, Marlatt had told the man that another connected with his office would come and the janitor had taken Jim for that one. Jim went on into the building alone, playing the part of one familiar with the interior. A light, probably turned on for Marlatt, was burning over an iron stairway which went up beside the elevator shafts. Jim ascended slowly and cautiously, but in the silent marble walled building his footsteps echoed again and again. He stopped at the landing, and, taking his revolver from his pocket, he felt of the backs of the cartridges to make certain that all chambers were loaded. He gained the second floor; he found in the dim glow of a single electric bulb the stairway to the third and began to ascend. Halting at the landing and listening, he made out no sound from the floor above, but from below he heard the echo of voices and now the noise of some one hastily ascending the stairs. One of the men below was the janitor; the other, evidently, the man for whom the janitor had mistaken Jim, the one whom Marlatt had expected to follow him into the building. That man knew that some one, just ahead of him, had asked for Marlatt's office.

Jim gained the third floor and slipped down the hall to the right; it was all dark about him now, as the light on the stairs was around the corner; but the office, from which the glint of light had showed to the street, must be close ahead. Jim, holding his revolver ready in his right hand, felt the office doors with his left. They were of the ordinary type, with ground glass in the upper half just above the lock. As he moved along, with the sound of the footsteps of the man following closer each moment, he formed his plan swiftly. There was no time for him to delay or to get help; if anything was to be done there it must be done at once and by him alone! Marlatt's coming to the office at that time in the morning could mean only one of two things; either the chief of the regent's spies knew that his office was suspected and he had come to remove or destroy all evidence concealed there, or, at the moment in which America was arousing to war, he had come there to set in motion some prepared plot against the security of the country.

Jim's heart beat so that the blood in his throat seemed choking him; his hands were cold and wet, but steady. There was no light at all inside the doors before which he had halted; but now he had come to an office where some one was working. There was the barest sound of movement and a low light; some closely shaded desk light, probably, gave the faintest glimmer through the frosted pane of the door. Jim no sooner discerned this than his finger tried the door knob; finding the door locked, he struck instantly with the butt of the revolver, smashing a hole through the glass; he struck again, smashing the hole larger, and thrust his arm in, turned the knob on the inside, jerked his arm out, kicked the door open, and sprang within and crouched with revolver ready.

Between his first smash of the glass and before he made the hole larger, light had glowed through on his hand; if he had not been sure of that he now might have believed he had broken into an empty room; it was absolutely black and silent. Curtains pulled close over the windows shut out all but a feeble reflection of light from the street, and there was no sound of any sort in the room or in the building. The noise of footsteps following up the stairs had ceased; the man in the hall either had halted at hearing the attack on the door or else was creeping, as Jim himself had crept, silently down the corridor.

This silence endured for a hundred hurried gasps of breath without evidence of any one either in the other part of the room or in the hall; then sharply, suddenly, a bell began ringing in the blackness just in front of Jim. It was so close that he started and gasped inaudibly; then he controlled himself and cautiously shifted his position a little to one side. The ringing was the telephone bell; for a few moments it rang sharply and incessantly; then it ceased. Jim had made no move to answer it; the other man in the room—if there was another now in the room—also had failed to make any move; the signal had elicited no response from the other side of the shattered door. Whoever was in the room was waiting for the force of the threat to him to develop; the bold breaking in of the door must have made him believe that more than one man had come; similarly it had halted, or held back, the man in the hall. He had thought he was following but one man; now he must be believing that others were within call. But in a moment more, if Jim remained inactive, they must guess the truth. He had been safe so far by acting rashly; he moved forward now, feeling for the light switch, to explore the room.

A flash of flame almost in his face—so close that the powder stung on his cheeks and the fumes choked him—flung him back off his balance. He fired back; that is, his finger jerked on the trigger and his revolver roared after the other; but the bullet could have found no mark. He recovered himself, crouched, fired again—blindly, or only in the general direction of the flame which had burst at him. The flash of the other revolver spurted again, but it did not stun him so much this time. It was something else striking him a second or so after the shot—something which bruised and stupefied him with its first shock, with its next knocked him down, and with its third . . .

THE HOUSE OF SECRET AGENTS.

He was lying face downward upon some sort of a leather couch when he became conscious again; there was a tremendous pain in his head, and when he tried to move his hands he discovered that they were tied together and bound to his body. These discoveries brought him sufficient memory of the struggle and gave him such realization of his present condition that he made no move after the first which told him that he was securely bound; he made no outcry, and after his first look at the black leather couch upon which he lay he closed his eyes again and lay as inertly as possible.

The pain in his head continued. He had never been wounded by a bullet, so he could not decide from the nature of the pain whether the wound in his head was from a pistol shot or not; but it was enough like the pain from ordinary blows to cause him to feel that he probably suffered only from a cudgeling which had temporarily stunned him. He had no sensation of hurt or of wetness from bleeding which caused him to suspect a wound elsewhere; his arms ached, but only from the tightness of the rope binding him, and his legs were bruised as though he had been kicked or trampled upon.

The smell of strong tobacco, of the sort smoked in a pipe, was the first sensation which gave him knowledge of his surroundings; the smoke was thicker at one moment than at another and thus told Jim that the smoker was then in the room. He was sitting—or standing—quite still, for, though Jim listened intently, he heard no sound but the puff at the pipe. The deneness of the smoke indicated that the room was small, and as Jim ventured to peer above the edge of the couch he discovered that to be the fact.

An electric light displayed a portion of a brightly papered wall upon which were hung pictures of the type which men have in their dens; a fireplace and mantel, upon which stood mugs and statuettes, were also in sight; there was a window—a window of the ordinary size and pattern for a residence, with painted woodwork and with silk curtains caught back by a cord. The window was closed, and the shade, which was dark and fitted close to the window frame, was drawn all the way down.

Before he observed these details Jim had supposed that he was a prisoner in the office into which he had broken or elsewhere in the office building—perhaps in some basement room. Now he recognized that he must have been taken when unconscious to some house of the better sort.

The pipe smoker, who appeared to be acting as a guard, sat at the head of the couch so close that the smoke from his lips blew hot against Jim's cheek, but he was so placed that Jim could not see him without moving. Jim continued careful not to betray consciousness, and the next minute he was rewarded for his caution. A step approached the door, and as the door opened the smoker stood up; a man—plainly the superior of the guard—entered the room and stopped beside the couch.

"He's not conscious yet?" he said impatiently to the guard, who now had ceased to smoke.

"No, sir, not a move yet," the guard replied with deference.

The "sir" put his hand upon Jim's shoulder; it was a strong, firm hand and gripped with determination; it shook Jim back and forth and then let go. Jim had let himself lie as limply as possible and had made no resistance to the shaking.

"You must try again to revive him, Bole," the "sir" directed. "If whisky and water do not bring him about, do anything else."

"Yes, sir."

"Try at once; he"—this did not refer to Jim; it plainly referred to some one in authority over the "sir" and whose wishes were to be obeyed—"must know within an hour, certainly, how he"—this referred to Jim—"learned."

The "sir" went out and shut the door behind him. Bole again puffed at his pipe, but he also poured water into a glass; he added liquor and carried the glass to the couch. Jim still lay as he was left, on his side. He managed yet to feign stupor, though the blood was pounding within his brain and tingling in his neck. He had just received the answer to the enigma which had bewildered him since he had regained his senses; he had just heard the explanation of the puzzle as to why he had not been shot after the fight in the office and left there.

The reason that the spies had taken him prisoner and carried him away was that he had shown that he had learned certain of their secrets; if they had killed him or left him in the office building their act would have operated only to direct more attention toward that office and they would have lost all opportunity to trace through him the location of the fault in their chain of secret agents. With Jim a prisoner and in their power they could force from him—or apparently they were determined to try to force from him—what he knew about them and how he learned it, so that they might mend their chain where it was broken, or at least take precautions against the break bringing greater danger to them. Till they could discover where the fault was it was plain that they must move with extreme caution and at too great risk.

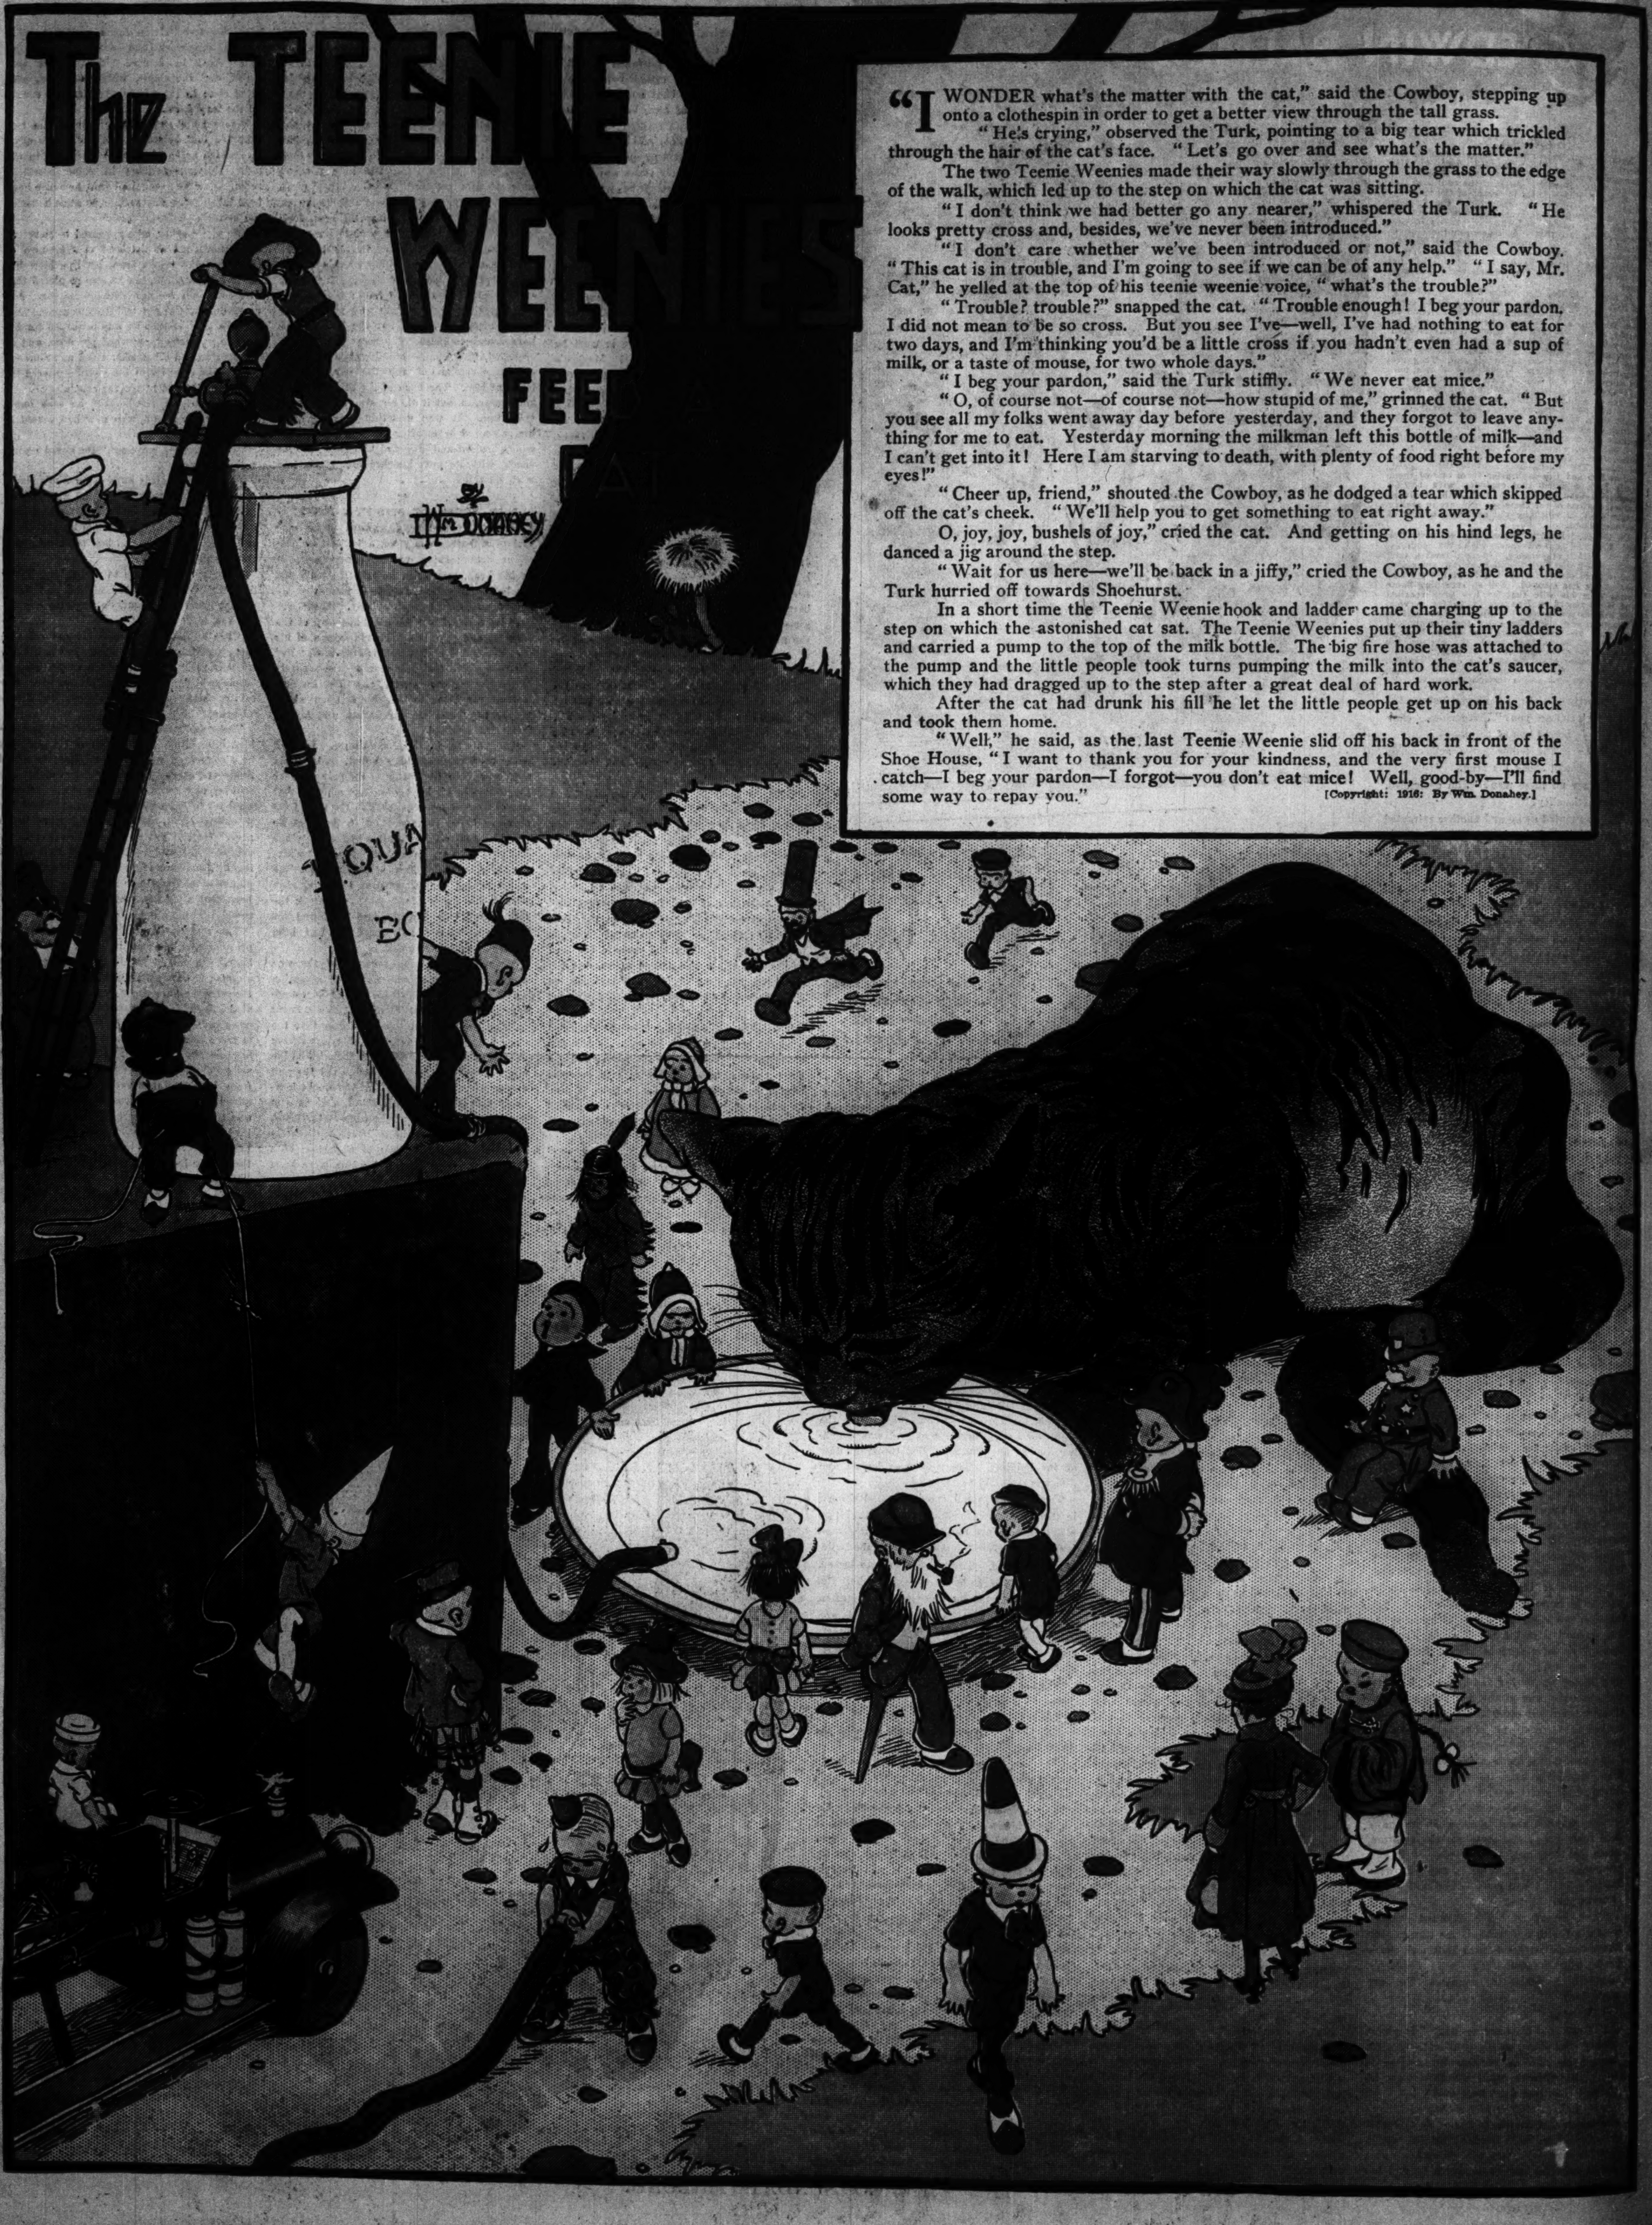
The TEENIE WEENIES FEED A CAT

By Wm. Donahey



"I WONDER what's the matter with the cat," said the Cowboy, stepping up onto a clothespin in order to get a better view through the tall grass.

"He's crying," observed the Turk, pointing to a big tear which trickled through the hair of the cat's face. "Let's go over and see what's the matter."

The two Teenie Weenies made their way slowly through the grass to the edge of the walk, which led up to the step on which the cat was sitting.

"I don't think we had better go any nearer," whispered the Turk. "He looks pretty cross and, besides, we've never been introduced."

"I don't care whether we've been introduced or not," said the Cowboy. "This cat is in trouble, and I'm going to see if we can be of any help." "I say, Mr. Cat," he yelled at the top of his teenie weenie voice, "what's the trouble?"

"Trouble? trouble?" snapped the cat. "Trouble enough! I beg your pardon. I did not mean to be so cross. But you see I've—well, I've had nothing to eat for two days, and I'm thinking you'd be a little cross if you hadn't even had a sup of milk, or a taste of mouse, for two whole days."

"I beg your pardon," said the Turk stiffly. "We never eat mice."

"O, of course not—of course not—how stupid of me," grinned the cat. "But you see all my folks went away day before yesterday, and they forgot to leave anything for me to eat. Yesterday morning the milkman left this bottle of milk—and I can't get into it! Here I am starving to death, with plenty of food right before my eyes!"

"Cheer up, friend," shouted the Cowboy, as he dodged a tear which skipped off the cat's cheek. "We'll help you to get something to eat right away."

O, joy, joy, bushels of joy," cried the cat. And getting on his hind legs, he danced a jig around the step.

"Wait for us here—we'll be back in a jiffy," cried the Cowboy, as he and the Turk hurried off towards Shoehurst.

In a short time the Teenie Weenie hook and ladder came charging up to the step on which the astonished cat sat. The Teenie Weenies put up their tiny ladders and carried a pump to the top of the milk bottle. The big fire hose was attached to the pump and the little people took turns pumping the milk into the cat's saucer, which they had dragged up to the step after a great deal of hard work.

After the cat had drunk his fill he let the little people get up on his back and took them home.

"Well," he said, as the last Teenie Weenie slid off his back in front of the Shoe House, "I want to thank you for your kindness, and the very first mouse I catch—I beg your pardon—I forgot—you don't eat mice! Well, good-by—I'll find some way to repay you."

MANY are the essentials in the wardrobe of the well dressed woman, for with every change of attire she requires various accessories that give the finishing touch to the individual costume. With the return of spring the new suit is of paramount importance, and whether it be of silk or wool material it is necessary to don a waist that thoroughly harmonizes with it. There are numerous pleasing styles designed for morning and afternoon wear, for creators of blouses realize the importance of this garment.

Three of the newest modes for spring are cleverly pictured on this page, and to the woman who delights in fashioning her own clothes they offer many interesting suggestions. Sheerest fabrics like crepe Georgette, chiffon, and tulle with the finest linens and batistes are chosen for the development of the new modes, while lustrous satins and beautiful silks combined with rare laces are favored for the more elaborate styles.

In the center of the page a waist of dull blue satin is charmingly portrayed. Cut on the popular lines of the basque, the blouse is fastened down the center front with two rows of white bone buttons. A trim waistcoat is suggested by the pale blue satin that underlies the darker shade. The sleeves, reaching almost to the wrist, are made of chiffon in matching shade. Cut rather full, they are simply finished with plain cuffs, and where these join the soft folds of the sleeve a dainty stitched frill is carefully inserted and flares prettily toward the elbow.

A novel mode of neckwear lends a charming finish to the waist. This frilly feminine affair is set up in regal style at the back and the sides, and in the front is developed into long revers that contrast effectively with the dull blue of the gown. A dash of color adds interest to the collar, for it is lined with dull blue satin.

Sheer batiste in a natural color is chosen for the waist pictured at the right of this figure. A flaring plaited collar frames the back of the neck and will look quite effective when topping the collar of the coat. Across the front a handsome motif is beautifully embroidered in white linen threads. The sleeves, quite full, are cuffed in attractive style, the shape of the cuffs repeating the outline of the embroidered panel. A belt of the same material with hammered buckle completes this charming model.

Designed as if to accentuate the demureness of the wearer, the remaining model is originated in a beautiful pink Georgette. Fashioned with a flat, round collar of tulle, this blouse is distinguished by a softly drooping frill that encircles the shoulders.

As usual, decoration is introduced on this model, for bands of narrow grosgrain ribbon are stitched to the soft folds of the crepe, the bows being arranged in steplike style. The full sleeves end in a tight wrist band, where a Georgette frill approaches the wrist.

While the blouse ofttimes proves an interesting feature of the spring suit, the hat also adds to the beauty or dignity of the costume. Illustrated in the upper right corner of this page is a delightful mode suggestive of the old time mob cap. The color—cyclamen pink—is most becoming and doubtless that is the reason for the great popularity of this shade. This quaintly shaped hat is originated in horsehair, whose delicate, lacelike texture is undeniably attractive. As if to enhance its loveliness, filmy folds of pale pink tulle are lightly draped about the crown and fall in a veil-like drapery about the face. Loosely wound around the crown is an old rose ribbon edged with silver, which in the center front is prettily bunched and set on edge.

In the opposite corner appears a dashing militarylike chapeau of smoke color horsehair braid. Trimmed with silver flowers, this model could readily be worn with gay colored costumes, for its soft, neutral tints will blend well with different colors.

The third hat illustrated on this page is built on lines that are much liked by the woman who favors picturesque styles. This model is fashioned from horsehair braid beautifully decorated with bead embroidery in a rose pattern, the soft greens and pinks being exquisitely reproduced. A narrow velvet ribbon of dull blue is slipped about the crown, bowed at the side, and finished with long streamers.

There is, indeed, a wonderful variety in the styles of headgear which are created for the adornment of the daughters of Eve. For those who prefer the small chapeau many fascinating models are shown. Not infrequently their only trimming consists of a rather weird looking bird or cockade made of burnt ostrich centered with brilliantly colored peacock feathers.

Ribbon, too, is a popular trimming and grosgrains and moires are lavishly used. A pleasing poke, or at least a modernized version of this quaint but adorable style is developed in black lisere straw. In the front an enormous chou of black ribbon with large white coin spots makes an effective decoration.

The story of hats seems almost unending, and while the small, high trimmed models are eagerly donned by women who require height, yet as the season advances one finds that the hat with extensive brim is reappearing. Silk and straw are interestingly combined in such models, while the delicate feathers of the bird of paradise are often clustered together and poised on the edge of the brim, so that greater width is added to the headgear.

MEN AND WOMEN

THREE years ago there was a case in the Criminal court of Cook county entitled The People of the State of Illinois vs. John Platt. The case was tried and John Platt was convicted of the crime of robbery. He was sentenced to the state penitentiary at Joliet and served one year.

State of Illinois vs. John Platt.

Last week it was discovered that John Platt was not guilty of the crime. The board of parole has recommended a special pardon, which he, no doubt, will get. The sovereign state of Illinois stands ready to apologize. No state and no sovereign should be so infallible that they should not be ready to apologize and atone to the humblest of their citizens whom they have wronged.

But can the state of Illinois or we, its people, make adequate amends to John Platt?

The history of the enforcement of criminal law brings to light from time to time some such mistake. There are cases where the innocent victim was hanged. In other cases the prisoner has served for upward of twenty years. Of course, in such cases there can be little or no recompense.

In the case of John Plat, who served one year, some recompense may be made. He may receive the special pardon. Private individuals may make contributions, and more properly the legislature may appropriate a sum of money to repay him in some measure for the time he has lost and the suffering he has undergone as a result of this mistake. A couple of years' salary is a pitiably small enough form of recompense.

But what money payment could compensate a man for such a wrong? He has been branded a criminal. He has been locked in a common jail overcrowded with the vilest and most vicious of mankind. He has suffered anguish of mind and tortures of body, for all of which there can be no salving.

Such cases as this illustrate the reason for the rule of law both in this country and England, from which we derive our common law, that a man should not be convicted of a crime unless the court and jury are convinced of his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. It has often been said that it were better that ninety-nine guilty men go free than that one innocent man should suffer.

There is another reason that such mistakes as these are unfortunate. It makes more difficult the punishment of criminals who are guilty. Such cases as John Platt's are assembled and held up to juries as "bogy men" to deter them from finding men guilty for fear they may make the same mistake.

From the standpoint of the individual such a mistake is an irretrievable wrong. From the standpoint of the public, however, it should be kept in mind that the state is made up of human beings and that the criminal law is enforced by human beings. However conscientious these persons may be, mistakes may happen. Probably no one is more anxious to avoid such a mistake or to rectify it if made than the judge or prosecuting attorney who has taken part in the case.

But it must be borne in mind that until society reaches a state of perfection not now anticipated the criminal law must be enforced and punishment inflicted. The punishment of crime is a deterrent, and many punishments can only be justified as such. Government is in a large measure utilitarian. It attempts "the greatest good for the greatest number." It therefore must necessarily happen that the individual must often suffer for the good of the general public.

Fortune Telling.

I believe in every human soul there is a subconsciousness that responds to occultism in one form or another. Sometimes the response is given facetiously (half in fun and half in earnest) and sometimes seriously, as indicated in the case of Mrs. Cudmore, whose death and insanity previous thereto disclosed a dreadful fear of the influence of the mystic.

Quite recently the brainiest man of my acquaintance told me in all seriousness of a prediction made about him by a fortune teller twenty years ago. The visit to the medium was made in a spirit of fun, but he never forgot the prediction. And, strange to say, last week the prediction was fulfilled.

It is hard to analyze the love of hearing one's fortune told. At a social gathering amusement may drag and boredom threaten a heavy invasion, but interest is revived immediately a fortune teller is discovered to be present.

Whether cards or tea leaves or palm reading be the medium, rapt attention is given, and although outwardly disclaiming belief in such nonsense, every word of the fortune teller, especially if she promises a couple of wives or husbands, an early fortune, or a beautiful journey, is tucked away carefully in the mind for future hope and reference.

The demands for the horoscopes, as appearing in Doris Blake's column of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, average several hundred a month; the fortune telling by cards formula, which has had to be reprinted time and again at correspondents' requests, bears witness to that universal human desire to associate with things occult.

In a recent big graft trial there came to light compelling evidence of the popularity of clairvoyancy. The amount of money earned by those purporting to have the gift of insight into the future amazed us—rich and poor, old and young, lovelorn and others eagerly wishing to part with the dollar or the 50 cents, according to the strength of the crystal in the mystic lens.

At bazaars, church and county fairs the fortune telling booth is notoriously the best money maker.

In this matter of "future exploring" few of us are less gullible than our fellow man. Cards and tea leaves may not be the medium of appeal to which our subconsciousness responds, but if we escape their influence there is the ouija board, palmistry, or handwriting, or spiritualism, or some other mysterious medium to reduce us to the same common multiple as our neighbor who makes no bones of his faith in the predicted fortune awaiting him. Billie Burke Pays $25 an Ounce for Perfume says Antoinette Donnelly

The Perfume Billie Burke, $4,000 a Week "Tribune" Movie Star, Uses is an Exquisite Combination of Rose and Springtime Fragrance.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

TO the average woman, with the average woman's high percentage of romance in her makeup, an income like Miss Billie Burke's $4,000 a week as a TRIBUNE moving picture star, would carry no happier prospect in her mind than the opportunity it would afford her to satisfy the insatiate feminine longing for lovely perfume, sachets, and sweet smelling powders.

Since the beginning of the world romance has ever issued forth with the pulling of the stopper from the perfume bottle. It isn't at all nonunderstandable nor unpardonable for a twentieth century maid, therefore, to wish with all her heart and soul for the "wherewithal" to purchase the mystic power and subtle influence of a sweet odor.

Good perfumes are expensive. They are a luxury. Miss Billie Burke pays $25 an ounce for the specially prepared flower scent which clings tantalizingly to her dainty person. It is an exquisite combination of rose and springtime odors. If I may use such an expression I will say this perfume is "wonderfully becoming" to the clever little TRIBUNE movie star. It's like her hats, her dresses, her style of coiffure, perfectly adapted to her own individual self. And that's the secret of perfume using!

"I think a woman does not realize the effect to be gained by choosing a perfume to suit her own very self," the little golden haired star volunteered. "It's the same as with clothes, the latest style is the one she seems to think she would adopt.

"Yes, there are changes in perfume styles just as in clothes styles," Miss Burke added. "Every time a new stage, grand opera, or movie star is created along comes a brand new perfume, which enthusiastic fans adopt out of compliment to the admired one. The fastidious woman should find out what to her is the sweetest and most becoming odor of all and stick to it. A perfume isn't like last season's hat, for it can be worn again this year and next year, and for all the years to come, with perfect taste.

"If a woman will fix her affections permanently upon one perfume she will individualize it, and in turn it will individualize her, and she won't then make the mistake common to many of producing that intensely disagreeable effect by putting rose perfume in her glove box, orange flower in her handkerchief box, orris root among her lingerie, violet in her gowns, etc."

"You believe in applying the same rule of harmony to odors as you do to colors, then?" I suggested.

"Yes," she answered. "And if one's olfactory nerves have not been cultivated to a keen appreciation of this harmony it is up to every one to train them, for by her taste in odors a girl may be judged.

"I can't stand a heavy perfume," she added, emphatically. "It nauseates. I do think that people addicted to them should be more considerate of their neighbors. They are so trying, so suffocating, and there isn't one woman in 10,000 whose type would warrant a strong, heavy odor. The only person I can think of for whom there might be an excuse for the choice of heavy odors is the large featured Egyptian type. And she is not a frequent type at all.

"Strong, cheap perfumes are always suggestive to me," said Miss Burke, "of a saving on soap and water. A strong soap smell is infinitely more pleasing to the olfactory sense, for it at least evidences a state of cleanliness. But there is no legitimate excuse, for a good bathing soap without odor is easily within the finances of every one, and where it is used and a good perfume cannot be afforded then perfume should not be resorted to at all.

"I have known girls to 'lose out' with men because of the strong, cheap perfumes used. Just recently," she confided, "I heard a girl being discussed by a couple of men. Their judgment of her in brief was: 'She's a nice girl, but she reeks of frightful perfume.'"

To be correctly perfumed, according to the theory and practice of the high priced TRIBUNE star, Miss Burke, there should be a faint suggestion only of a sweet scent. And consistent on this is she to the last little detail. The same exquisite fragrance tickled my olfactory nerves when she crossed the room in her peach pink boudoir and pulled open the drawer full of exquisite French lingerie as greeted me when I entered her luxurious clothes closet. Her glove box, her handkerchief box repeated the same exquisite delicacy of odor, all in perfect harmony with the alluring, soft toned, peach tinted coloring of the room and the little lady herself.

It seems to me that in any art she might adopt, be it the movies or the art of using perfume, or any other art, Miss Burke's individualism must stand out as the biggest feature of her success. She's Billie Burke in the movies. She's Billie Burke in the perfume she adopts. Wherein lies the secret of why some folks are so much more successful than other folks. They're themselves, with convictions of their own and the strength of mind to stand up for their convictions.

No one could persuade the little golden haired TRIBUNE star that she should adopt a different perfume from that to which she has already attached herself. And that's why her words on the use of perfume should be given serious consideration.

Every coat and dress hanger in Miss Burke's remarkable wardrobe exhales a dainty fragrance from its padded and silk patterned covering. This is made possible by the use of tiny sachet bags inserted therein. In the linings of her hat boxes are inserted tiny pads of the same delectable odor.

"I have known a number of girls," said Miss Burke, "who in an effort to get an individual perfume selected an odor which harmonized with their most becoming color. One girl especially I have in mind, whose favorite color was yellow, adopted the orange odors with effective results. Another girl with a madness for pink used the carnation tone in perfumes. Violet is effective for the girl who wears blues as her best color, and so on."

I noticed an absence on Miss Burke's dressing table of the highly ornate bottles so generally associated with expensive perfumes. I made some comment about such bottles to Miss Burke, to which she responded:

"I think lots of perfumes nowadays are bought for their lovely bottles, don't you? It isn't so much a question of the contents as of the container. If the container be of graceful shape, with Grecian urn handles perhaps, or a covering of gold lace, the buyer will let the details fascinate her so that the perfume is bought without being whiffed."

According to Miss Billie Burke, the smart thing to do is to choose one scent and stick to it. Sachet powder in various silk bags and padded hangers for one's frocks, perfume, toilet water, and face powder all can be bought in the same scent.

And I add, in defense of fostering and encouraging a spirit of extravagance in the feminine breast regarding perfume expenditure, that history is filled with proofs of the overpowering influence exercised upon man by perfumes. Their use and disuse have marked the rise and fall of nations. The senses of the twentieth century man have not materially changed. This being the case, and romantic love and personal beauty being so closely allied, the art of perfume choosing and using is an art not to be ignored by any woman who can afford it.

Real Love Stories

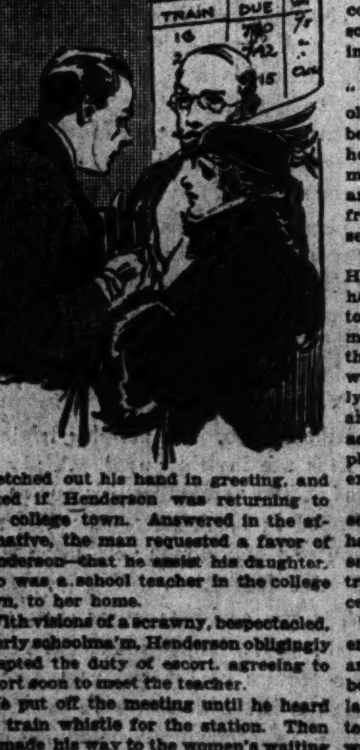
This department appears every other day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

A Juvenile Matchmaker.

HENDERSON rushed into the dingy suburban railway station much the same as he rushed about his business affairs. As he closed the door he was greeted by four of his college friends, all returning after the Christmas vacation.

While engaged in conversation with his friends an elderly man approached, stretched out his hand in greeting, and asked if Henderson was returning to the college town. Answered in the affirmative, the man requested a favor of Henderson—that he assist his daughter, who was a school teacher in the college town, to her home.



With visions of a scrawny, bespectacled, elderly schoolma'm, Henderson obligingly accepted the duty of escort, agreeing to report soon to meet the teacher.

He put off the meeting until he heard the train whistle for the station. Then he made his way to the women's waiting room, where, to his surprise, he beheld a bright and vivacious girl of 23 years, with a merry twinkle in her eyes.

Henderson's surprise was manifest in his countenance when introduced and his eyes clearly conveyed his thoughts—that the girl was good to look upon.

Boarding the crowded train, it became convenient for them to sit together and soon they found much to talk about of interest to both.

Then "Buss" appeared on the scene. "Buss" was a little girl about 4 years old. Her real name was Margaret, but because she kept up a continual chatter her mother had called her "Buss." She manifested a keen interest in Henderson and the teacher. Finally she broke away from her mother and crowded into the seat with them.

Turning her large brown orbs upon Henderson, she asked: "Do you like her?" The question proved disconcerting, to say the least, but finally Henderson managed to stammer that he did. Then the same brown orbs turned to the teacher with the same inquiry. Blushing profusely, the teacher stammered much the same answer as did Henderson. Then "Buss" acted. She took the teacher's hand and placed it into that of Henderson with this exclamation: "Now you are married."

Then her mother took her away with a severe reprimanding. But the mischief had been done. After landing his charge safely in her boarding house, Henderson tried to forget it all, but he was not successful.

Then came a day when he met the teacher face to face on the street. Both smiled and Henderson accompanied her to her boarding house. When he left some time later he took with him her promise to attend the theater two nights later. There were other occasions that they met and frequent ones, too. They married two years later and have lived happily ever since.

"Buss" was the agent of Cupid.

How I Won My Mate.

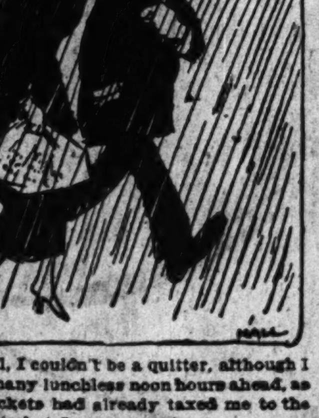
Two Good Sports.

About three years ago I invited a pretty girl whom I had but recently met to the theater. It was shortly after Easter, and I noticed she was wearing a pretty hat. It was a beautiful spring night when we started out, but to my dismay it was raining hard when we came out of the theater.

"O, dear! my new hat," cried the girl.



Well, I couldn't be a quitter, although I saw many lunchless noon hours ahead, as the tickets had already taxed me to the utmost; but I was a sport.

Turning to the girl, I said: "Wait here a moment, and I will call a taxi."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," said she. "Run out there and get me a newspaper; I'll be all right."

After some arguing I did as she asked, she wrapped her hat in the paper, and we walked laughing and happy to the street car.

I made up my mind on the spot that she was the girl I wanted for my wife. I worked hard and I got her, and today, with her help, I can afford a taxi when it rains.

Charmed the Minister.

It was at the Sunday school picnic. Everyone was having a glorious time, some boatriding, some swimming, and about a half dozen pretty girls trying to charm the minister.

Lunch time came, the fire started, and the cloth laid, when one of the little girls came too near the fire. In a second her clothes seemed ablaze. There was a panic; some screamed, some wept, and some fainted. I grabbed the tablecloth and wrapped it round and round the child, picked her up, and ran into the lake in less time than it takes to tell.

When I came to shore I put down the child, who was quite scared but none the worse from her experience. The minister, who with the rest had been watching us, took me in his arms and said, "You're the dearest girl, the bravest girl in all the world."

That was the beginning, and I've been his wife for three years, and he has not forgotten my bravery yet.

On and Offish.

I won my mate by being indifferent to her. I was the only fellow in our set whom she couldn't "wind around her little finger." I saw that she wanted to add me to her string, and I was hard to catch apparently. This made her more persevering, and while acting offish for a purpose I got interested myself. Then all of a sudden I turned and pursued, while she worked the retiring dodge. But it was no go. I meant business, and it looked as if we were fated for each other from the start. Neither of us could dodge the other, for no matter which one ran the other pursued. So we called the minister.

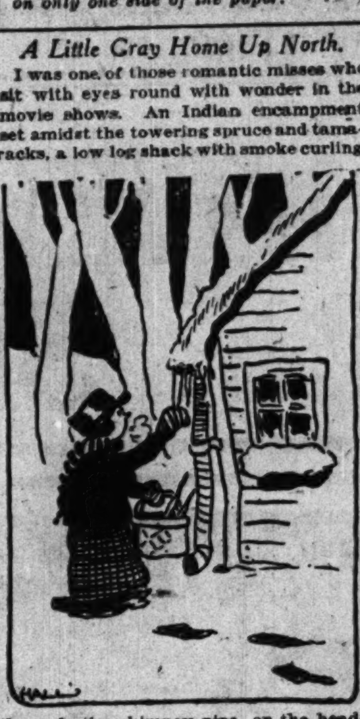
A Little Gray Home Up North.

I was one of those romantic misses who sit with eyes round with wonder in the movie shows. An Indian encampment set amidst the towering spruce and tamaracks, a low log shack with smoke curling through the chimney pipe, or the headlong dash of cowboys over the prairie set my heart aglow.



At that time my lover was a prospector in the wilds of northern Ontario, within two hundred miles of the Hudson bay. He had camped for the winter on the banks of the Abitibi, where I presume he idled his time in reading and in writing long letters to me.

How I longed for those letters. They seemed to bring a breath of that wild freedom of the north. I hated my close conventional life, with its shams and inconsistencies. I dreamed of a little gray home in the north, a winter spent in sleighing over the frozen river, snow shoeing through the snow laden bush where the pine trees looked like the sparkling home of the fairies.

I was Wendy; my lover was Peter Pan. I lived in imagination; I wanted a little home like Wendy's little home in the tree tops. There amid the murmuring pines and the wind tossed tamaracks I dreamed I could be happy.

I arrived there in November just as the first snows began to fall. I had my little shack, only it was covered with tarpaper, the romantic logs were missing.

The first week passed well. I liked the interior of the little place and loved to hear the logs crack in the glowing heater. My husband sawed wood and went to the little creek to fetch the water. Then he went to work in a neighboring pulp mill and I started to keep house in earnest.

As the days got shorter the snow increased and soon the little creek became frozen and hidden beneath the snow.

It was then my disillusionment began. Instead of snowshoeing through the sparkling snow I had to gather it in pails and melt it on my stove to obtain every drop of water I used. On washing days there was a race between my neighbor and myself to get the icicles from around the shacks. The clothes when put out to dry froze at once and stood like shrouds stiff and stark in the sunlight. And the tea made with snow water. My grandmother was Welsh; she taught me how to make it—but this!

I had longed for moccasins; they would be "just lovely" after my high heeled shoes of the city. My husband bought me a pair at the only store within fifty miles. They were sold to him by an old Assyrian and were made for the biggest Indian who ever wore them, I imagine. I had a little cry over them, then put on three pairs of my husband's worsted socks and walked off my disappointment.

In the spring came the thaw and the floods and the mud. Sheets, shirts and garments that had seemed spirited away were revealed wallowing in mud as the snow was washed away. Then the bush fires soon started. I shall never forgot that awful roar and those dark red flames that leaped above the tree tops as though heralding our destruction. A shower of rain saved us, but it was only just in time.

With the summer came the flies, the mosquitoes, and the horrid black fly of the north. I had longed for a canoe and a hammock and a little tent like an Indian wigwam. Instead my husband forgot to put in the screens on the door and windows in time and so I spent my time in swatting flies, lowering eatables into the well, which was our only ice box, and scanning the week old newspaper for any news from civilization.

One day I said: "I've had enough romance. Let's beat it." We arrived safely.

ETIQUETTE.

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

THERE is one mark of good breeding apt to be ignored in American education, and that is the speaking voice. Try to train your voice to be low and gentle and to cultivate a clear enunciation. You may have your mind stored with information; your intelligence may be above the average; you may be well dressed and good mannered, but if you have a hard, unlovely voice, a careless, slovenly enunciation, these defects will largely offset your attractions.

The peacock is rather an apt illustration of this combination. Many people object to having peacocks on their lawns and terraces, ornamental as these birds certainly are, because of their raucous, strident notes.

There is nothing that so impresses one on first meeting a stranger as the latter's manner of speaking if it be a cultivated diction united to a sweet and low voice.

T. H.: Yours is a difficult question to answer. Can't you see your old school friend at your home and avoid going to see her at hers unless your husband goes with you? In that way you could escape her husband's undesirable and unwelcome attentions and yet not deprive her of your friendship—a friendship she evidently needs.

A SUBSCRIBER: Yes, mail two of your husband's cards and one of yours to the bride on her first "at home."

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

THE first summer fashions for the younger generation have already made their appearance—not different from those that have gone before, except perhaps even prettier, more practical, more desirable in every way.

It is not by any means too early to consider the problem of the late spring and summer clothes for the young girl and boy. From now on will appear many of these youthful patterns, interspersed as always before with the patterns for the grownups.

The materials are so wide in scope that mention of them seems superfluous, the question of their choosing being always a more or less personal matter. For the junior girl lawn, linen, lace, serge, and taffeta are among the most favored now. The tub materials are bewilderingly attractive and for the most part are thoroughly dependable, providing that the laundering of them is done with care and attention. No material, however substantial, will stand being thrown indiscriminately into the tub and scrubbed and boiled and sunned without discretion and judgment.

Colored embroidery, already seen on many of the most expensive imported French frocks both for grownups and children, is going to be extensively used on the less elaborate models. Organdy and lawn may be embroidered exquisitely with shaded tones of French blue and green. Always a contrasting shade to the color of the suit is handsome.

There are many pleasing patterns in the new cotton voiles and crepes, and the marquisettes which are flowered and figured elaborately are delightful for a frock that is decidedly dressy and not intended for the tub.

Laces and nets are to be used extensively for flouncings and trimmings. Indeed, there are those who say this is to be a season of lace and net. Nothing is prettier or more fluffy and frivolous than these same two materials.

YOUR passion for conquering—whether it be difficulties or people—will make you a good soldier or commander, for you are naturally so earnest and determined that you accomplish what you set out to do against all opposition. If you turned your attention to other than warlike occupations you would make a great success as an agent or solicitor, the kind that won't take no. Just so it is with your own knowledge, what you really know you know with all your might, and all the hordes that travel could not stir you from a settled conviction; you accept only proven facts to add to your store of learning.

You do not like details, in fact, you simply omit them wherever possible, and though the results outwardly may be most effective it won't do to investigate, especially if you are a dressmaker. However, your artistic sense will make you a popular modiste, provided you have a capable assistant to do the real work. But don't for one minute get the idea from this remark that you won't know when the work is well done; more often you are not at all pleased with the results of your own labor; indeed, you sometimes leave work unfinished simply because you aren't satisfied with it and can't get another inspiration.

You are domestic, kind in your own home, and patient with your own children, but not exceedingly so with those of others. While you love your home and those in it dependent upon you, yet you seem to need an occasional vacation. You are a born comforter, for your intuition seems to make you understand without words the difficulties and troubles of others and to show you the way to help the sufferer.

Before you find your life partner you are apt to be rather hard and critical, but when you begin to love some one else more than you do yourself then you become awakened to the real meaning of life and its duties, less sure of yourself, and less critical of others. Even if you are disappointed in love you are not apt to go back into your shell, but will continue to grow broader minded and more generous.

To a certain extent you are an originator, so that you would make a good architect. Unlike the dressmaker, you would be thorough in this line of work; so thorough, in fact, that your buildings would stand the test of years even if they did lack some of the higher features of art. You have all the qualifications for an artist, but it is seldom that you Aries persons turn your undivided attention in this direction. If you do and are allowed to work out your own ideas in your own "sweet" way, genius may appear, but if interference becomes too pronounced you are likely to punch a hole in the canvas or throw the hat in the fire. This is where that naturally hot temper of yours shows up, fortunately as easily reconciled as provoked.

Your natural mechanical ability will make you a successful artisan where there isn't too much patient drudgery required. In anything where you can originate and follow out in your own way you will make good. So it is that the following lines are likely to prove your best fields of endeavor: Architect, overseer, building contractor, artist, editor, critic, and business manager.

Your colors are blue pink, and white; birthstones, diamond and amethyst. The most fortunate times in the year for beginning new enterprises are the two weeks beginning April 13 and Nov. 29.

As your love nature is so intense, it behooves you to be careful in the selection of your life partner. To be rejected, hard as it may be, will not work such havoc in your life as to marry some one whom you later find unworthy of your love. The union of Aries with Sagittarius, if your bringing up, nationality, and social position are about the same, will doubtless prove a fortunate one. If you both are willing to give in to the other, then a marriage with one in your own sign would be a sympathetic union. Your opposite, Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, will also be a congenial companion.

Are They All Fickle?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a man, foreigner, and happened to become acquainted with a girl about 18 years of age, considered to be a nice girl. I fell in love with her and she reciprocates my love, but she is fickle. Please tell me what shall I do in order to reform her. Are all the American girls fickle? A B C."

"Are all American girls fickle?" No, praise be, they are not, and a great many who seem to be are really genuine at heart. Just you pretend that you have become interested in some other girl and see if the fickle one doesn't beseech you to come back. This letting alone method, provided the other party isn't altogether insincere, will work nine times out of ten.

"There's No Such Animal."

"Dear Miss Blake: Please tell me how old a man should be before he is considered a bachelor; and a lady, an old maid. Also, may I ask if it is proper for a young lady who is keeping company with a young man of another town to go and spend the day with his folks if they are not engaged? A."

Didn't you know that the terms "old maid" and "bachelor" as we used to think of them were all out of date? As the story goes, "There ain't no sich animal" nowadays. What's the difference if some of your "catty" neighbors do insist upon applying one of these terms to you? Just pay no attention to them. In the other instance, it would be proper enough if the parents on both sides approved.

Postpones Daughter's Wedding.

"Dear Miss Blake: Here is a nut to crack. Two persons past 25 years of age have gone together for ten years. Several times the mother of the girl has caused their marriage to be postponed. Finally, by means of promises and threats she has extracted a promise from them to postpone their marriage for a number of years and acknowledges that her reasons are of a selfish motive.

"Now instead of allowing the young people to enjoy each other and make the best of the circumstances she will not allow them a minute alone, and even monopolizes the conversation, making it embarrassing and very unpleasant.

Should such a request be granted? Is it loyalty for a child to give up to such a request? Is it loyalty for a parent to make such a request? N. D."

Without one bit of the soft pedal in my answer I say marry immediately and make arrangements to live alone; your mother has no right to take this attitude, neither have you any right to humor her in it, provided she is normal, physically and mentally. The best part of your lives before you and hard as it may be for her to admit it, your mother surely must realize that she is depriving you of a happiness that is your right now.

Got Rid of My Corns With Magic "Gets-It"

Simplest Corn Cure in the World—No Pain, No Fuss, New, Sure Way.

When corns make you almost "die with your boots on," when you've soaked them and picked them and sliced them, when corn-swelling salves, and tapes, bandages, and plasters that make corns pop-eyed have only made your corns grow faster, just hold your heart a moment and figure this: Put two drops of "Gets-It" on the corn. It dries at once. You can put your shoe and stocking on right over it. The corn is doomed. It makes the corn come off clear and clean. It's the new, easy way. Nothing to stick or press on the corn. You can wear smaller shoes. You'll be a joy-walker. No pain, no trouble. Accept no substitutes.

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill. Sold in Chicago and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Economical Drug Co., The Fair, Siegel Cooper & Co., Home Drug Co., Ashland Drug Co., W. A. Fooling the Folks.

I am short and rather stout, and my folks always called me "Shorty" until this last month. I guess they think that I am growing, but they are mistaken, for I am dressing my hair higher on my head and best of all the new spring hats are trimmed with ribbon that stands rather high, so you can readily see their eyes are deceiving them, for I have a clothes trick and they don't know it. They Looked at Her Heels.

I have found that rundown heels profited you nothing but disapproval. One day when I was in college a young man, with whom I was quite well acquainted, said: "Do you know that the fellows have a good deal of respect for you?" "How is that?" I asked. Then he told me, mean things as they were, how several boys would walk along the campus behind a girl and would criticise her hair, clothes, carriage, and especially her heels. If her shoes were polished and her heels even she met with prompt approval, but if her heels were rundown she was condemned unanimously, no matter how redeeming she might be in other respects. S. S.

Pulled in Forty Notches.

Four years ago we had a young cousin come to Chicago. She was a sweet faced girl, but O, such shape! We purchased a pair of real good strong corsets and pulled her in forty notches, dressed her hair to suit her face, and bought her a pair of shoes that fitted her feet. She has a good position and has got on to the Chicago girls' style so well that she could set us all an example on how to dress. It is hard to believe, when looking at her, that she resembled a big apple barrel such a short time ago. J. C.

Growing Younger Each Year.

After financial reverses it became necessary to economize. Our children were in school and I had a pride to keep them well dressed. In order to do this I did the drudgery in the home and neglected to groom myself as in the past. I wore dark or black clothes to save my back, as I did the washing too. I had had all of this work done by servants before our losses.

In three years I looked ten years older, and continued to grow older. Then one day I woke up to the fact that I wasn't just to myself and family. I let them do some of the doing without and came into my own.

I bought myself pretty light colored dresses, and during warm weather I dressed in white. I gradually bought nice toilet articles and some of the dainty neckwear that was extremely becoming to me. I kept my poor, tired body as neatly groomed as I possibly could. In less than three months I looked five years younger. This fact made me cheerful, and smiles are beautifiers.

That was twenty years ago, when I began to grow lax as to appearance. Today I am over 66 years old. Now I look, and am younger in health and strength and mentality than most women of 45 years. Women that age now seek to learn of me how I manage to look younger than they do. Today I look younger than I did one year ago. I hope to continue to grow younger each year for my husband and children. I do not dress kittenish, but as young as I look. MRS. L. R.

That "clothes make the woman" is a truism you can't deny. Haven't you found this out? Haven't you found that a change of color scheme in your clothes made you more attractive? The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

AS the spring comes on it is highly seasonable that our dinner tables should be with verdure clad to the extent of at least one dish. Spinach, string beans, artichokes, asparagus, Brussels sprouts, new cabbage, chard, dandelions, kale, mustard, and endive are truly green of color, while many other vegetables, like new beets and carrots, are green in fact. Kohlrabi is of the daintiest green imaginable when cooked, and so is the cymling, and then there are the cucumbers and all the lettuces, which may be either cooked or eaten raw.

It is so easily possible nowadays to have most of these the whole winter through that we hardly realize our special spring blessings, yet spinach is finer, asparagus comes into the reach of the humble purse, the price of artichokes drops down and down until the season practically ends, about May 1, cultivated dandelions and the wild as well come, and at the same time are coming for those who know them, other greens good to the taste and most excellent for the health.

If we know how to combine vegetables in simple menus which shall have dishes of high energy value, or how to enhance their slight food value with fats, we have a diet from which the element of chance is almost entirely eliminated. There is the element of possible harm in all meat and fish dishes, although the harm may not be manifest for weeks or months. Unstable protein has treacheries as food which are coming to be more widely recognized every year.

In that rather colossal book, "Preventive Medicine and Hygiene," by M. J. Rosenau, the author, though probably not a vegetarian, starts out at once in the part devoted to foods by saying: "The animal foods are much more likely to convey infections or to possess injurious properties than foods derived from plant life. Of the animal foods meat and milk are the chief offenders." Of course, the subject of milk has received the attention of governments of nation, state, and cities, and is reasonably safe food if the housekeeper keeps it safely. Meat is more unstable. The retailer may handle it in an insanitary way and home people often do not take the proper precautions.

Rosenau infers, what is probably true, that the seeming increase of poisoning due to infected foods is not a real one, since formerly different reasons than this of food poisoning for serious illnesses were given or none at all. He says: "The subject is better understood and cases are now recognized and reported that were formerly misinterpreted. The hygienic conscience of the people has been aroused, and a demand established for clean, fresh, wholesome foodstuffs." This conscience is certainly becoming keener every day and with reason.

In reference to food as medicine he says: "The prophylactic and therapeutic uses of food are growing subjects. It is only necessary to point out the importance of diet in the prevention of tuberculosis, diabetes, nephritis, arteriosclerosis, gout, rheumatic affections, disorders of metabolism, dyspepsia, gastric ulcer, and many other affections. The proper amount and quality of food is one of our important preventive measures."

He might have been a little more specific about the liver and kidney troubles due to unbalanced diet, but he does go on to give eight ways in which food may affect health, mentioning special evils, and at one point he is specific on these two points. He says: "Food may be injurious as a result of abnormality of amount or composition of diet. Excess of food predisposes to obesity, and perhaps arteriosclerosis and diseases of the liver and kidneys. An insufficient amount undermines health."

There is hardly a vegetable that may not have all its great medicinal value preserved if it is cooked in almost no water at all, just enough to start the steam which cooks it, a further supply of which comes from the water in it, all vegetables being about three-quarters or much more water.

The desire for something tart which leads people to use enough vinegar with vegetables to entirely neutralize their strong and beneficial quality from the medicinal standpoint may be met by using lemon juice or using but a bit of vinegar in the cooking. Asparagus with butter into which lemon juice has been kneaded or buttered and then the lemon juice stirred in, is good, but this is not the best way to prepare it when it is served on toast. Some other methods of using the sour are here presented.

Sour Spinach.

Clean and wash spinach thoroughly, rejecting coarse leaves and stalks, put to cook in a covered kettle with no water except that which has clung to its leaves in the washing. Steam half a peck over not much fire for five or six minutes, then with a wooden spoon turn and break the almost melted spinach and dry out any water. To a half peck of spinach add the juice of one lemon after adding butter generously or in its place a boiled down meat stock. Eat hot, when it will seem not unlike sorrel greens, or mold and serve cold as a salad with a garnish of boiled egg or beets or both.

Sweet-Sour Squash.

Peel a cymling, that is the "patty pan" or scalloped squash, and cut in thin slices. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a frying pan and cook in it for five minutes or so two tablespoons of flour. Put in a layer of squash, packing it as closely as possible, and when it has a nice crust on one side turn and fry on the other. Before it is done the butter and flour may begin to get too brown—too much fire. Then add a little boiling water, even a second time if necessary in order to cook the squash thoroughly. Sprinkle over the slices either lemon juice or vinegar, and then some powdered sugar, and cook a few minutes longer. Serve hot either as a separate dish or as a garnish.

Boiled Globe Artichokes.

Wash artichokes and remove outer woody leaves. Cut off a fourth or perhaps a third of the top (this depends upon the condition, since it will not be necessary to cut a perfectly fresh one unless the leaves have a thorn), throw into lightly salted water in which there is the juice of a lemon, and boil from fifteen to twenty minutes. When the leaves come off the bottom readily it is cooked enough. Drain and serve on a plate with a tablespoon of Hollandaise sauce, dipping the inner tip of the leaf in the sauce. Tender leaves may be eaten entire and furnish excellent bulk, but usually the fleshy inside is drawn off with the teeth, having previously been seasoned with the sauce. They may be eaten cold in the same way with either a mayonnaise or a French dressing.

Green Cabbage and Tomato.

This recipe found favor in various quarters, according to reports, when it was printed something less than a year ago, and it is here repeated as one of the vegetables made a little tart to suit desire for such:

Cut the cabbage fine as for slaw and parboil for fifteen minutes in a little water or steam in almost none at all, just enough to start steam in covered boiler. Butter a baking dish, put in a layer of hot cabbage and butter, then another, and treat in the same way until the dish is filled. Add some onion juice if you like, or a bit of celery or celery seed, but neither pepper nor salt. Cover with canned tomato, stirring the whole gently so as to let the liquid down through. Put in the oven and bake for three-quarters of an hour.

"Pusley" Greens.

Purslane, which soon comes up in a freshly hoed garden and which might be profitably cultivated for greens, since it is a great grower, is mildly and deliciously acid of itself. The Dutch use it in quantities and can it, so that we can sometimes buy it thus. Cook as you do spinach.

Cucumber Cutlets.

Choose short, bulky cucumbers and peel carefully, cutting off ends and dividing whole into about three equal parts. Boil for about five minutes, but not enough so that the seeds start to come out. Drain and cool a little, then dip in slightly beaten egg yolk and then in cracker crumbs and fry gently in butter, turning once. A piquant sauce may be served with these or lemon juice, but nothing is really needed to make them palatable. Cucumbers may be stewed in a little water and served with butter and a little vinegar and taste good.

Boiled Kohlrabi.

Take off the leaves and stems of the kohlrabi, wash and peel thinly, then cut in slices, rejecting the bottom part if corky or cutting it much thinner. Put on in cold water to just about cover and cover the kettle so that the steam will do most of the cooking. It will take from ten minutes to half an hour, depending on the age and freshness of the vegetable. Serve hot, well buttered and with a bit of sour if you want it, or serve cold with a salad dressing. These make a dainty vegetable or an attractive appetizer or salad garnish. Pretty forms may be cut from the slices if used for this latter purpose.

A Spring Salad

Peel, chill, and slice tomatoes. When ready to serve cover each slice with thinly sliced new onions and radishes cut in the same way to give crispness to each mouthful. Instead of thin slices of radishes, just as thin slices of the top of a raw bulb of kohlrabi may be used. Serve with French dressing or add first a little French dressing and then mayonnaise.

Varied Activities of Women.

Over 20,000 women are employed in the canneries of California.

Mrs. Bertha Young manages a lucrative lumber business in Minneapolis.

Mrs. Harry Davis, wife of the mayor of Cleveland, O., bakes her own bread.

Over 2,000 women were sentenced to penal institutions in Massachusetts last year.

Mrs. Frances Weston of New York has the peculiar occupation of managing prizefighters.

Statistics show that tens of thousands of women in America live on less than $6 a week.

Women students at Oregon Agricultural college are superior to the men in scholastic attainment.

Miss Margaret Kennedy, a musically inclined girl of Skomakawa, Cal., is paying for her education by crawfishing.

A census taken of the women who attend theaters in New York City shows that they predominate in the gallery seats.

Princess Chen Chi of China, who is now in this country, prefers the American high heeled shoes to those of her native country.

Every woman who is graduated from the University of Kansas must demonstrate her ability to swim before she can obtain her degree.

Among the choicest treasures of Mme. Adelina Patti is a faded doll which was given her at her first public appearance in New York, when at the age of 7 she sang "Comin' Through the Rye."

Miss Agnes Bracken has the distinction of being the only woman village clerk in New York state, having been appointed to that position in Long Beach, L. I. She will receive a salary of $1,000 a year.

Disguised as a man and riding the brake beams from Portland, Ore., to Santa Barbara, Cal., Mrs. Ethel Chapin was arrested in that city for trespassing. She was seeking her husband, and, not having the necessary funds, decided to freight it.

Rheumatism!

How is rheumatism recognized? Some have said—

Rheumatism is a dull pain.
Rheumatism is a sharp pain,
Rheumatism is sore muscles.
Rheumatism is stiff joints.
Rheumatism is a shifting pain.

All have declared—Rheumatism is Pain.

Sloan's Liniment applied:—
The blood begins to flow freely—the body's warmth is renewed—the congestion disappears—the pain is gone.

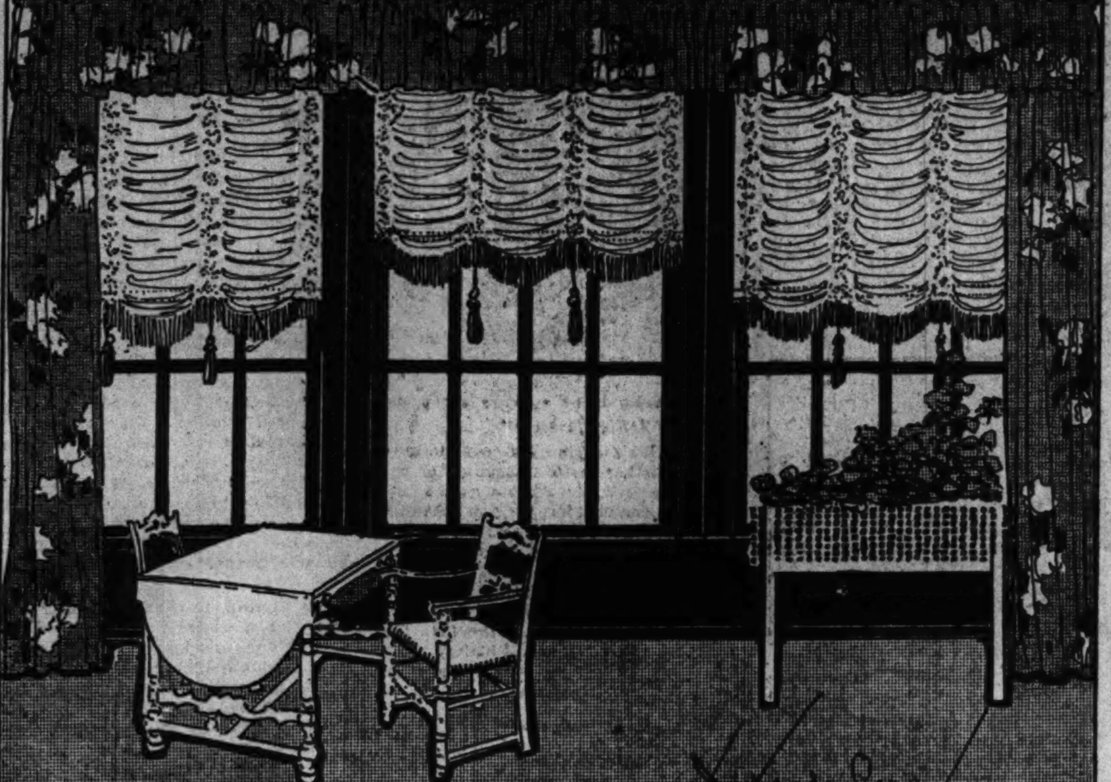
The Home Harmonious

Curtaining the Solarium

by Anita de Campi



Anita de Campi

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

SOLARIUM is now the word that is used instead of sun parlor—and it is not without reason that the name sun parlor accepted so unequivocally at first, has been modified. The room it indicates is not and never was in any sense a parlor, so why keep to the obsolete expression for a perfectly modern treatment?

To many, however, the word solarium seems stilted. They prefer to say sunroom, and when it happens, as it often does, that the little glass outlook is built on the north side of a building, the word sun or solar, with whatsoever suffix, is ludicrously a misnomer. To call it simply a breakfast room or tea room and furnish it and utilize it as such seems thoroughly commonsensible.

The most popular style of furniture for the glass room, whatever it may be called, is beyond question painted furniture. The greatest difficulty encountered in furnishing is usually in the problem of curtaining. The construction of these rooms varies so that it is not always easy to advise upon this all important point. The handling must necessarily be different according to requirements, dependent largely upon the manner in which the windows open and shut.

One logical young woman appealed to me with her judicious opinion of it: "If this room is to be used as a sunroom, why curtain it at all?" Whereupon her husband distractedly implored me to use my influence. "Do dissuade her from that point of view. Why, we shall have no more privacy than a couple of gold fish!" So we decided finally on some beautiful fabric roller shades that could be drawn all the way up to let the sun in and all the way down to shut the dark out.

Roller shade fixtures seem really to smooth out all the perplexities of sunroom draperies. As the roller is adjusted right to the top of each window the manner in which the window opens matters but little. A lambrequin of contrasting material and contrasting color is placed clear across the top of the whole group of windows, sometimes clear around the top of the whole glass front and sides of the room. The lower edge of this lambrequin hangs down just far enough to conceal the tops of the roller shade fixtures.

Occasionally two sets of roller shades are used, one opaque and one transparent.

Any number of new fabrics are now to be seen in decorators' workrooms, being fashioned into shades for the spring redecorating. The mode of procedure in planning redecoration is to select the shades and hangings first and to have the furniture painted and the painting, papering, or calcimining done to match some part of the fabric. Because it is easier to mix paint to any desired shade of any known color than it is to find a specially desired shade woven in the manufactured stuffs.

Among the most delightful roller shade fabrics of the year is one the description of which sounds impossibly complicated, but which is in reality quite simple. It is a light ecru casement cloth in broad alternating stripes. One stripe is woven in what looks like a satin damask weave, a flowing design slightly broken with open work. The next stripe, a little broader than the damask one, is what looks like a puff, flatly gathered in between the smooth damask stripes. The effect is something like the effect of the alternating stripes in seersucker, only that it is immensely magnified, for the puffed stripes in the new fabric are about five inches wide and flat stripes about four inches.

Theoretically, this material should be too clumsy to roll up well, but practically it is not. It rolls quite smoothly. Another thing about it that seems almost unbelievable is that it can be taken off the rollers, washed, and put back without the least detriment to shape or color. What gives emphatic chic to this roller curtain is the smart manner in which its lower edge is finished. This can be best understood by reference to the accompanying sketch. The curtaining is self-colored. Light ecru is the favorite tone.

The stick that holds the string by which the curtain is sent up and down, which is usually placed in a hem at the lower extremity of the roller curtain, is in this case placed in a casing some inches up from the bottom. This is indicated in the sketch by a dotted line. The lower edge is cut in scallops, as suggested in the drawing, and this curtain is trimmed with a wide fringe and is further embellished with heavy cord and tassels at the base of each damask strip.

A striking room that is in process of construction under the careful eye of a good decorator has in it the roller shades described above. The overdrapes are made of a new sunder material of jade pink gauze, upon which the weaver has worked out a design of branches and blossoms in thick threads, making a graceful, delicately colored pattern that is nearly as solid as applique on an almost transparent surface. Pink jade, as you know, is a light bluish rose color like a milky pink amethyst. The room has been planned for a woman with silver gray hair, and it is calculated to set off her particular style of beauty to a nicety.

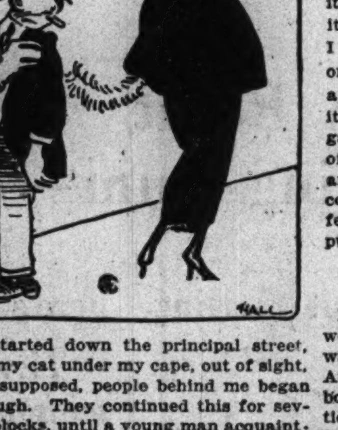
The gauzes sunder used in this case, effectively laid in full folds, is astonishingly lovely when stretched straight out and made into roller curtains. These may be kept drawn down during the daytime, as they are quite transparent, excepting for the opaque patterns worked on them. Used in this way, they look like exquisitely decorative panels and are equally good looking from inside and from outside. They may be supplemental for the sake of privacy either by another set of opaque shades or by opaque casement curtains that may be drawn back and forth on rods by means of small cords, rings, and tiny pulleys.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Tail Waved Wildly.

I was taking a white kitten from my home on a farm to my landlady's small daughter in a nearby city. I took the half grown cat under my arm and carried it on the train. The kitten kept very quiet and I congratulated myself on the success I had with it.

At that time capes were in fashion, and I wore one that reached about to my waist line. After I got off the train and started down the principal street, with my cat under my cape, out of sight, as I supposed, people behind me began to laugh. They continued this for several blocks, until a young man acquaintance stepped up behind me, and just then the cat gave an awful "meow," and he said: "Annie, where did you get that cat?"



It developed that I had walked all that distance with the cat's white tail sticking down below my black cape, and wagging all the way, until he pulled its tail. The crowd gave one yell and I turned a corner and got out of sight to hide my embarrassment.

The Dying Wiggle.

We were accustomed when living in an eastern city to purchase our fish at a store where they were sold alive. I bought a particularly fine cod one afternoon and the fish dealer assured me that it had been out of the water so long that it would be dead when I reached home. I took a street car and laid the fish out on my knees. Pretty soon the tail gave a tremendous jerk. I laid my hand on it to hold it down and then the head began. By the time I had seized that end of it the fish began to heave in the middle and finally landed on the floor to my utter confusion and to the amusement of the fellow passengers. Since then I have not purchased live fish.

Right Before Everybody!

From little boyhood on my mother would always punish me by making me wash dishes because of my dirty hands. At my birthday party, having girl and boy schoolmates at my home, I took particular care that I had my hands clean. Coming out of the room in which I had washed up ready to sit down with the party my mother asked me if I must do dishes tonight again, but in reply I only showed her my hands. You could imagine my embarrassment in front of all the girls.

Conspicuous nose pores

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

In such cases the small muscular fibres of the nose have become weakened and do not keep the pores closed as they should be. Instead these pores collect dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce these enlarged pores: Wring a cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for a few minutes with a lump of ice.

Woodbury's Facial Soap cleanses the pores. This treatment with it strengthens the muscular fibres so they can contract properly. But do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from years of neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores until they are inconspicuous.

Do this today! A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Go to your druggist or toilet counter today and get a cake. Begin at once to get the benefits of this treatment for your skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in greater New York and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by The Andrew Jergens Co., New York and Cincinnati.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I AM exceedingly deaf and have spent a great deal of money on different hearing apparatus without success in finding anything that helped me much. I am so deaf that I cannot hear the thunder, and I have not heard music for five or six years. About three weeks ago a friend procured a piece of vulcanized rubber in sheet form for me to try, thinking from the theory of the thing that it might possibly help me to hear. You can imagine my delight when I found that I could not only hear but hear so low a voice that a person across the room could not hear the speaker, and it is fine, simply fine, for music. The theory is vibration purely; the rubber is placed between the teeth and one hears through vibration. The price of the rubber is not more than 30 or 50 cents. It is not on the market as a hearing apparatus, but just simply a small piece of vulcanized rubber procured at any wholesale rubber store. I have a number of pieces now and I wish to pass the blessing on to others whom it may help as it has me. To any who will care to try I will gladly loan my pieces to experiment with, and then if they find it of any benefit they can get all they want from any rubber house.

"J. L. T."

As I have said before, there is always a demand for aids to deafness, and since the receipt of this letter the writer's address has been given to so many sufferers from difficulty in hearing that I question very much if she has any of the pieces of vulcanized rubber left. However, it is a simple matter to get some from her description, and I shall hope to hear that many have tried this simple means and been greatly benefited thereby. I dare say J. L. T. will be glad to write to those who wish her counsel in the matter, and I will give her address to those writing for it and inclosing stamp for reply.

Likes Unusual Flowers.

"Will you please send me the address of Mrs. J. K. S., who has ferns to give away? I would like to have one of them. I also wish to ask you if you will inquire if some of the Cornerites will give me some unusual plants and flowers. I wish only one of each. I like peonies and cactus and some roses. I have some flag lilies and some yellow flowering plants to give to any one who would care for them now. I would also like to know if any one has a lawn swing or a hammock or some outdoor games to give away. The children are always asking me to buy some for our big yard, as they are outside all day in summer. My boy would also be glad if some one had a play tent to give him. I cannot afford to buy such things, and may be there are some persons with these articles who have no further use for them. They would be a great pleasure to us.

"MRS. C. L."

I trust that the gift or exchange of the flowers the writer wishes may be arranged, and that the outdoor properties her children crave may be sent to them. I will give her address to any one applying for it and inclosing a stamp. Please send the clipping with the request.

Offers a Bible.

"Will you kindly send me the name of the girl who wishes a Bible? Inclosed you will find a stamp for reply. L. W."

Unfortunately the writer did not give the initials of the seeker for a Bible, nor did she inclose the stamp for reply. I am therefore unable to answer the letter except through the medium of the printed page.

Looking for Spring Flowers.

"Could you or any of your readers tell me where and when pussy willows and arbutus may be found in or near the city? R. L. T."

I should say keep a searching eye upon water courses near the city when the eaves upon trees in the parks begin to swell visibly. Pussy willows take advantage of mild April days to show their furry heads to the sun. Do you mean trailing arbutus? Botanists will tell us about it.

Wants a British Correspondent.

"Have you any one who would care to have a correspondent who would send magazines, etc.? I should like such friends to be British if possible, because I am British myself, and naturally it would be pleasanter for us both, wouldn't it? If there is any one living in Canada it would be all right. I think the Corner is fine. BETTY F."

I am sure that some Canadian or some of our British friends here will come forward eager to accept this kindly offer. I am glad she gives the Corner her approval, and I was happy to send her the addresses for which she asked. Her own name will go on file.

Loves to Write Letters.

"I read your Corner regularly, and I would like to correspond with a few of your Cornerites if I could get their addresses. I love to write letters, but like most girls who have always lived in one place, I have few with whom to correspond. I also have only two aunts and one cousin. M. K. H."

There are numbers of persons who wish to correspond with another young girl, and I shall hope to have requests for M. K. H.'s address, inclosing stamp for reply.

Stamps and Cards Acceptable.

"One or two correspondents to whom you kindly gave my name have written to me at my old address. I have moved. Canceled stamps and postcards will be acceptable. A. P. W."

This letter is from one of our old and valued correspondents who is doing good service in home missions. I shall be glad to supply his new address to any one who has canceled stamps and postcards to bestow upon him, for I know they will be put to a good and helpful use.

Wants Cart for Baby.

"If you have an offer of a baby's go-cart will you kindly let me have it? In return I would be glad to make tatting medallions or edging. I sent some magazines to an address you gave me and I still have some to give away to any one who will pay postage on them. I have so much pleasure in reading the Helping Hand and would gladly buy the paper for that alone. MRS. B. H. A."

Thank you for the pleasant things you say about the Corner and for the offer of the magazines. Unfortunately we do not have offers of go-carts often—the requests for them are much more frequent. Still, I hope some one may be moved by this appeal and be able to reply favorably to it, either with a gift or an exchange. The little medallion inclosed is pretty and would adorn a dainty handkerchief.

Postage for Reading Matter.

"I see that one of the women will give away magazines to those who will pay postage on the same, and I'd love to have you send her my name. If she has no more magazines, will you kindly hand my name to any one who has magazines, books, papers, or other reading matter, or kindly print my request for these? I am fond of reading and will greatly appreciate your kindness. I can repay postage. Also I will copy recipes, crochet pattern directions, or old songs for any of those desiring them who will send a stamp. I have also sheet music, vocal and instrumental, I can give. Postage must be sent. To a few shut-ins or invalids, old or young, I should love to send letters or postcards. MRS. H. J. D."

I do not know the name of the friend who offered magazines, but I hope some one can supply this friend. I am sure she will have applications for the gifts she offers. Please inclose clipping and stamp when writing for address.

SMALL PIMPLES ON BABY'S HANDS

And Feet. Grew Larger and Spread Rapidly to Limbs. Itched and Burned. Caused Disfigurement.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"When my baby was about one year old small pimples appeared on her hands and feet. They grew larger and spread rapidly to her limbs until it seemed that her whole body would be covered. The pimples were hard and red, and seemed to have clear watery heads which oozed out water that hardened, and formed scales. They itched and burned and were very much aggravated by her clothing. Wherever the eruptions appeared, it caused great disfigurement.

"We began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In a week she was entirely healed." (Signed) Mrs. W. G. Carpenter, Amelia, Neb., July 14, 1915.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE'

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

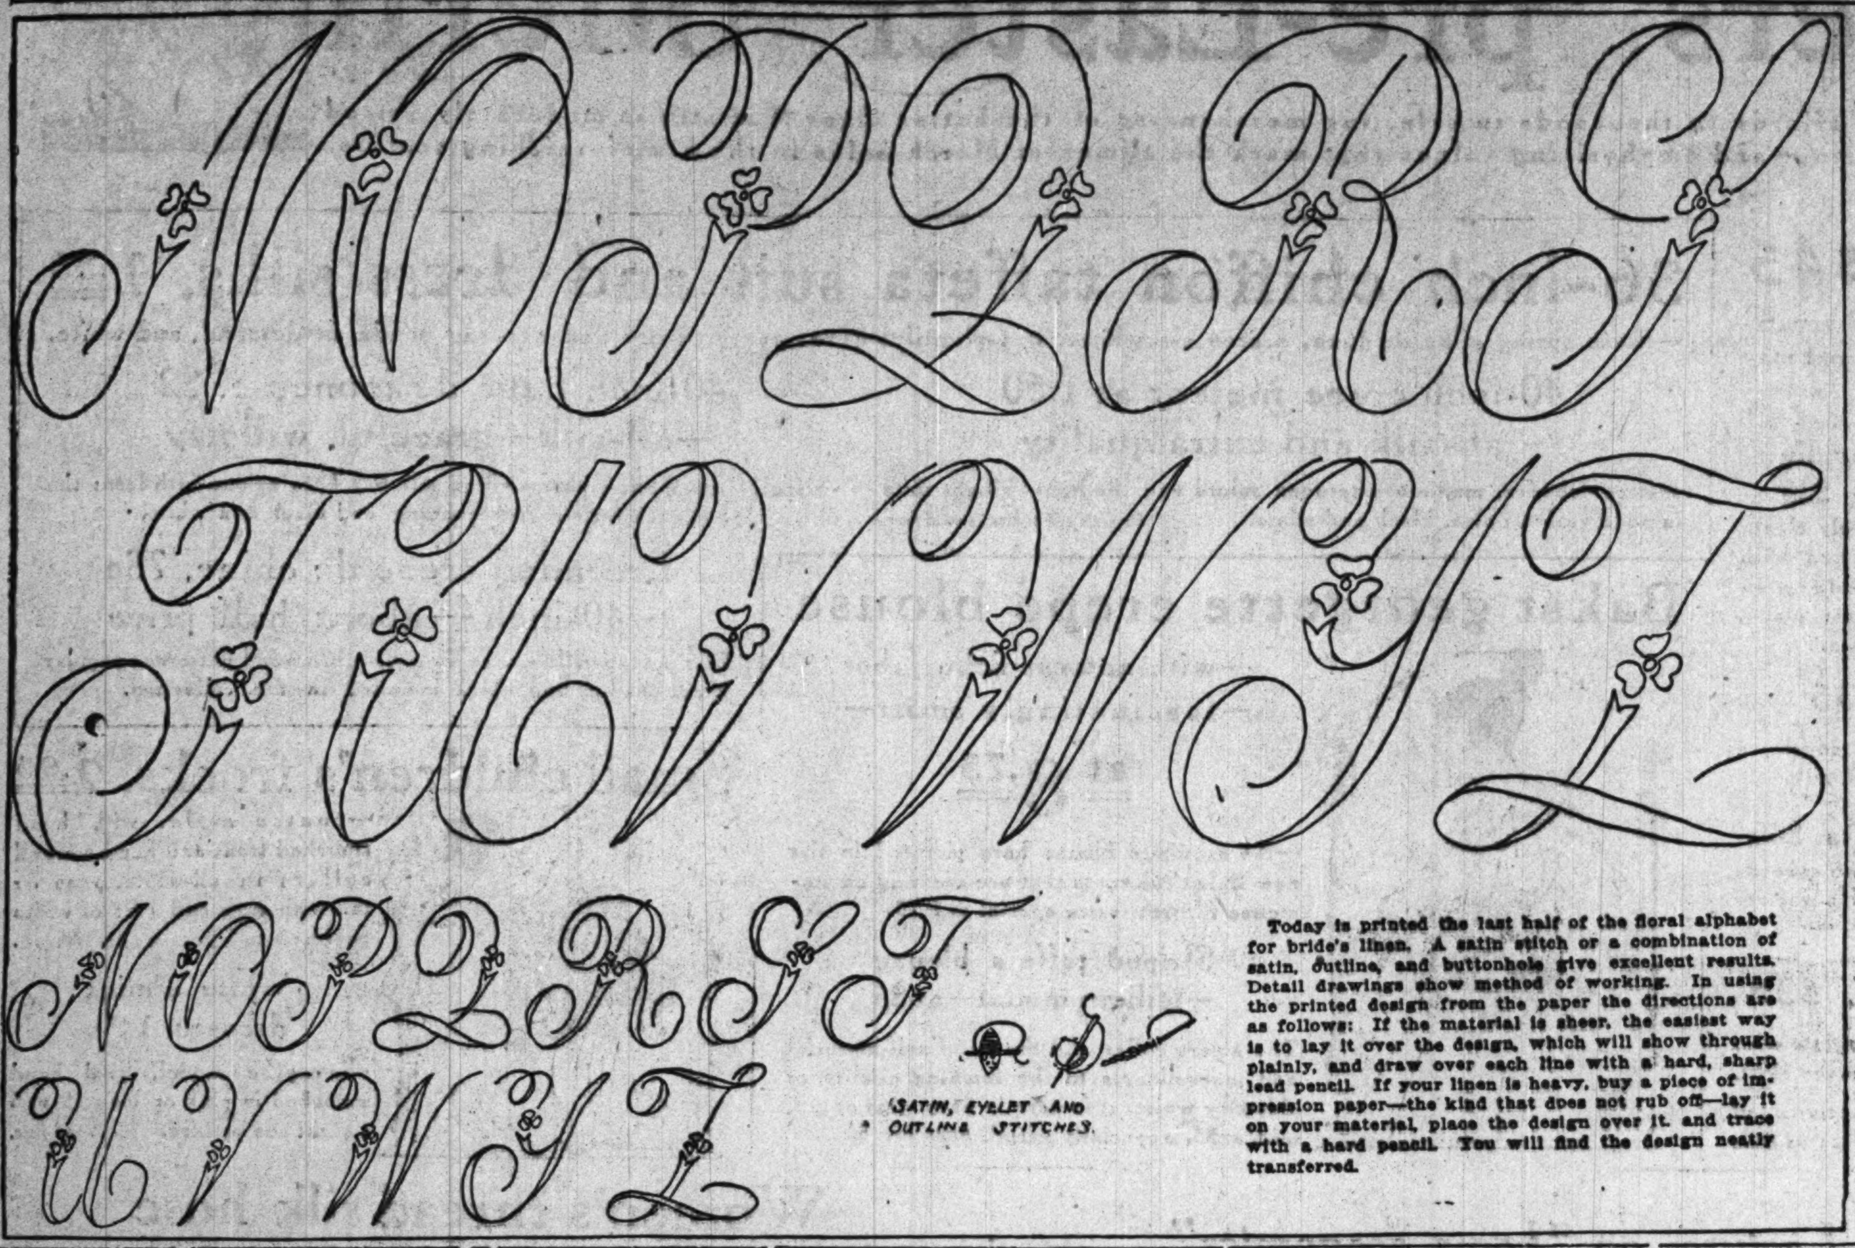
Second Half of Floral Alphabet for Bride's Linen.



Today is printed the last half of the floral alphabet for bride's linen. A satin stitch or a combination of satin, outline, and buttonhole give excellent results. Detail drawings show method of working. In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If the material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it on your material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred.

Bright Sayings of the Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Billie's mother brought him in from the back yard covered with mud, put clean clothes on him, and said: "Now, Billie, don't go in this yard again." In a short time Billie was seen going over to a neighbor, and said to her: "Are you got any mud in your yard? Mamma won't let me play with our mud." F. H.

A man asked a little boy, whose father was a surgeon, "What will you be when you grow up to be a man?"

The boy replied, "A surgeon, like my father."

"I suppose you think your father the greatest man that ever lived," said the man.

"No," replied the boy; "there was one other, but he died—George Washington." K. N. P.

My little brother has a Newfoundland dog of which he is very fond, and never allows anybody to scold or abuse. The new cook could not talk English, and one day he heard her scolding his dog (in German) for chewing on the rug. He came to me laughing and said: "Gretchen is scolding Prince, but he don't care; he just sits there and wags his tail, because he can't understand German." M. A. K.

A friend calls at the house twice a week and always brings my little sister, Mildred, a box of chocolates. Recently he left town unknown to her, and of course she waited for him just as usual when Wednesday evening came. After waiting in the parlor for fifteen minutes she said: "I dess my chocolate man isn't coming tonight." A. T.

Le Roy was being teased by his aunt, who told him that his father liked his baby brother better than he did him. He was almost ready to cry when he looked up hopefully and said: "I think daddy should like me better, 'cause he knows me longer." L. S.

Our second child had red hair, and whenever we took him out some one would remark about it. When the baby was 2 years old we were giving a dinner party and while waiting for the guests to arrive I was putting on the last touches and brushed the baby's hair. He looked up at me and said: "I pose de lady will say, 'Where did your baby det his red hair?'" Mrs. I. F. C.

It was just before Christmas and Tommy was praying for Santa Claus to bring him a long list of things he wanted. Finally mother said, "I am afraid you are asking for too much at one time." The next night he ended his prayer with the usual list, then added, "And please bring me a big dog and cart; I will pray for the harness tomorrow." M. J. K.

The children were spending the summer in the country with their grandparents, and everything seemed wonderful to them. One warm afternoon Laddy saw an apple fall from the tree. He picked it up and in great excitement rushed to his sister, crying: "O, Frances, Frances! See the apple that God just made! It's even warm yet." Mrs. L. S.

Eleanor was asked what she would like to have her baby brother named. She replied, "Name him Eleanor." When asked why she said, "So when I am called I will not have to come and he can have some of the scoldings." A. B. W.

Alfred, who was visiting his grandfather, loved to help him care for the chickens. At dinner the following Sunday, when the chicken was passed to Alfred, he refused, and when asked the reason why, said: "I don't want any; I was acquainted with that chicken." M. W.

When Phyllis broke a dish her mother exclaimed, "O, you destructive little thing!" The next day, when a cup dropped from her mother's hand, Phyllis retaliated with, "You 'tructive little fing!"

"No," said her mother, "this was an accident."

Later we were edified by hearing Phyllis explain two new words to a playmate: "Lettie, when we breaks a dish we is 'tructive little fings. When mamma breaks it, then it is an accident." J. C.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

An Absent Minded Prof.

Our German instructor had a habit of saying "Yes" to every sentence that was correctly translated and then would hurriedly pass to the next one. He also had a habit of softening his voice and changing his much wrinkled countenance to one of smiles and pleasantness when addressing his remarks and questions to Miss Olivia Brown, the "star" pupil of his class.

We were in the midst of a recitation. I had just finished translating a scattering sentence when the professor called out, "Yes. Next, Miss Brown."

The sentence was, "Wollen sie mich heiraten?" Miss Brown read out clearly, "Will you marry me?" To which the professor replied, as usual, "Yes," and would have passed to the next sentence had the laughter of the class not overwhelmed him. The professor became so much embarrassed that it was necessary for him to dismiss the class.

The class was much surprised the next evening on seeing him and Miss Brown out walking. It is now a common occurrence, since she is now his wife.

He says it was a lucky thing for him that he gave her that sentence, for he confesses that otherwise he would not have had the nerve. O. B.

Then She Blushed.

A chum of mine found it impossible to be natural in the presence of men. She either became totally dumb or twisted her words into the exact meaning which she did not wish to express. Her consequent embarrassment lent her words still more significance.

A few months ago she was introduced to a young and very modern farmer.

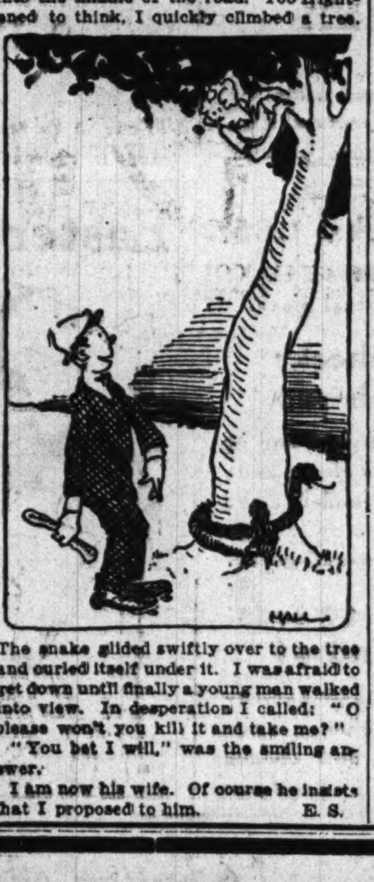
"Have you ever lived on a farm," he asked.

"No, but I'd like to," she answered, and then blushed and blushed and blushed.

Their engagement has just been announced. A. C.

A Snake Story.

I was walking along a country road one day when a big black snake crawled out into the middle of the road. Too frightened to think, I quickly climbed a tree.



The snake glided swiftly over to the tree and curled itself under it. I was afraid to get down until finally a young man walked into view. In desperation I called: "O please won't you kill it and take me?"

"You bet I will," was the smiling answer.

I am now his wife. Of course he insists that I proposed to him. E. S.

The AMATEUR GARDENER

The Culture of the Chrysanthemum.

EVERY woman who loves flowers should attempt the culture of the chrysanthemum the coming season. If she succeeds, and there is no good reason why she should not if she is willing to give the plant the care it requires, she will wonder why she never undertook to grow this plant before. A dozen well grown plants of choice varieties will enable a woman to give a flower show of her own each fall, for of all floriferous plants this one stands at the head of the list. And as for color, it is magnificent.

To grow the chrysanthemum well it must be given a rich soil and kept going steadily ahead from start to finish. Any check which it may receive during its growing season will greatly lessen the chances of success with it. Therefore it is important that nothing should be allowed to interfere with its development. It likes a soil of garden loam made rich with rotten cow manure, but fine bonemeal can be substituted for the latter if there is no barnyard to draw on for material.

If you want up to date varieties you will have to order them from the florist each spring. But if you have old plants it will not be necessary to do this, provided they are of good varieties. If the old plants were wintered in the cellar, as they always should be, bring them to the light and warmth of the living room about the first of the present month and water well.

Sprouts will be sent up from their roots in great numbers. When these have grown to a height of three or four inches they can be cut away from the old roots in such a manner as to bring a bit of root with each one. They should be put into small pots of good soil and grown on in them until their roots fill them. Then shift to larger pots and continue to do this at intervals during the season until you have your plants in eight and ten inch pots.

The need for shifting can be determined by examination of the roots of the plants. If they form a network about the outside of the ball of earth, when the plant is turned out of its pot, you will know that more root room is required. But if this network of roots is not in evidence it can be taken for granted that shifting is not necessary. But as soon as they are seen, do your shifting, as allowing a plant to remain in its old pot after that will be running the risk of failure.

Watering is a matter of great importance. This plant, when making vigorous growth, requires an almost unlimited amount of water at its roots, especially in summer, when evaporation takes place rapidly. It will be necessary to give a daily application, and this application should be a generous one. If you allow your plants to once get really dry at the root they will receive a check from which they will not fully recover during the season.

If you want plants of tree form grow the young plants to a straight stalk till about three feet tall. Then pinch off the top. Branches will start all along the plant, but rub off all but those at the top where you want the head of your little tree to be. If you prefer a shrubby plant, nip it back when only a few inches tall and encourage it to send out branches close to the pot.

Be on the constant lookout for the black beetle. When the first one is seen spray with an infusion of nicoticide, and continue to do this until not a beetle is to be seen. If this is not done this pest will soon ruin your plants.

Some growers of the chrysanthemum keep their plants in pots throughout the season, others put them out in the garden beds. When planted out they make a stronger growth than when kept in pots, but it will be necessary to lift and pot them before the coming of frosty weather, and as they are generally setting buds at that time the loss of many of their roots—which it is impossible to avoid in lifting them—will seriously interfere with the development of their flowers. I would advise keeping them in pots and giving the treatment outlined above, which the reader will understand was written with pot culture in mind.

If this method is adopted there will be no chance to check the development of the plant at the time when all the vigor of the plant ought to be conserved for the production of flowers. Plants in pots are always in better control than those planted in the garden.

The chrysanthemum has a brittle stalk, therefore each plant grown in tree form ought to be given good support to prevent injury from rough handling and strong winds. If this is not done you need not be surprised to find your plant broken from the weight of its own foliage.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

The Luncheon Problem.

"WHAT will I eat for luncheon today?" We hear the query day after day. Luncheon for the worker is more or less of a problem, the importance of solving which is evident. It is not unreasonable to suppose that our business efficiency, to a great extent, depends on the quality and quantity of our noonday food. Other things being equal the girl who is ill fed cannot possibly accomplish as much work as the girl who fares well. When we mistreat ourselves in the way of nourishment we exhibit a lack of sound judgment and common sense. No woman who wishes to succeed can afford to slight her meals, for as proper food is the principal factor in creating energy, so this energy is the physical force, without which we could not carry on our work.

DALTON VALENTINE

The other day while going down in the elevator of an office building, I heard one girl say to another: "I'm not hungry, are you? Let's have an ice cream soda. I'll treat." "That suits me," said the other girl. "And I'll buy some candy."

Ice cream soda and candy may be harmless in themselves when eaten moderately, but they are not substantial food and therefore no substitute for a meal. Thoughtless girls who inordinately indulge themselves in sweets at the expense of their meals, not only do an injustice to themselves, but to their employers as well.

Give a little thought to your luncheon. See that you have wholesome and substantial food and be sure that it is sufficient to carry you through the rest of the working day without entirely using up your strength and energy.

It is to the girl who through force of circumstances must carry her lunch from home that it is a real problem. There is the inevitable ham sandwich, piece of cake, and an orange. The deadly monotony of its recurrence sickens her and she longs for a regular meal. If she can possibly find for herself some way of making a cup of tea or coffee, or heating a little milk, it will help to make the cold lunch palatable and beneficial. Even if she is put to some little inconvenience in securing a hot drink, it is worth the effort for the added bit of energy she receives from it.

To eat well and regularly will keep us toned up physically. And, of course, good health is our greatest asset in the business world.

Have You Met a Nervy Flirt?

Who was the nerviest flirt you ever met? What did he say? And what did you say? Was the incident funny or otherwise? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of page only. No manuscripts returned. Address Nervy Flirt Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

One of Fighting Ryans.

Last summer I met the nerviest I've ever seen. My chum and I were taking a walk, when a nicely dressed young man stepped up and began talking to us. We stopped and told him that if he didn't go on we would have him arrested. He smiled and kept right on.

"Policemen?" he said. "They love me like a brother."

We didn't know what to do. Then my chum got an idea. It was a long time coming, but she got it. The verse and chorus go something like this:

She reached out and slapped his face so hard that he fell clear over and ruined the side of his face that hadn't already been ruined. Then he limped away.

My chum's name is Ryan.

MISS M. R.

Stuck Him with Pin.

Upon entering one coach of an "L" train I took a seat by a window. There were only three other passengers in the car. Just at that moment a man entered and hastened to sit down by me, take out his newspaper, and rest his elbow on my arm. I knew that he had concluded there was a young lady under my attractive sailor hat, but the truth is I have passed the half century mark. I moved over closer to the window, and he followed. Then he placed his knee so close to mine that I could fairly feel the magnetic current. By this time the train was pulling out of Madison street station and was too full for me to find another seat. The man's shoulder leaned against mine and his fat hand almost touched mine. I then took my hatpin out and held it so close to his hand that the shaking of the train almost brought the two together. At first he hated to acknowledge that he noticed it, but gradually I could feel less pressure from his arm, and finally he pretended to fall asleep and moved over to his half of the seat.

"So Long, Fish," They Said.

My friend and I were walking, when we looked across the street and saw two young ladies waving at us. They beckoned for us to come over, so we went, thinking we could help them out. Well, we did, for they said they were thirsty and wanted us to buy them an ice cream soda. We said we would, and after I bought one of the girls asked my friend if he was going to buy one. He did, and when we finished they got up and said, "So long fish, we will see you when we are thirsty again."

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They Love It.

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—Advertisement.

SPRING OPENING

THE HARTMAN FURNITURE AND CARPET COMPANY

announce the arrival of their mammoth, new, 1916 Spring and Summer display of home furnishings. This is, in every way, a wonderful exhibition. It is the largest collection of new furniture, rugs, carpets, etc., in both designs and finishes ever shown in America, and is on a scale characteristic of the Hartman Furniture & Carpet Company. Probably no stock of furniture was ever selected with such great care or subjected to so many tests before being offered to the public. Our floors are now a vast exhibition ground, and it will pay you to look them over before you invest a dollar for furniture. It is a duty you owe to your home to get the greatest possible value for your money. We cordially invite inspection and comparison. Make it a DUTY to get our prices BEFORE you buy. The fact that we are the largest buyers and sellers of home furnishings in the United States arms us with a mighty purchasing power which no other concern can command.

Beautiful Gowns, Wraps, Suits, Dresses, Millinery & Accessories

in an Exhibit that Shows a Happy Combination of Elegance and Economy

We cordially invite you to attend our Opening Exhibition for the Spring season of Nineteen-Sixteen. Millinery, ready-to-wear apparel for women, misses and children; silks, dress goods, footwear, undermuslins, corsets, gloves, hosiery and diversified lines of dress accessories, all displaying the fascinating modes of the day, will be given prominence in a showing that will be acknowledged the most beautiful and the most interesting that we have ever offered.

Reproductions of Models in Coats, Suits, Wraps and Gowns, Created by Jenny, Brandt, Jeanne Lanvin, Premet, and Rondeau Legrand

Prettier dresses have seldom been shown at such attractive prices. Here are afternoon dresses with embroidered bodices and georgette crepe, dainty collars and cuffs, full flare skirts with rows of taffeta. Other combinations with tunics and billows of silk. Materials are crepe de chine, chiffon and striped taffetas, crepe meteor and combinations of georgette crepe. (Third Floor.)

Afternoon and evening coats, garden wraps, reproducing leading Paris models. Satin charmeuse, chiffon taffeta, Gros de Londres, silk poplins, satin sublime. Many elaborately trimmed with ostrich and soft crepe. The linings are in the newest stripes and shades. Printed crepes, novelty silks. Prices are $35, $45, $55, $65 to $150

Fancy and plain tailored suits are shown in all the fashionable materials, faultlessly tailored and beautifully lined. Models in velour checks, men's wear serge, gabardines, shepherd checks, novelty checks, new stripes and spring mixtures. The newest colorings for spring 1916 are here shown. Prices for these suits, 24.75, 29.75, $35, $39, $45 and $55

Here Are a Few of the Distinctive Models to Be on Exhibit:

The draped and much be-ruffed costume is strictly stylish, showing much fullness on hip; the close bodice, sleeves cut to the elbow and the skirt in graceful pannier effect. These exclusive styles priced $65

Afternoon wrap, 'Bernard' reproduction, in black combined with soft contrasting shade of citron crepe and black velvet, folding about the shoulders in careless but graceful lines. This wrap priced $125

Garden or matinee wrap. A "Callot" reproduction presenting the opalescent shading in green and rose, lined in a delicate shade of green crepe; folds about the shoulders in a most becoming fashion, $75

Smart in effect is a blue Poiret twill "Jenny" reproduction, with the shortest of the short flare jackets, ruffles on skirt and coat to lend charm and contrast, with graceful lines. This is priced at $65

Apple green evening gown. It is of a beige faille changeable apple green and bronze silk combined with gold lace, draped and held in place with a large leaf rose, in contrasting colors. This gown priced $85

Dressy suits in newest silks, imported chiffon taffeta, Gros de Londres, faille and satin charmeuse, in the rich new shades. Among the higher priced models are six elaborate suits with hand touches that give them special charm. These garments are faithful copies of imported models. Ranging in price from $65 up to $150

The quaintly picturesque yet extremely smart "Ribbon Frock" is a feature at $57.50—an afternoon frock of black georgette, wonderfully combined with ribbon shirring. Many other models in sport dresses, street dresses, afternoon dresses, taffetas and crepe de chine, prices range from 16.75 to $45

Notable Exhibit of New and Correct Millinery Modes

IN our French room we have prepared a pleasing and interesting collection of smart models—all new and distinctive. Here you will find a proper presentation of the latest Paris modes and you will see how successfully we have adapted the cleverest and most exclusive French fashions to win the favor of American women. Millinery Section, Third Floor.

The "Garland" hats are large and drooping. They're of fine hair braid. Many different hues and flowers.

Garden hats of large leg-horns and cured grass, with all the newest and most beautiful flower trimmings.

"Picturesque Hats"—unique models—of silk French crepe, hand embroidered in the pastel shades.

Elegant but quite modest hats for ladies who admire the plain but elegant. These are aigrette trimmed.

These Stunning Models for 1916 Are Priced from 17.50 to 85.00

ALTHOUGH the handsome and exclusive modes have been given full consideration in this opening exhibit, we have kept in mind those women who want, for every-day wear, hats priced from 7.50 to 15.00. And in these lines we excel. The exquisite variety will aid you in choosing just the hats you need for your spring outfit, and the moderate prices will make it possible for you to own a hat to match each suit and dress.

Hats for all occasions in semi-dress—large sailors, close fitting hats, turned up in the back.

Priced from 7.50 to 15.00

Hats with high side roll with wings and artistic ribbon trimming. An amazing collection.

"IMPROVED HIGHWAYS" IS SLOGAN FOR 1916

ILLINOIS WILL AID 470 MILES OF 1916 ROADS

Thirty Counties Plan to Raise $20,000,000 by Highway Bonds.

SUBMIT ROUTE MAPS.

BY W. W. MARR.
[Chief State Highway Engineer of Illinois.]

It won't be long before Illinois will be famous for her good roads instead of notorious for her bad ones, if the present enthusiasm for better roads continues to grow in the next few years as it has in the last year or so.

It was a big step out of the mud for Illinois when the 1913 legislature passed the Tice road and bridge law, which provided for a systematic method of improving the roads to make them commensurate with the standards of progressiveness which the state has set for herself in other matters.

The Tice road and bridge law provides for the construction of a connected system of permanent roads, built at the joint expense of the state and county. In counties of the first class 15 per cent of the entire road mileage of the county is to be improved with the help of the state; in counties of the second class 20 per cent, and in counties of the third class 25 per cent.

Counties Submit Road Maps.

Immediately after the passage of this law the state highway department proceeded to outline a system of roads to be known as state aid roads, to be improved in accordance with the provision of the new road law.

The county boards of the various counties were called upon to prepare maps of their counties showing the roads which they desired to designate as state aid routes. These maps were then revised by the state highway commission so as to connect the various routes of the individual counties; the ultimate result being that there was developed a comprehensive plan for a system of permanent roads.

Sixteen thousand miles of roads are included in the designated state aid routes out of a total state mileage of 96,000. It is conservatively estimated that these routes, which are designated for state aid improvement, while but 17 per cent of the total state mileage, carry fully 80 per cent of the traffic.

The legislature in 1913 appropriated $1,100,000 for state aid road work for the biennium of 1914-1915. The following session of the legislature in 1915 appropriated $2,600,000 for the biennium of 1916-17. These appropriations are allotted to the counties in the proportion of the road and bridge tax of the county and must be met by like sums before they can be available to the county.

State Aid Work in 1915.

At the close of the last calendar year there had been constructed some 115 miles of state aid roads, of which 90.5 miles are of concrete, 22.4 miles are brick, 1.1 miles are gravel, and one mile macadam. There were also eighty-one bridges included in the state aid work up to this time. The total cost of this construction was $1,497,407, which was met equally by the state and counties.

Besides the state aid road construction mentioned, the state highway department supervised the building of some eighty-two miles of township roads in the state in 1915. These roads were paid for by the townships by means of some special tax or bonds. The state highway department assumed supervision of the construction, loaned to the township the road machinery owned by the state, and sometimes furnished a man to operate some of the machinery furnished.

In many cases stone for some of these roads was furnished free to the township from the quarries at the two state penitentiaries.

This year a good many of the counties will use their state aid allotments for the purpose of constructing oiled earth roads. There is a great deal of enthusiasm in the state just at present for this type of road, although there are many road experts who are quite skeptical as to the economic value of oil in this type of construction. The state highway commission, while it does not recommend an oiled earth road for heavy traffic, has consented to the use of the state aid money for the purpose of oiling roads where the travel is comparatively light, provided that the road is properly graded and drained.

470 Miles to Be Constructed.

The state highway department estimates that there will be some 470 miles of state aid roads constructed this year, divided as to type as follows:

Brick	31 miles
Concrete	[illegible] miles
Gravel	22 miles
Water bound macadam	5 miles
Bit. macadam	8 miles
Oiled earth	250 miles
Plain earth	120 miles

Of course these figures are but rough approximations, based on the type of road the county has selected, the amount of money available, and the estimated cost of construction. In all earth road construction, whether oil is used or not, the road surface will be so graded and drained

BOOST NATIONAL PARKS HIGHWAY

Party Will Make Trip from Seattle to Chicago to Advertise Route.

To organize communities from Chicago to Seattle for the purpose of conducting a big campaign in the interests of the National Parks highway, a party of Spokane and Seattle good roads enthusiasts will come to Chicago early in May prepared to make a dedication trip in automobiles over the 2,415 miles of highway between the cities.

Announcement of the plans is made by Frank W. Guilbert of Spokane, chairman of the executive committee of the National Parks Highway association, who will head the party. Moving pictures of the great national parks and national highways will be shown in practically every city through which the tourists pass.

"We expect to spend a week or ten days in Chicago, showing a set of several hundred colored slides of scenes along the route," Mr. Guilbert states. "Before leaving Spokane for the middle west, however, we shall have a meeting in Spokane March 29 for the purpose of outlining a campaign and to get the united support of the states of Washington, Idaho, and Montana.

"The road from the great lakes to Puget sound attracted a big automobile travel last year. Communities along the route coöperated effectively to get this result, and I am convinced that a big organized effort on our part can succeed in vastly increasing the tide of travel to the northwest this year and in succeeding years. At the meeting in Spokane March 29 we expect to perfect a permanent association for the exploitation of the highway.

"As practically all motor touring is in the summer, excepting in California and Florida, the northern route through the scenic northwest, with the great national parks of Yellowstone, Glacier, and Rainier, has advantages that will appeal to motorists above those of any other transcontinental route."

National Parks Opened to Motorists by Government

BY STEPHEN T. MATHER.
[Assistant to the Secretary of the Interior.]

The liberal treatment that Uncle Sam accorded to the motorist in the national parks last year met with such instant appreciation and resulted in such increased revenues that, personified in the department of the interior, he is planning to increase the privileges still more for the coming season.

Last year the revenue from automobiles touring the parks was $42,000, as against $13,000 in 1914, a striking commentary on the way in which the motorist has discovered and taken advantage of the playgrounds of the nation in one short year.

This great increase in travel was principally in Yosemite, Mount Ranier, and Yellowstone national parks, to the last of which automobiles were admitted for the first time last August, late in the touring season, and therefore not receiving the motor car patronage that might have been extended had the bars been lowered in the spring or early summer.

Yellowstone Opens in June.

This year Yellowstone will extend the hand of welcome to the motorist at the opening of the touring season, June 15, and a much more liberal schedule has been prepared that will permit the automobilist to travel at night, if he so desires, in addition to the special day provisions.

The horse stages will carry the bulk of the tourist travel, but a new automobile stage line is to run from Cody through the scenic Shoshone cañon to Lake Yellowstone, where it will connect with the regular stages. It it highly probable that in 1917 all lines will be motorized.

Four or five camps, exclusively for motorists, will be established at convenient points around the park, where those that carry their own commissary will find shelter for their cars, sanitary facilities, and fireplaces providing for the preparation of meals, all without any charge except the original fee of $7.50 that admits them to Uncle Sam's most wonderful of wonderlands.

Park to Park Road Planned.

The park-to-park highway plan, suggested by the department of the interior last year, has met with very enthusiastic support. Wyoming, with the indefatigable Gus Holmes of Cody directing the campaign, has mapped out a highway from Denver via the new Rocky Mountain National park through Cheyenne to Cody, the eastern entrance to the Yellowstone, which it is promised will be open for travel during the coming season. From there the motorist may tour the Yellowstone and passing out through the northern exit at Gardiner, can take in the beauties of the Glacier National park and then proceed to Mount Ranier National park in Washington, traveling over the new highway to Spokane.

The ride up to Paradise valley, the beautiful Alpine flower garden just below the snow line on Mount Ranier, is one of the greatest treats awaiting the motorist, and this year a new hotel, which will be established under government auspices, will furnish the tourist with metropolitan accommodations.

It is in the Yosemite National park, however, that the motorist is going to find the greatest improvement from his viewpoint. The Tioga road, the new highway directly across the Sierras, runs for forty-five miles through the park and two important camps are to be opened at the most scenic points along the road where good accommodations can be obtained and from which many striking trail trips can be made while the car is resting from its labors of mountain climbing.

Touring Maps from Uncle Sam.

In the Yosemite valley also the motorist will have the privilege of discovering all the scenic points en route in his automobile. An excellent touring map of the park and valley now is being prepared by the national park service of the department of the interior, which will be given each motorist when he enters the gates of California's wonderland.

The fee for touring the Yosemite National park is $5. This admits the motorist to all roads in the park without additional charge except the Wawana toll road, and an effort now is being made to secure this highway from its owners and put it on the same basis as the other arteries of travel in the park.

The motorist, contemplating a transcontinental trip in 1916, should plan to include at least two or three of the national parks in his itinerary and allow ample time to enjoy their scenic beauty. He will find himself well repaid.

GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN AIDED BY CHICAGO WOMAN'S CLUB.

Society Interesting People in Work—Plan to Beautify Mile of Illinois Highway.

BY LAURA DAYTON FESSENDEN.
[Chairman Forestry Class, Chicago Woman's Club.]

Good roads for Illinois has been a subject of interest in many of the departments of the Chicago Woman's club where civic conditions and nature study form the topics for thought and discussion.

The Chicago Woman's Outdoors league, Mrs. John Worthy, president; the Public School as a Social Center, Mrs. John H. Buckingham, chairman, and the Forestry class, Mrs. Benjamin A. Fessenden, chairman, have arranged a presentation of the Lincoln highway film for Tuesday, April 18, from 9 to 12, at the Studebaker theater, Fine Arts building, and from 1 to 6 at Fullerton hall, Art institute.

As this proposed good roads is to wind through 163 miles of Illinois, which is Lincoln's state, we naturally desire the construction and arrangement to be as nearly perfect as possible, and this can only be accomplished through and by interesting the people of the state.

In this roadway we are to be given one mile to arrange and beautify as Illinois may elect, and we want to plant trees that will in time produce shade, placing them at proper distances—fifty feet apart—with ornamental berry bearing and nut bearing trees between.

When we realise that in the United States Illinois ranks first in agriculture, third in population and wealth, and twenty-third in improved roads, it would seem that much effort should be exerted to bring our roads up to the standard of our agricultural and financial rating, and that the subject of good roads should find a prominent place in the Woman's club program of Illinois for the coming year.

SOUTHERN GOVERNOR NAMES JULY 27 GOOD ROADS DAY.

Asks Every Citizen to Aid in Repairing Sections of Highway in His District.

Thursday, July 27, has been set aside as Good Roads day in Tennessee by Gov. Rye, at which time every citizen in the state has been invited to take his shovel and pick in hand and devote the day to the betterment of the roads in his community.

It is mentioned by the Tennessee department of highways that over $30,000,000 has been spent in the state for road improvements in the last fifteen years. In 1913 and 1914 forty-four counties in the state spent a total of $12,474,298 derived from bond issues in building better roads.

The sum of $8,000,000 was appropriated through county courts and bonds issued for roads during 1915. Adding to this the amount of free labor and cost of bridges and the total for 1915 approximated $12,000,000.

PLAN MIDLAND TRAIL FROM COAST TO WASHINGTON, D. C.

Promoters Propose Route from San Francisco Eastward via Denver and St. Louis.

The Midland trail, a highway to extend from San Frfancisco to Washington, D. C., is the latest piece of modern roadway to cross the continent.

Officials of the executive committee named by the promoters have circulated a communication, with a map, showing the states, cities, and towns that will be traversed by the new road. Leaving San Francisco, it will come to Salt Lake City, thence to Denver, Pueblo, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Lexington, Winchester, Ashland, Huntington, Charleston, Richmond, and on to Washington.

NEW PIKE'S PEAK HIGHWAY RISES INTO THE CLOUDS

Smooth, Safe Highway Gives Magnificent View of Surrounding Country.

BY N. L. DREW.

Motor gadabouts who tour in Colorado this year for the first time will be afforded an opportunity to climb to the snow crested summit of Pike's peak with their automobiles, as a result of the construction of the Pike's Peak highway in the summer and fall of 1915.

The new mountain road, which is the world's highest motor highway, is virtually a double track boulevard, made of disintegrated granite and varying in width from twenty to fifty feet. The surface is as smooth and even as a city pavement. To travel over it is to motor above the clouds.

Starting at Cascade, in Ute pass, ten miles west of Colorado Springs, on the ocean to ocean highway, the new road winds upward through the Pike national forest in one great swing, in order to gain elevation to enter Cascade cañon in mile 2. It then follows a water grade on to Crystal Creek Summit, and in mile 5 and upward takes easy grades to Glen Cove, a beautiful natural amphitheater in mile 11, near timberline.

Wonderful Work in Road Building

From here contact is at once made with the main peak, and the course to the crest of the Rampart range, at an elevation of 13,000 feet, constitutes ten immense swings, with fifty and sixty foot curves which are said by engineers to be the most marvelous road building achievement of the age.

From this point the highway turns eastward along the backbone of the continent and up to the summit of the great white mountain, but so gradual has been the rise and the grades so easy that one scarcely realizes that since leaving Colorado Springs, two hours before, he has been lifted 8,109 feet.

At the summit there are five acres of comparatively level ground for parking purposes, the road being in the form of a large circle on the top of the peak.

Colorado Men Furnish Cash.

This highway was constructed last year under the personal direction of Eugene A. Sunderlin of Colorado Springs, who has the distinction also of being the youngest railway president in the United States.

Realising the great benefits that would come to his state through the construction of a road to Pike's peak, Mr. Sunderlin interested Spencer Penrose, a wealthy sportsman of Colorado, and he, together with William A. Otis, banker; A. E. Carleton, Cripple Creek mining man, and others, furnished the necessary money, after a permit from the federal government had been obtained for use of the Pike national forest reserve.

A trip to the summit of Pike's peak by motor affords a most magnificent scenic vision.

GOOD ROADS A NECESSITY TO MODERN ARMY

Victory Often Depends on Rapid Transportation of Supplies.

LESSON FOR AMERICA.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—[Special.]—Napoleon said an army travels on its belly. By this he meant it could move no faster than it could be supplied with food, ammunition, and all other supplies which an army must have. In his day armies were relatively small.

The amount of food necessary for the men and animals was not great and frequently could be found in the country in which the army was operating. The expenditure of infantry and artillery ammunition was small, not only because of the comparatively small number of muskets and guns with the army, but also because of their slow rate of fire. There were no machine guns and no heavy artillery.

For all these reasons, while transportation was of importance as far as supply was concerned, it had not become the tremendous question it is today. Now generals and staff officers must keep in touch with all parts of their army.

Napoleon Built Good Roads.

In Napoleon's day armies were so small that in spite of the lack of telephones and telegraph these officers could easily get from place to place mounted on horses. As a horse will go almost anywhere, the character of the roads made no particular difference.

In spite of this Napoleon, like every other great commander, saw the tremendous advantage in being able to move his troops quickly and therefore insisted upon and built a great many excellent roads. Fortunately for France, the French government has continued to be interested in roads with the result that today the country is covered with a network of them.

The central government maintains main highways running between Paris and the principal points. The departments build roads running between all the cities, towns, and even villages. As a consequence it is possible to go anywhere in France on a good macadam road.

Roads Kept in Repair.

They do not build roads and then leave them alone until full of holes. Each road is divided into sections, with a man in charge of each, whose business it is to fill up holes as soon as they appear. Consequently the roads are always in good condition.

Most European nations have good road systems. Their roads have been of the utmost importance to their armies since the beginning of the war. Armies today consist of millions instead of thousands. The amount of food needed for men and animals is so great that the richest community could not furnish for any period of time the supplies needed.

This means not only the whole country but often even foreign countries have to be drawn upon. Rail transportation can be used for a certain distance only. This for the reason that the rail heads must be kept in the rear of the battle field in order to be safe from enemy fire and not in danger of capture by a sudden, successful advance on the part of the enemy.

More Supplies Necessary.

From the rail heads the supplies must be gotten forward by road. Not only has the amount of food used by an army increased but also the amount of ammunition. This is due not only to the greater size of armies but more than anything else to the increased rapidity with which rifles and guns can be fired. The extensive use of machine guns, with their enormous consumption of ammunition, has increased the amount.

The number of rifles has been increased. Much heavier guns are brought into the field than formerly. This not only increases the amount of transportation necessary because of the use of more projectiles but also because each projectile of the larger guns weighs as much as several of the smaller ones.

Due to the increased range of modern artillery, rail heads must be put much farther back of the firing line than formerly. Thus not only do modern armies require more supplies than formerly but these supplies must be carried a greater distance by road.

Battle Lines Longer.

Battle lines today, instead of being two or three miles long, are now hundreds of miles. While the generals and staffs have the telephone and telegraph, their presence frequently is required at points many miles apart. As a consequence the horse no longer answers the question. The motor car must be used. Speed is essential.

Good roads are absolutely necessary if speed is to be had. While probably the proportion of wounded to the number engaged is no greater than it was, the total number of wounded is much greater. One of the serious transportation problems of an army is to get its wounded to the rear. The more the question is examined the more evident it is that the transportation problem of a modern army is enormous.

It is doubtful if it can be answered at all if nothing but horse or mule drawn wagons are to be used. The motor truck, the motor ambulance, the motor car, the motorcycle, and the traction engine are essential if the huge mass of material necessary is to be transported both with certainty and also on time. Such transportation cannot get over the worst type of road at all.

Good Roads Mean Speed.

Many roads are so bad that motor transportation is seriously delayed. Where good broad roads are available the long trains made up of motors move easily and quickly from the rail heads to the army and back again, with the result that the troops are always supplied with everything necessary and the wounded quickly moved to the base hospitals, the first ones in which they can receive proper treatment.

The more time it takes the wounded to reach these hospitals the greater the number who die of wounds and the greater the suffering. Thus motor transport over good roads not only means the quick disembarrassment of the army of its wounded but also a considerable saving of life and of suffering.

The ability to move troops quickly from one point to another may mean the difference between defeat and victory. Infantry, which makes up the great bulk of the troops of all armies, has always been hampered by its inability to move quickly. When it reaches the scene of battle it can strike harder blows than any other arm of the service. However, if it cannot get there on time it cannot strike at all.

Troops Moved in Taxicabs.

The value of motor transport for the quick movement of infantry at decisive moments was most dramatically illustrated in the present war when the French infantry of the garrison of Paris and that arriving by train from upper Alsace and the Franco-Italian border were sent from Paris to the battlefield of the Marne in thousands of Parisian taxicabs.

Practically all the European armies are using long trains each of forty or fifty city motor busses to transport infantry from rail head to the edge of the battlefield. These trains of motor busses are one of the common sights back of the French and British lines. When the Germans and Austro-Hungarians drove the Russians out of Poland the latter destroyed the railways as much as possible. While the central powers rapidly rebuilt these roads, rail heads frequently were forty or fifty miles in the rear of the advanced trenches.

Fortunately for the invading armies, the roads running in general east and west were macadam, so that they were able to use their motor transport freely. For this reason the invading armies never lacked anything and were able at the same time to make a rapid advance.

Mortars Aid German Drive.

Had they been entirely dependent on horse transportation their advance would have been much slower with the result that the Russian army could have gotten away with infinitely smaller losses and might even have had sufficient time to thoroughly organize a new defensive position and stop the invader.

As it was they were pushed so hard they were driven out of Poland and well into Russia. One of the principal factors in the capture of the Russian forts was the use by the invader of the [illegible] millimeter (about twelve inches) mortars.

Had the main roads not been good ones it is to be doubted if these guns could have been moved. At any rate, they would have been delayed a considerable time, thus giving the Russians time to strengthen their positions. Anyone who has seen a large body of troops struggling along a narrow, muddy road with mostly horse or mule drawn wagon transportation, and who also has seen an army with motor transports moving over broad, well kept macadam roads has indelibly fixed in his mind not only the desirability of good roads but the absolute necessity of having them.

Mud Delays Troops.

In the first case the infantry, loaded down with their packs, splash along in the mud and are splashed by wheel transportation of every kind while wagons and guns slide into the ditches and are occasionally upset, blocking the traffic in both directions.

In the other case the troops move easily and with comfort along one side of the road, while trains and artillery move up the middle of it, and empty trains and full ambulances come down the other side of it. The men in the trenches not only have three good meals a day, but even luxuries occasionally.

Thirty Counties of Illinois Will Raise $20,000,000 by Voting Highway Bonds.

that any type of wearing surface may be placed thereon without additional expenditure for grading or draining.

Amended Law Aids Movement.

The 1915 session of the legislature helped the good roads movement greatly when it amended the law so that the counties, if they so desire, can issue bonds to secure funds for the immediate improvement of their designated state aid routes instead of building each year only the amount of road possible with the money allotted by the state, together with the like amount furnished by the county. In case a county issues bonds for the purpose of building state aid roads the law provides that the future allotments from the state can be used if met with a similar amount by the county in paying off these bonds.

The advantages of this method are manifold. It enables the people to pay for the road at the same time they are using it. It does not throw the burden of cost on the taxpayer of today for an improvement which will last for a score of years, and be a constant benefit to the taxpayer of the future. When a system of roads is constructed with money raised by a bond issue, those who get the benefits pay the costs, which is undoubtedly the way a public improvement should be paid for. Furthermore, if fifty miles or more of road are constructed in a county at one time, the unit cost will be much less than if the fifty miles or more of construction are spread out over a period of seven or eight years. It is always cheaper to buy in large quantities and this law applies to roads as well as to any other commodity.

Twenty Millions for Roads.

Vermilion county was the first county to issue bonds for the purpose of constructing their designated system of state aid roads. They voted to issue bonds to the amount of $1,500,000 for the purpose of constructing 175 miles of permanent roads. Cook county has issued $2,000,000 in bonds for hard roads.

The enthusiasm for this plan of financing the construction of state aid roads by bond issues is growing every day. The plan of getting all the roads improved at one time without placing a heavy tax burden on the people appeals very much to the counties. This is evidenced by the fact that at the present time there are some thirty counties in the state contemplating such bond issues, the total amount of which approximates $20,000,000—ten times the amount appropriated by the last legislature for the purpose of road construction for a period of two years.

COUNTY BONDS FOR GOOD ROADS

Cook County Organization Carries on Campaign for Uniform Plan.

BENEFITS APPARENT

BY WILLIAM G. EDENS.

[President Associated Roads Organizations of Chicago and Cook County.]

The agitation throughout the state during the last four years to "Pull Illinois Out of the Mud" is now beginning to show results. The passage of the Tice bill by the Illinois legislature, enabling us to obtain state aid funds and county coöperation for the construction of principal traffic roads, was the first step.

Under this law it was found that many localities could not obtain sufficient mileage, or make headway rapidly enough, and so through local organizations for the last two years the people have been considering the advisability of local county bond issues for road construction and maintenance.

The argument is that we can build a system of state aid, or important local county traffic roads, within a period of from five to ten years out of the bond issues thus voted by the people. We also can get the benefits that come from having a system of roads that can be used nearly every day in the year without waiting fifteen or twenty years, which would be necessary under our annual allotment of state aid from the automobile license funds, and other sums appropriated by the general legislature.

Cook county being limited to 25 per cent of the appropriations made it seem all the more important that our people should give a substantial sum of money through a bond issue, these bonds to be partly retired from our accumulations that would come to us periodically from the state aid allotments, and the remainder from direct taxation on the property of the county.

Hence the campaign for a $2,000,000 bond issue in Cook county, conducted by the associated roads organizations of Chicago and Cook county at the last general election held in November, 1914. This organization was effected permanently at a meeting held at the Chicago Athletic club on the evening of Sept. 17, 1913. The membership is composed of such organizations as the following:

Beverly Country club, Chicago Association of Commerce, Chicago Athletic association, Chicago Automobile club, Chicago Automobile Trade association, Cartage Exchange of Chicago, Chicago Motor club, Cook County Truck Gardeners' and Farmers' association, Illinois Athletic club, Hamilton club, Idlewild Country club, La Grange Automobile club, Midlothian club, Ravisloe Country club, Retail Dry Goods association, and South Shore Country club.

SYSTEM OF GOOD ROADS PLANNED IN COOK COUNTY

Paved Highways Proposed to Connect Chicago with Surrounding Towns.

BY GEORGE A. QUINLAN.

[Superintendent of Highways for Cook County.]

The program of construction of country highways in Cook county for the year 1916 includes the continuation of the pavement on Milwaukee avenue, Twelfth street, Archer avenue, Western avenue, and Halsted street.

For this purpose there has been allotted to this county $109,000 by the state highway department, and there has been appropriated by the board of county commissioners an equal amount. It is anticipated to complete with this fund all of Milwaukee avenue from the city limits to the county line, with the exception of one-half mile north of the village of Wheeling.

Twelfth street road is to be improved from the limits of the present pavement to the Du Page county line. At the Du Page county line it connects with a pavement laid by that county. Western and south Park avenues, it is anticipated, will be completed to the county line at the village of Steger, and Archer avenue from the Sag bridge north to the village of Justice.

State Aid for Highways.

The roads above mentioned will be paved by state aid; that is, the state and county jointly share in the expense of construction. They are built under the direct supervision of the state highway department, according to plans and specifications prepared by it.

After being built the expense of maintenance and repair is borne by the state highway department, and directly supervised by it. The roads so far built in this county have been of a standard width of paved portion of eighteen feet, with six feet of dirt shoulders on each side of the paved portion.

In addition to the construction of roads by state aid, steps are under way to construct forty miles of country highways with funds derived from the sale of county road bonds. The roads built will be a continuation of the through route system laid down by the road and bridge committee of the board of county commissioners.

Though no definite decision has been reached, it is contemplated to build Higgins road from the city of Chicago to the Kane county line, a continuation of Archer avenue, One Hundred and Forty-ninth street and a portion of the Lincoln highway.

With the construction of the road outlined there will be a through route from the city of Chicago to Kane, Lake, Du Page, and Will county. In these counties the roads connect with a system of highways under contemplated construction.

These roads are to be built according to plans and specifications approved by the state highway department and in anticipation of the supervision of the state highway department as to their repair and maintenance. They include the repair and replacement of bridges and culverts along their routes.

$200,000 Appropriated for Roads.

On the part of the townships of this county there have been levied taxes approximating $200,000 for the repair and maintenance of roads and bridges in the respective townships.

To aid the townships in their highway improvements there has been appropriated by the board of county commissioners $100,000—$50,000 for road work and $50,000 for the building of bridges. Plans are now being prepared by the county highways department for the construction of thirty-nine concrete bridges in villages and townships, approximating a cost of $66,000.

To aid the townships in the repair of country roads there have been purchased by the county nine sets of road making machinery. This machinery is operated by the county and the road building is done jointly under the supervision of the the county and townships, the townships furnishing the labor and material and the county furnishing the machinery and men to operate it.

Better Progress in Building.

It is with a great deal of satisfaction that I am able to report that the road building for this coming year in Cook county is more than double that ever before contemplated.

To aid the motorists while construction is under way signs will be placed along the road, showing by arrow a detour route to take whenever roads are obstructed by reason of the construction of a pavement or a bridge.

BOOST COLORADO ROAD FROM JULESBURG TO BIG SPRINGS.

Link Will Give Transcontinental Tourists Chance to See Denver Mountain Parks.

Progress is being made in raising funds for further improvements on the Julesburg-Big Springs stretch of this 250 mile link connecting the main line of the Lincoln highway with Denver by way of Julesburg, Sterling, Fort Morgan, and Greeley. This link affords tourists an enjoyable scenic trip through the Denver municipal system of mountain parks, from where they can loop back to the main line over a choice of two or three circle trips.

MOLINE KNIGHT
"A Royal Car for His Majesty the American Citizen"

Moline-Knight "40" 7-passenger, $1450

MOLINE-KNIGHT

Will you allow us to give you a few buying points in selecting your next car?

Selecting the motor car you will drive is a man's size job these days. There are a lot of mighty good cars on the market right now—many of them really remarkable values.

But the problem that confronts you is to select the one best car fitted to your own individual needs—and right here is where your shrewd business experience should be called into action.

Of course you can't be sure of getting the car that will suit you the best unless you take a little time to look around. We would prefer that you see the others first—a little advantage in salesmanship we admit—but at the same time we do not object to your giving the Moline-Knight "40" the first call—we will take a chance on your coming back.

Just what does the Moline-Knight "40" offer you for your money?

Of course you must see and ride in this car to appreciate all of its refinements and conveniences, as well as its extreme beauty.

When you raise the hood, you will notice that the Moline-Knight "40" is built of few parts, due to the simplicity of construction under the sliding sleeve valve Knight principle.

The action is positive and noiseless, the flow of power continuous, the response instant and the workmanship of all of the mechanism is of the highest grade.

The 40 horsepower is guaranteed, the wheelbase is 118 inches, the two compounded, semi-elliptic springs are so sensitive that they make shock absorbers unnecessary and prevent all side-sway; the lubrication is forced so that it automatically adjusts itself to speed of motor; the frame is 7¾ inches in depth which means that it is the strongest, lightest and most rigid of any car at any price, the tonneau provides ample luxury—room for seven full grown passengers, including two disappearing auxiliary seats, the easy, graceful body lines appeal to the artistic eye, extra expense has been put into the upholstering to insure comfort and freedom from "car fatigue," the exterior finish will match your piano, and this touring car completely equipped weighs less than 3000 pounds, price $1450—a never-before value.

Drop in and look it over

Do a little motor car shopping before you invest. See the Moline-Knight "40" first or last—but see it. Let us give you a list of names of owners living in this city—let them tell you why they selected the Moline-Knight "40" in preference to all others. Then we will arrange to give you a demonstration—with no obligation on your part.

WOMEN OF SOUTH PLANTING TREES ON DIXIE HIGHWAY

Enlist Aid of Northern Sisters in Beautifying Michigan-Florida Road.

BY NELLIE FROST FYFFE.

It was Dixie that inspired countless numbers of southern women to toil uncomplainingly over mysterious white garments, with the weird "K. K. K." insignia embroidered in red on the shield, during the sorrowful days of reconstruction.

Stop at most any southern farmhouse nowadays, for in the big cities such talk is never heard any more, and the old man smoking his pipe by the open fire will tell you that something like 400,000 of those white suits, so terrifying when encountered astride a horse on the road of a dark night, were made by the southern women and never a word breathed of who was to wear them. The old man still remembers of stealing into the parlor, where the shades were drawn, shutting out the bright sunlight and the peaceful droning of the bees, to surprise his mother in the shadow of the horse hair sofa, sewing on something big and white and baggy looking, which was hastily tucked out of sight when he entered the room.

Southern Women Make Sacrifices.

In those days the southern women made all sorts of brave sacrifices for the protection of their beloved Dixie, and possibly there is a measure of truth in the assertion that if the southern women could have been won over the south would not have been able to withstand the misfortunes of war as long as it did.

It is Dixie that is calling again to her daughters, and they are answering with the loyalty and energy characteristic of their mothers and grandmothers, not for the protection of Dixie this time, but for the upbuilding and broadening of Dixie.

The task they have set themselves to perform will wipe out sectional lines by the promotion of good friendship between all parts of the nation, it will relieve in great measure the lot of the lonely women dwellers on the farm, who have been cut off from the rest of their kind by being forced through circumstances to live in isolated districts, and will be of the utmost importance to the commercial future of the south.

Women Aid Dixie Highway.

Having all this in mind, a coterie of prominent southern women have lately banded together to create active organizations for aiding in the work of building the Dixie highway. They have no intention whatever of doing this work single handed or making it a southern movement, but will enlist the aid of the women of the north in order that the Dixie highway may be a road in which all shall share alike.

The plan as originated by the women of Georgia is to plant trees and flowers along the highway, encourage folks who live along the route to paint their houses, barns, and fences, trim up the lawns, and mark all points of historic interest.

Wayside wells will be attractively marked, the ground around them cleaned up, a rustic seat built nearby, and an invitation to stop for a drink displayed at just the right spot where it will be sure to catch the eye of the thirsty traveler.

Trees to Border Road.

A score of counties along the southern route of the highway in Kentucky, Georgia, and Florida already have been organized and selections made of the trees and shrubs that will border the road. Through the beautiful Bluegrass region of Kentucky, famed in song and story, elm trees and dogwood will be planted; in Tennessee, on the stretches of road where rugged oaks and mountain laurel have not already been liberally distributed by the hand of nature, pecan trees will be set out.

The hackberry tree has been chosen to adorn long stretches of the beautiful roads in Georgia and several hundred of these have already been put in the ground under the personal supervision of the enthusiastic women who are behind the work there.

Royal palms, red and pink hibiscus, and oleanders in great profusion will add much to the semi-tropical beauties of the Florida landscape.

Road Over 4,000 Miles Long.

The Dixie highway will be the first national roadway to benefit by the good roads educational campaign conducted by the various women's clubs throughout the country for some time. Taking into consideration the great length of this road, extending as it does from the Straits of Mackinac on the north to the Everglades of Florida on the south, a distance of over 4,000 miles, the work inaugurated by the women is no small undertaking.

The building of the Dixie highway, while a man size job, never could be a man's work entirely, for the beautifying of the highway is one of the most important features in the completion of a tourist route.

To the women of Bibb county, Georgia, of which the beautiful little city of Macon is the county seat, goes the honor of being the first to have the active coöperation of the high school pupils in the work of planting trees along the highway in Bibb county.

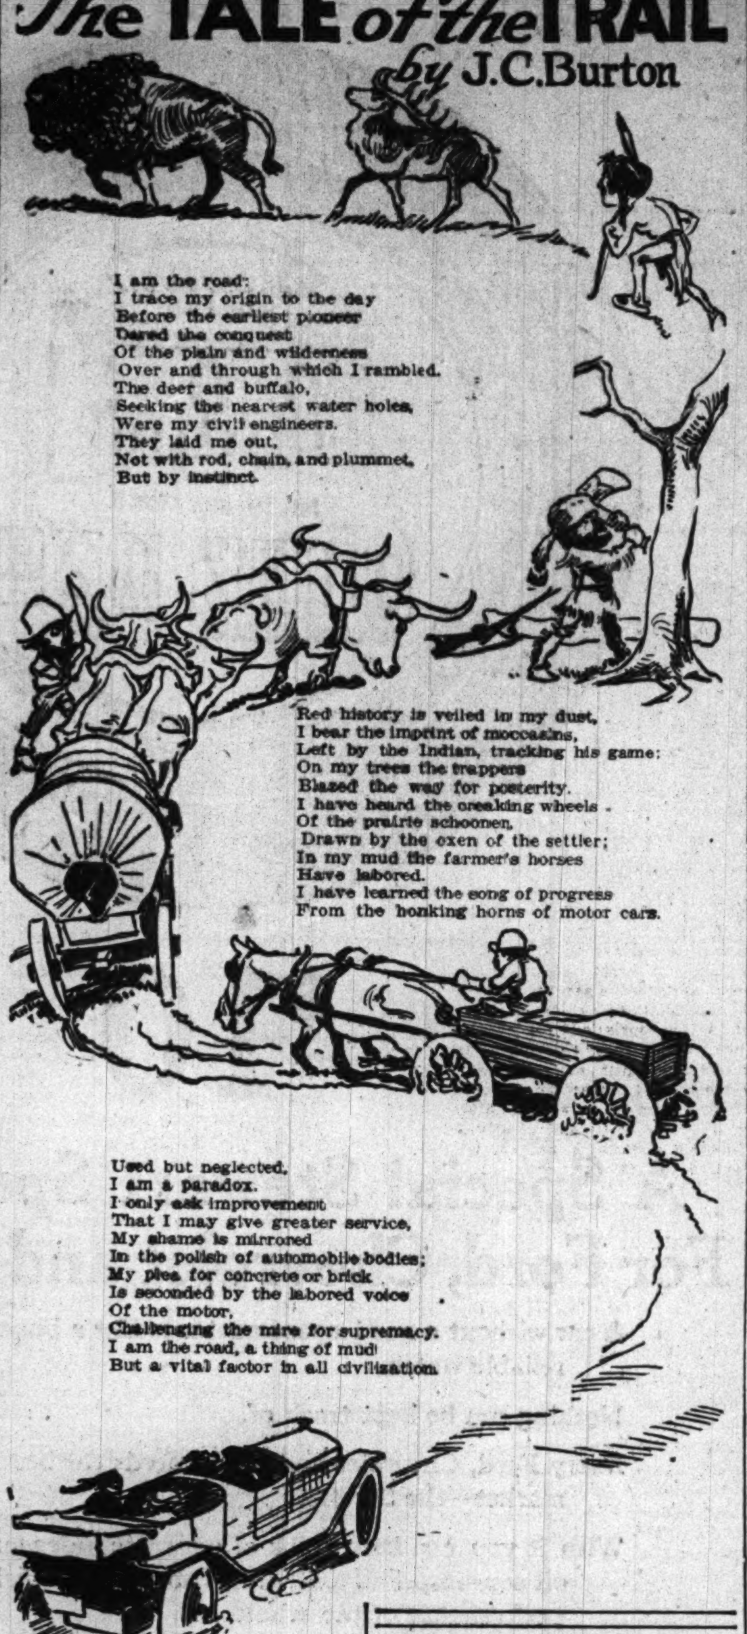
Planters Donate Shrubs.

The planters of Georgia have been most generous in their coöperation and have donated quantities of trees, hackberry, mock orange and pecan for the purpose. The county commissioners in many sections have given official approval to the movements by furnishing convicts and teams to aid the women in the manual part of the work.

"Plant a tree for the baby instead of giving him a silver spoon," is the practical slogan originated by the Florida women in their campaign for better highways. The idea of planting a tree in the name of the youngest of the household came about through their desire to do away with barren, sun baked roads and to create instead broad highways bordered with flowers and shaded at just the exact spot in the road where the automobile might be expected to break down.

The TALE of the TRAIL

by J.C.Burton



I am the road:
I trace my origin to the day
Before the earliest pioneer
Dared the conquest
Of the plain and wilderness
Over and through which I rambled.
The deer and buffalo,
Seeking the nearest water holes,
Were my civil engineers.
They laid me out,
Not with rod, chain, and plummet,
But by instinct.

Red history is veiled in my dust,
I bear the imprint of moccasins,
Left by the Indian, tracking his game:
On my trees the trappers
Blazed the way for posterity.
I have heard the creaking wheels
Of the prairie schooner,
Drawn by the oxen of the settler;
In my mud the farmer's horses
Have labored.
I have learned the song of progress
From the honking horns of motor cars.

Used but neglected,
I am a paradox.
I only ask improvement
That I may give greater service,
My shame is mirrored
In the polish of automobile bodies;
My plea for concrete or brick
Is seconded by the labored voice
Of the motor,
Challenging the mire for supremacy.
I am the road, a thing of mud
But a vital factor in all civilization.

THREE LARGE COUNTIES OF MINNESOTA PUT UP MUCH.

Contribute About 50 Per Cent of State Road and Bridge Fund of $1,500,000.

The three large counties of Minnesota get $50,000 each as their allotment from the $1,500,000 state road and bridge fund, these counties being Hennepin, Ramsey, and St. Louis, in which are situated, respectively, Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth.

They contribute together about 50 per cent of the fund. The largest sum that may be allotted to any county is 3 per cent.

All of the motor vehicle tax, after deducting the cost of administration, goes into this state fund.

IOWA REGISTRATIONS PASS THE 100,000 MARK.

Iowa automobile registrations for 1916 have passed the 100,000 mark. The amount of registration fees paid to the state treasury so far this year has been over $1,000,000.

CHICAGO MAKES BIG 1916 PLANS FOR PAVEMENTS

Will Repair Through Routes First—30 Miles of Street to Be Treated.

BY A. W. MILLER.

[Superintendent of Streets, City of Chicago.]

During the last year a contradiction was found in Chicago's vehicle tax law, but due to the coöperation of individuals and good roads organizations, the whole matter has been corrected, and the street department is again able to develop its ideas of betterment and to expand along the lines of good roads and streets by efficient and careful repair and maintenance.

During 1915 the original idea of resurfacing worn out pavements with bituminous mixture was carried out, and 18.4 miles of streets were made into practically new pavements.

Since these betterments have been taken care of, the bureau has submitted with the 1916 appropriation a list of streets upon which a total of thirty miles of bituminous surface will be laid. The streets to be resurfaced during 1916 are

Street.	From.	To.
State	Ninety-fifth	103d.
Torrence	Ninety-fifth	03d.
Torrence	107th	30th.
130th	Torrence	Carondolet.
Vincennes	103d	111th.
Archer	Rockwell	Central Park.
Western	Seventy-first	Seventy-fifth.
Halsted	121st	City limits.
Jeffery	Sixty-seventh	Eighty-third.
Eighty-third	Jeffery	Escanaba.
Milwaukee	Edwards	City limits.
Elston	Lawrence	Milwaukee.
Peterson	Ravenswood	Elston avenue.
Devon	Western	Lincoln.
North Central	Grand	Irving Park.
Montrose	Central	Maynard.
Norwood Park	Raven	City limits.
Raven	Milwaukee	Norwood.
Higgins	Central	City limits.
Kenilworth	Western	Kedzie.
Ninety-first	Western	Prospect square
Narragansett	Irving Park	Addison.
Addison	Narragansett	N. Oak Park.

$34,433.27 Spent in 1915.

During 1915 the poor macadam streets had to be put in passable condition; 136,907 square yards were reshaped, rolled, and a top dressing of limestone put on, the total cost being $34,433.27, or 25c per square yard.

A glance at the above cost will immediately demonstrate the fallacy of repairing macadam pavements with stone when resurfacing with bituminous mixture can be done for approximately a three years' repair bill and give practically a new pavement that will stand up for at least five years.

The time may come, and we hope it will be soon, when the city will be allowed to spread an assessment for the resurfacing of wornout macadam streets.

To form an idea of the amount of material to be used in 1916 one has only to look at the quantities used in 1915:

Brick	584,000
Granite block	3,022	sq. yds.
Creosote block	4,217	sq. yds.
Crushed limestone	61,236	cu. yds.
Crushed granite	5,986	cu. yds.
Torpedo sand	2,891	cu. yds.
Bank sand	18,773	cu. yds.
Gravel	1,812	cu. yds.
Asphalt	3,339	tons
Stone dust	517	tons
Cement	14,146	barrels
Road oil	961,898	gallons
Fuel oil	407,181	gallons
Flux oil	188,809	gallons
Gasoline	53,200	gallons
Pitch	4,772	gallons

Hasten Through Route Plan.

The bureau feels that its most important activity is the improvement of poor and impassable outlying streets and the hastening to completion of the through route plan inaugurated during 1913.

The aim of this through route plan is to build and improve as quickly as possible and as our funds permit pavements on those streets which carry the heaviest traffic and which form logical connecting links between the central part of the city and the outlying districts and country towns.

We eventually intend to have a comprehensive system of good pavements whereby it will be possible for traffic to travel in any direction from city limits to city limits.

While this plan includes the repair of miscellaneous pavements in the heart of the city, its most important function is the resurfacing with bituminous concrete mixture of old macadam pavements on the outlying thoroughfares.

Much Progress Made.

During the year just closed the activities in this field have been satisfactory, both to the city authorities and those interested in better roads and pavements, and the city has received numerous communications from good roads organizations and individuals commending the results obtained from the expenditures of the vehicle tax fund, the collections and expenditures of which for the last eight year are as follows:

Year.	Collections.	Expenditures.
1908	$440,253.98	$433,056.83
1909	504,197.75	506,298.99
1910	566,191.57	501,392.18
1911	591,147.06	576,195.54
1912	603,282.70	562,358.55
1913	682,135.10	719,106.39
1914	730,586.81	813,980.42
1915	768,027.73	782,022.30

Tax Collections Increasing.

It will be noted from the above table that the vehicle tax collections are steadily increasing from year to year, and it is directly to this yearly increase that the vehicle tax division is able to develop its activities.

In the work for 1916 only an approximate estimate can be made of the quantity and costs, and the last year's results will give a fair estimate of kind and amount of work the coming season will witness.

At present we feel a considerable increase will be noticed over last year's work, although future conditions and prices may increase the unit costs slightly over last year.

FORREST ROAD EXTENDED.

The Forrest highway, between Atlanta, Ga., and Birmingham, Ala., is to be extended to Mobile, Ala., according to plans made at a recent meeting. It will pass through Montgomery, Greenville, Evergreen, Brewton, and Bay Minette. The construction of two branches between Greenville and Bay Minette is probable, as there is much competition between the two sections.

PRIVATE COMPANY TAKES OVER ROAD IN VIRGINIA.

Will Operate Pike for Toll Until the State Is Ready to Take It Back.

The legislature of Virginia has granted a charter to an association known as the Warrenton and Fairfax Turnpike company, Inc., which will take over the old Alexandria-Warrenton pike, to grade and re-surface the road and operate it as a tollroad until the state wishes to take it back.

The charter states that when the state does take it back it must pay the stockholders the cost of the road, with interest, minus dividends.

TAKE STEPS TOWARD GOOD ROAD CROSSING ARKANSAS.

Fort Smith Citizens Plan Highway as Part of Route to New Orleans.

Initial steps toward the building of a north and south road across Arkansas which it is hoped will be designated as a part of the Jefferson highway, to run from Manitoba, Canada, to New Orleans, were taken at a recent meeting at Fort Smith, attended by 800 leading citizens.

The tentative route passes through Oklahoma, but as the final decision will not be made for two years, the people of Arkansas feel that they have an excellent chance. The delegates voted that the road shall be hard surfaced throughout.

Scott county has agreed to give a cash bonus of $10,000 and to build a steel bridge over every stream.

U. S. ROAD AID QUALIFIED FOR BY 43 STATES

Five Commonwealths Have Yet to Obtain Centralized Highway Control.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—Forty-three of the forty-eight states will qualify for federal aid in roads under the Bankhead bill, recently reported favorably to the senate by its committee on postoffices and post roads.

Indiana, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, and Texas are the five states which have yet to equip themselves with a centralized direction of roads improvement. Indiana has an active campaign in progress which ought to prove successful, energized in great degree by the Hoosier State Automobile association.

South Carolina is giving the question of a state highway department serious consideration. Georgia is an equally hopeful condition, while Mississippi in its house of representatives recently voted against the creation of a state commission. The legislators opposed the legislation because it called for an engineer with a salary of $2,500 a year.

Texas under the Bankhead measure would obtain more federal coöperation than any other state in the union, its area taking it into first place, though it falls behind many other states in population and road mileage. It is certain that Texas will provide a highway department within three years, for section 3 of the senate measure contains this proviso: "Except that amounts apportioned for any fiscal year to any state which has not a state highway department shall be available for expenditure in that state until the close of the third fiscal year succeeding the close of the fiscal year for which such apportionment was made."

MISSISSIPPI FACTIONS IN FIGHT ON DAVIS HIGHWAY.

The fight for the location of the Jefferson Davis highway may be taken to the Mississippi legislature for decision owing to the warmth manifested by the contending factions of the eastern and western hill and delta counties.

IMPROVED ROADS UPLIFT SOCIETY, INCREASE TRADE

Highways Important Factor in Bringing Tourists to Different Localities.

BY CHARLES W. MEARS.

[Advertising Manager the Winton Company.]

A friend of mine lives on a fine estate two miles from a certain college town. Eight miles away in the other direction is another town of about the same size. And all the purchases for this estate are made in the town eight miles away, because it is easier to motor the eight miles over good roads than it is to struggle through the two miles of bad road that leads to the college town.

It is likewise easier for the merchants in the town eight miles away to make deliveries to the estate than it is for the merchants in the town two miles away.

Some years ago New Jersey required motorists from other states to take out New Jersey licenses before they were permitted to ride on Jersey soil. The result was that the state lost untold thousands of dollars that tourists were spending elsewhere, and would gladly have spent in the seaside state. New Jersey saw its mistake and took down the bars, and now every summer the state profits immensely from tourists.

Profit in Pennsylvania Roads.

Pennsylvania formerly had so bad a reputation for poor roads that practically all tourists went east by way of Buffalo and New York state. Last summer the Lincoln highway opened up a wonderfully beautiful stretch of country between Pittsburgh and Chambersburg over the Allegheny mountains, and at once a great stream of tourists flowed into Pennsylvania to enjoy the delights of a state that had previously been closed to them. And, of course, Pennsylvania earned both money and advertising in consequence.

These three instances point to a single moral. And that moral is that if a community or a commonwealth wants the benefits of travel and commerce from other communities or commonwealths, it must first take down the bars.

Of all bars, bad roads are positively the worst. So far as motoring is concerned, bad roads take all the pleasure out of it, and the touring car owner will not knowingly plan to travel in bad road districts unless forced to do so. And motoring is only one of the elements.

Bad Roads Limit Acquaintance.

People who are forced to live in bad road districts are deprived of easy social communication, and are more or less strangers to their neighbors and the great outside world.

As a rule, ignorance accompanies mud. Many motorists in bad road districts, stopping to ask a farmer information about roads to points not ten miles away, have found that the farmer had never traveled so far away and could give no directions.

Where it takes a man and team all day to go to town and back over bad roads, frequent trips to town are out of the question. Where the same trip can be made in an hour or less over good roads, the trip can be made frequently and at no great loss of time. Life in every aspect is almost always a matter of intercommunication, for man is a social being, and anything that limits his opportunity to be sociable necessarily restricts his life.

No matter from what angle one views the subject, bad roads are a barrier to human progress and human happiness, and deserve to be abolished.

OLD TRAILS HEAD TO QUIT.

Judge J. M. Lowe, who has been president of the National Old Trails association for the last five years, announces that the national headquarters of the road in the Midland building, Kansas City, Mo., will be closed April 1 and that he would resign from his office at once. Lack of financial support for the road is the cause.

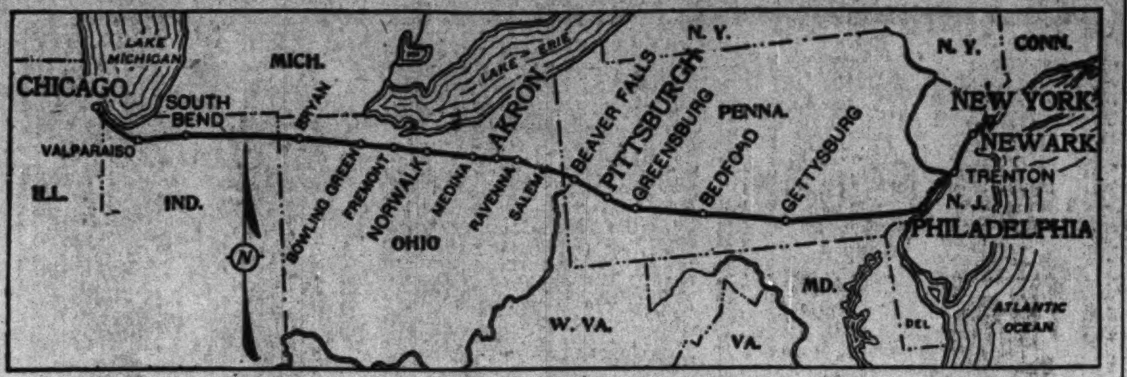
Chicago-New York Tourists Offered Short Cut Route.



The Goodrich national touring bureau has outlined especially for TRIBUNE readers what it considers the best and shortest connection between Chicago and New York. The road follows the Lincoln highway as far as South Bend, proceeding thence east over improved roads, with one or two short exceptions, to Akron. From Akron to Pittsburgh it is considerably better than the Lincoln highway for 1916 travel, the travel being over brick, macadam, and gravel roads for over one-half the distance, and the balance being excellent summer roads. From Pittsburgh to New York the route is macadam all the way. The Chicago-New York short cut route is approximately the same distance as the Lincoln highway and is over 150 miles shorter than the better known connection via Cleveland, Buffalo, and Albany. Road conditions are about the same.

GOOD ROADS AID TO U. S. DEFENSE

Motorization of Army Depends Largely on Condition of Highways.

BY W. E. STALNAKER.

[Vice President Pathfinder Automobile Company.]

Good roads is just another way of spelling preparedness. With all this learned discussion of preparedness at this time every American citizen who has an opinion of any sort drapes himself loosely around the corner cigar counter and spouts forth effusive words of wisdom with the universal title "How I Would Do It."

If all this discussion could be utilized to start a propaganda for good roads how much more important it would be and with a far more lasting good. And in this connection preparedness in a large measure would be taken care of.

Good roads are essential in warfare in transporting troops, artillery, munitions, and commissary requisites to the scene of activity. Motor transportation has proven its worth in the modern methods of carrying on warfare, and the warring nations of Europe would be at an enormous disadvantage without this aid.

Importance in Invasion.

In the not too remote occasion of an invasion of this country we would be forced to meet the tremendous problem of moving troops to meet the enemy's lines. The vastness of this country, in itself a protection of no little consideration against a foreign foe, would hinder us in speedily getting troops to the front.

The railroad facilities, while ample for the ordinary necessities of commerce, were not intended for military purposes and consequently do not lead to points which would be chosen as of the most strategic importance to the invading power. But, on the other hand, there is scarcely a place which cannot be reached by road.

Picture a fleet of motor cars—or whatever is the correct military term—carrying troopers eager to jump into the fray, in some of the sloughs of sticky mud, in courtesy called roads, in which this country abounds.

All Roads Should Be Better.

They would have no more chance of reaching the advancing lines than a man trying to pass a cigaret coupon for a $5 note on the eagle eyed box office man at a loop theater.

These roads all should be bettered; there is scarcely one which could not be improved. Then the skill and ingenuity of our American motor car concerns, which have made this country dominate the motor world, could be utilized.

A day's output of the factories at Detroit, Indianapolis, and other automobile centers would be entirely adequate to motorize the United States army.

Would Speed Troop Movement.

It would be possible to move whole regiments over night to distances which could be encompassed only after days of marching, and leave the soldiers in better physical condition for fighting.

With a motorized army and good roads there would be no more inspiring sight than a regiment so equipped viewed from a height bearing down on the sprawling line of the enemy like a host of infuriated red ants on a magnified scale, spitting fire and smoke as they advance.

MOTOR CAR LICENSE FEES SWELL FUNDS IN OREGON.

Value of Automobiles in State Estimated at $3,000,000—Yields Revenue of Nearly $100,000.

Motor car figures in the state of Oregon are changing rapidly. At the close of February 12,878 owners had received their yellow tags, while 19,046 Oregon owners had received their red tags.

Multnomah county leads all others in the state with upwards of 9,000 cars.

A valuation of from $250 to $400 a car makes a gross assessment valuation of motor cars of $3,000,000. This will yield a revenue of nearly $100,000, which will find its way into the road fund.

GOOD ROADS AID WOMEN DRIVERS

Dislike to Venture Into Country Over Poorly Kept Highways.

BY H. E. DOTY.

[Chicago Branch Manager Haynes Motor Car Company.]

"We have had dinned in our ears that good roads are going to profit the general public by cutting hauling costs, vivifying the country, booming real estate values, but no one has so much as intimated that good roads have benefits in store particularly for women. They might well feel that they have been slighted.

"Women and automobiles have been marked as boon companions. A few women drove cars when they were cranked by hand. But since the advent of the self-starter and improved steering devices milady has been drawn closer to her automobiles for women may now take their cars and go where they please, so long as streets and roads are good.

Improves Women's Health.

"There is no getting around the fact that the automobile has made a prettier, healthier, and more self-reliant woman. The woman driver today can thread through traffic expertly, and she is beating chauffeurs at their own tricks in city driving.

"Just now few women venture taking their cars out over country roads alone. Thoroughfares outside city limits have offered rigors and discomforts that she is unwilling to put up with on a pleasure spin. Usually the trip out through the country is postponed until Saturday or Sunday, when a man can preside at the wheel.

Makes Country Accessible.

"Level and solid roads, kept up the year around, are going to place the sunshine and good air of the country at the feminine driver's pleasure every day in the week."

LAW OBSTRUCTS ROAD LABOR BY STATE CONVICTS

More Progress Could Be Made If Work Were Directed by Governor.

BY EDGAR C. FRADY.

[Chicago Distributor Cole Motor Car Company.]

Colorado, through the wonderful system inaugurated by Warden Tynan of the state penitentiary, has, by the employment of convict labor on its highways, conclusively demonstrated its ability to combine the work of building good roads and rebuilding men. Georgia, by following the same methods, has built one of the greatest systems of sand-clay highways in the United States, while several other commonwealths either have fallen into line or are making plans to do so.

Illinois, like the immortal Barkis, "is willin'," but at the present time is handicapped by restrictions imposed by state laws. These laws require the penitentiary authorities to secure the consent of and to enter into contracts with the commissioners of townships in which road work is to be done by the convicts, with a further provision that the improvements shall be carried out under the supervision of the township and state highway commissioners.

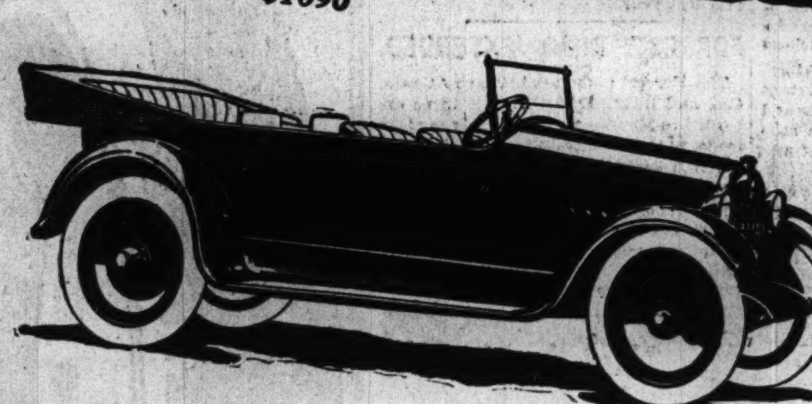
Favors Change in Law.

Warden Michael Zimmer of the Joliet penitentiary, who is heartily in favor of continuing the work started by his predecessor, Warden Allen, suggests that if the laws were changed so that the governor, through the highway commissioners, could select the roads to be improved and notify the warden where to work the men, the prison authorities would be in a better position to make the improvements. As agitation for good roads gains favor, it is the hope and belief of Warden Zimmer that the necessary laws will be enacted, thus giving a broader scope and a better opportunity for employing convicts on the state highways now so badly in need of repair.

From the comparatively little experience they have had, the prison authorities have found they are able to do the work as well and as cheaply as it can be done by outside labor. The convicts employed on the roads have given satisfaction and their conduct has been exemplary. Working on the roads has given them an opportunity of proving their fitness to go back into the world as good citizens. In this way the state of Illinois has gained a twofold advantage—better roads and better men.

1916 Prospects Not Bright.

"The prospect does not look any too good for 1916, although I have assurances from the state highway commissioners that they will try to interest various townships to the extent that considerable work may be done during the summer," says Warden Zimmer.



The New Case 40—$1090

Surprises Await You

An even slight investigation of the new Case 40 discloses many new and exclusive features. To go over its superiorities in detail is to be filled with wonder and admiration.

See how the cantilever springs are mounted on a ball-like seat on the rear axle—thus removing all side sway and pitching. Case spring features, together with low centre of gravity, gives a road-hugging car that smooths out ugly stretches.

With a wheelbase of 120 inches, it has more than comfortable roominess. Another innovation is removable upholstery—in real grain leather. Then, Case uses a new way of attaching the cantilever spring to the rear axle—a way that makes all the difference in the world in comfort. The luxuries and refinements of this car can not be duplicated at its price of $1090. Check them over for yourself.

If space permitted we could go on and on, itemizing many, many features in the new Case 40 that would certainly command your interest. But the easiest and best way is to have you see this car for yourself and to explain it to you point by point. This we shall be glad to do at your convenience.

Or we shall send illustrated description by mail, if you wish.

GOOD ROADS AID MARKETING OF FARM PRODUCTS

Better Highways Would Benefit Both City Buyers and Country Sellers.

BY THOMAS J. HAY.

[Chicago Distributor Chandler and Hupmobile.]

Although the subect of good roads has been written about and talked about from every possible angle, it is a subject that vitally affects every citizen. It has an influence on his business, and the difference between well paved streets and roads is the difference between the backwoods country town and the up to date city.

We must realize that the question of good roads is largely a question of finance. Regardless of the number of good roads editions of newspapers, good roads banquets, good roads conventions, the building of good roads involves vast sums of money.

In the early days substantial aid was given road building by the United States government; with the advent of the railroad the building of pikes and canals was carried on by counties and cities without government aid. A great many million dollars were given to the railroads and little or nothing to perfecting a national road system.

Motorists Want Good Roads.

The present agitation for the improvement of the country road is directly due to the influence of the automobile and the urgent demand is from the country districts, ably seconded by the automobile owning population of the cities. The cities are usually well paved, the streets carefully named and numbered, but the farmer is groping along in the streak of mud that runs by his farm much as he did fifty or one hundred years ago.

The proprietor of a farm is engaged in the business of farming. Frequently the farmer, when you ask him what business he is engaged in, will remark that he is not in business, that "he is only a farmer." The farmer is mistaken in this.

Every owner of a farm or every renter of a farm is surely the original business man. True, he is not a manufacturer, but generally he is in business on his own account, finding his own capital, producing his own product, and then, after he produces it, he has to be business man enough to sell it in the best markets at the highest prices.

Farmers Demand Better Roads.

Imagine the Michigan avenue business man without a number on his building, without a sign designating the character of his business and with nothing whatever to attract the trade to his place of business—then you will realize just what the farmer is doing with reference to his own business. The actual investment in the average farm in dollars and cents is more than the average investment of the city business man.

One of the first steps the farmer is taking toward becoming a real business man is to insist that his method of communication with his neighbors and his trading center be equal to that of the city business man. He is asking good, hard, smooth roads that can be traveled in any day of the year, over which his team or automobile can pull a maximum load with a minimum amount of effort. These roads would enable him to reach his market when prices are highest and when his goods are ready for delivery.

Vast volumes of business are transacted in the cities and they deal on a margin of 1 per cent or various fractions thereof, and fortunes are made in those slight changes in values, yet the difference that a farmer can realize in the value of his crop between selling it any old time and selling it at the favorable time would probably represent a saving to the farmer of 10 or 15 per cent of the value of his year's product.

Farmer Using Antiquated System.

The farmer has a greater variety of goods to sell than many merchants in the city, but he does not display his wares nor does he make known his sales place, but he is following the antiquated methods of marketing his products that were used by his father and grandfather.

The 40,000 pleasure automobiles in Chicago are mostly owned by men of families. From now until snow flies again these 40,000 automobilists will be scouring the highways and byways for a hundred miles around Chicago. If the farmer would offer for sale to these cash customers the products of his farm, how long would it take for the householders of Chicago to become accustomed to running out into the country to get their fresh eggs, butter, chickens, and garden and farm products?

All that is necessary to start this new method of merchandising is to have reasonably good roads from the city to the farm districts and for the farmer to buy signs and show his merchandise, as the city merchant does. This would result in bringing the producer and the consumer directly together to their mutual profit.

The farmer merchant would get a better price for his product and the consumer would benefit by getting fresh produce at slightly less price than he now poys for.

MERIDIAN ROAD ACROSS ILLINOIS

Highway in Fair Condition Extends from Northern Boundary to Cairo.

BY J. V. LAWRENCE.

[Chicago Distributor Velie Motor Cars.]

Illinois was the cradle of several good roads projects during the last twelve months, not the least robust of which is the Meridian highway, extending from the northern boundary of the state to Cairo and having for its route the shortest distance between the two termini the third principal meridian.

The promoters of the road, who formed a permanent organization in December, are confident that the highway will become one of the most popular in the state, as it not only is the most direct route to southern Illinois, but is the natural way of reaching the lake regions of Wisconsin, and serves as a feeder to the National Parks highway.

The details of the route remain to be worked out and there may be some changes made. A thorough inspection for the purpose of final decision will be made early in the spring, on the occasion of which it is planned to have a grand tour in which residents of all the communities along the line will take part.

From Rockford to Rochelle the road is almost as the crow flies, is over a level country, and if kept well graded and dragged can be put in excellent condition. On both sides of Rochelle there is some good macadam and gravel road.

Well graded earth road, which needs either persistent dragging or draining and oiling, is the prevailing type between Rochelle and the point five or six miles north of Mendota, where one encounters some good oiled road leading to some fair macadam road.

Gravel and macadam prevail to La Salle and from La Salle to Tonica, a distance of about ten miles. The twelve miles from Tonica to Wenona is partly gravel and well graded earth road.

Well graded earth road with short stretches of oiled road in and out of Minonk and El Paso are the conditions between Wenona and Hudson, through Rutland, Minonk, El Paso, and Kappa.

Between Hudson and Bloomington the road on the east side of the Illinois Central is oiled all the way, a distance of ten miles.

COLUMBIA RIVER ROAD WONDERFUL PIECE OF WORK

Highway Reveals Scenic Beauties of Oregon Wilds to Auto Tourist.

BY J. R. BUCK.

[Chicago Distributor National and Peerless.]

Recently Chicago witnessed an exhibition of natural color pictures of the remarkable Columbia river highway of Oregon, the newest pathway for the recreationist in America and considered by many persons to be the most wonderful drive in the world.

By competent judges it is classed with the Axenstrasse of Switzerland and the Corniche d'Or. Among the trail followers of the world the scenery of the Columbia river highway is considered equal to Yellowstone park and the Grand Cañon.

The Columbia river highway is in a section of the United States where brilliant color is combined with water and atmospheric effects to enhance the beauties of the rugged gorge where its chief attraction is found.

$2,000,000 Spent for Highway.

It is a paved highway for forty-seven miles east of Portland, Ore., on a 5 per cent grade, is located on the Oregon shore and parallel to the Columbia river, and reaches from the Pacific ocean to Pendleton, Ore., with Portland at about the halfway point.

It has cost approximately $2,000,000 to construct, $1,250,000 of the amount being voted by the people of the county in which Portland is located and the remainder by counties along the route.

The scenic beauty of the Columbia river highway presents a combination of the wonders of the Rhine, the Alps, and southern Italy. It follows in places the shore line of the river, with low hanging hills as a background; in others it hangs on cliffs, is supported by retaining walls of dry masonry, and at its highest point circles a mountain top on a roadbed that is placed on stilts of concrete and steel.

Its variety of scenery ranges from seashore and placid river to the wild grandeur and rugged power of mountain chasms. As he stood at Crown point ex-President Taft said:

"God was doing something when he made this."

For the tourist who travels by train or who prefers to ship his car rather than undertake the long trip across the continent, Portland becomes the scenic center of the northwest's activities. Some of the best hotels, equal to anything in Chicago, are to be found in Portland, while its garages are equal to any task imposed upon them.

Going east from Portland over the Columbia river highway the tourist finds the Auto club at the crossing of the Sandy river, and after taking the long paved hill on the other side on the high he comes out at Chanticler inn. Just beyond is Crown point, the highest elevation reached by the highway.

Beautiful Views from Road.

Circling this he may drive into the park and spend a few moments at Vista house, where a memorial has been raised to the pioneers who floated through the gorge that spreads out below.

From its balconies and from the observation platform thirty-five mile views stretch away to the north and the south—visions of combined color and form, of moss covered rocks standing thousands of feet in the air, of a constantly changing river, of a wall of gren spotted and striped with the flora that is so abundant in the Oregon climate.

From Crown Point the roadway enters the gorge of the Columbia river. It spirals downward over a double figure eight and enters the district of "the falling waters." Eleven magnificent water falls are passed in a ten mile run, the highest being Multnomah Falls, second highest in the United States.

Waterfalls Have Charm.

Latourell Falls, Shepperd's Dell, Bridal Veil, Coopey Falls, Dalton Falls, Mist Falls, Wahkeena Falls, and Benson park all have their charm. At Oneonta gorge a subterranean stream sends blasts of cold air shooting along the rock walls. Then come Horsetail Falls, Cathedral Point, St. Peter's Dome, and Bonneville, where the largest fish hatchery in the world is maintained.

On to the east come Mitchell's Point and the tunnel through the mountain, where great windows have been cut to give views of river and mountain, and the sunken forests. Giant trees are seen underneath the water, submerged when some convulsion of nature disturbed the country.

At Tanner's creek will be found the Petrified Forest, where 300 foot pine trees have been turned to stone. And then come the abutments of the Bridge of the Gods. The story is that the bridge of stone which once served the Indians in crossing the swirling waters of the Columbia river sank with the coming of the first white man. The Indians swear this is true.

SUN "Light Six" $1095 F.O.B. Elkhart Ind.

The 100% Car

You know by comparison whether one motor car is decidedly better than another. You can see and appreciate the meaning and value of important improvements and refinements.

The Sun Motor Car fulfills present day demands for power, accessibility, speed, flexibility, strength, economy, comfort and beauty.

An inspection, a ride in the Sun means more to you as a prospective investor in a motor car than all claims or boosts of its unusual value and performance.

Dealers

I was particularly attracted and impressed with the Sun Light Six at the Chicago Automobile Show.

The car is carefully designed throughout, symmetrical, a harmonious unit from start to finish. The motor is an exclusive Sun design. I again examined the car at the factory and gave it every test that my experience dictated. The men behind the Sun Motor Company know the motor car business. They are perfectly prepared to do big things.

The opportunity is a big one and it will well be worth your while to come to Chicago and get full details. If you cannot arrange to do so, write for particulars.

MOTOR CAR SALES CO.
Chas. H. Eichinger, Vice Pres. & Gen. Mgr.

But You Cannot Escape the Conclusive Evidence of the Following Points:

1. The Sun has one horsepower for every 52 pounds of weight.
2. The valve operating mechanism of the motor is positively 20% quicker than the conventional push rod design.
3. The Sun Light Six motor develops 50 horsepower.
4. The compression is higher than that used in the average motor.
5. Light weight has been obtained by simplifying the design and by using the highest grade of material.

These are a few of the points that make the Sun powerful, speedy, flexible, remarkable on the "get away," and a hill climber.

Also consider that it has a wheelbase of 116 inches, which is longer than most cars selling about its price. The body is even larger than you would estimate, as the Sun Motor is very compact in design, and has been installed so as to take up very little length.

The long, graceful body with high sides, blends with the hood in one unbroken, graceful line, as though it were moulded.

See the "SUN." Ride in it. Judge for yourself.

FARMERS TAKING LEAD IN GOOD ROADS CAMPAIGN

Recover from Former Antagonism to City Motor Car Owners.

BY H. G. ROOT.
[General Manager Westcott Motor Car Company.]

Unquestionably the greatest single factor in the building of a system of highways in the United States has been the automobile industry. No one denies this, but every one does not realize that the harmonious basis that means real progress in road building is only just now being attained.

It has not yet been fully reached because of the absence of a sufficient breadth of vision on the part of the good roads boosters in some of our cities and the farmers of the country.

In the early days of the automobile industry motor car ownership was confined largely to the cities. A man bought a motor car and began to notice the rough and muddy spots in the road. He called in his automobile owning friends and they decided to petition for road improvements in a certain suburban township.

Farmers' Side Not Heard.

The automobile owners were there in force, but the man who was most vitally interested wasn't there—or if he was there were so many men more anxious to speak than he that he didn't have an opportunity to state his side of the case. He returned to his home not converted to the good roads idea but rather antagonistic to it because he felt that he had not been given the amount of consideration he deserved.

I refer to the farmer, the man who pays the bulk of the taxes that go to improve the roads that adjoin his lands. Instead of realizing that even if he did not own an automobile, improved highways would benefit him through making more accessible the market for his crops, he felt he was being forced to pay for the improvement of automobile parkways that would benefit only the motorists.

The city men were shortsighted and so were the farmers. The city men didn't mean that the farmers shouldn't be considered. They, in their enthusiasm, simply didn't think how it looked to the farmers. But just the same the farmers felt the city men were attempting to railroad the thing through; that they were working to get good roads for their own use and have the farmers foot the bill. That was before the farmers became automobile owners.

Hard Time in Arkansas.

A case that well illustrates this situation—although somewhat exaggerating it—occurred in Arkansas a few years ago. When the late United States Senator Jeff Davis was making a race for renomination a great hue and cry came from the good roads advocates in Little Rock that Senator Davis had not been sufficiently active in his efforts to obtain federal aid for road building in Arkansas. Senator Davis made a boomerang out of this. He knew his constituents.

"Why should we want good roads out here?" he shouted to an audience of farmers back in the hills. "I'll tell you why. So the city fellers can come tearin' by our farms in their automobiles and scarce our mules to death."

That Jeff Davis had caught the point was proved by the fact that he was a member of the United States senate at the time of his death.

Farmers Big Auto Buyers.

Fortunately this situation has been changed. The farmer is the automobile buyer. In the state of Nebraska, for instance, there is a population of 1,192,214 of which 618,370 is rural. These 618,370 persons occupy 133,866 farms. An estimate on good authority places the number of farmer automobile owners at one-third of the total. This means that something like 45,000 automobiles are owned by the farmers of Nebraska alone.

The 1915 census showed 46,000 automobiles owned by Minnesota farmers. With bumper crops in practically all the middle western states, the farmer is expected to be an even greater automobile buyer than in previous years.

The farmer, having become an automobile owner, feels that it is to his interest as well as to the interest of the city folk to have the roads improved. With the passing of the farmer's antagonistic attitude also has come the realization that, even if he does not own an automobile, the improvement of highways is putting him closer to a market for his products.

Increases Land Values.

He also has noticed that the value of farm lands on improved highways has increased so much more rapidly than that of farms on unimproved roads that good roads are a good investment because of that fact alone. There are so many arguments in favor of good roads that the farmer now is assuming the leadership in highway improvement movements.

Rapidly as road improvements are being made, I firmly believe that they would be even more rapid if the members of motor clubs in cities, commercial organizations, good roads associations, and similar organizations would take more cognizance of the farmer. The farmer should be included in their movements.

They should make a special effort to have farmers attend good roads meetings, and, after they have obtained the attendance of the farmer, they should see to it that his views are given consideration.

Farmers are willing coöperators. They are organizing good roads associations themselves. They bear the bulk of the expense of road improvements and it is only fair that they should be consulted.

AIDS SHERIDAN ROAD WORK.

U. S. Government Gives $20,000 to Resurface Route Through Fort on North Shore.

In its campaign to make the Sheridan road a motor boulevard from Chicago to Milwaukee the Sheridan Road Improvement association has enlisted the aid of the United States government. In asking for appropriations for the repair and construction of highways in military reservations the quartermaster general of the United States army has included an item of $20,000 for resurfacing Sheridan road through Fort Sheridan.

SOCIETY BOOSTS GRANT HIGHWAY ACROSS ILLINOIS

Good Roads Association of Rockford Improving East to West Route.

BY C. F. WOODS.
[President King Motor Company.]

Another motor road, which takes the tourist over historic ground and to the home of Gen. U. S. Grant, was added to the Illinois arteries of travel through the formation of the Grant Highway Improvement association, which aims to permanently improve the thoroughfare joining Chicago and Dubuque and passing through Elgin, Hampshire, Marengo, Belvidere, Rockford, Freeport, Pearl City, Kent, Stockton, Woodbine, Elizabeth, Galena, and Menominee.

The Grant highway follows the course of accepted state aid roads in all the counties except in the vicinity of Hampshire, where the state aid road probably will be changed to conform with the route selected for the thoroughfare that bears the name of the famous civil war general.

The Grant highway organization is believed to be unique among Illinois road associations in that .. keeps up an every day in the year activity in the way of publicity and agitation, and maintains at Rockford an office and salaried secretary who keeps closely in touch with the people of the communities along the route.

$7,000 Raised in Last Year.

The expense funds raised during the year ending March 20, 1916, totaled more than $7,000. The road has been blazed with pole markings and sign boards, and the work of installing concrete marker posts, nine feet high, already has been started.

President George D. Roper stated in his report at the annual meeting held March 20 that more work had been done on the road during the last year than for fifteen years previous, and that in spite of the most unfavorable weather conditions.

Temporary improvement and repair all along the line will be the order for the coming season, and an earnest effort will be made to carry the bond issues in Kane, Boone, Winnebago, and Stephenson counties. If these bond issues are voted, they will build the Grant highway within the next few years for more than half its length of concrete and brick. The election in Kane county takes place April 4, and those in the other counties named will likely be held in the fall.

Roads to Be Improved.

The Grant highway comes out of Chicago by the Lake street road and crosses Dupage county, where scarifying, rolling, and surfacing will be done this spring. This will keep an old macadam road in fair condition the rest of the season.

In Kane county the road is kept in good condition largely by the efforts of the Elgin Motor club and the Kane County Good Roads club. Across McHenry county the road is mostly an old macadam highway and will need some surfacing. West of Marengo the road was graded last year, but the constant rains put it into bad condition.

Boone county is well cared for by County Superintendent of Highways Humphrey, who proposes to oil those parts that he did not oil last year.

More Road Work Planned.

East of Rockford, in Winnebago county, a good deal of temporary work was done last fall, and this will be continued this year. West of Rockford a mile and a half of eighteen foot concrete and a mile of macadam was laid, and the rest of the way to the county line will be graded this year.

In Stephenson county, scarifying and rolling the stone road will be done this year to a point five miles west of Freeport, from which point the highway is an earth road all the way to Dubuque, except a half mile of concrete road near Elizabeth and a mile north of Galena. All of this earth road has been graded and dragged, and this will be continued this season.

Prepartions are being made for the reduction of some of the grades on several of the hills between Elizabeth and Galena and for widening the road between Galena and East Dubuque.

The Grant highway follows closely the line of the old Galena trail, which was the route of travel between Fort Dearborn and the Galena mining settlements in the early days.

KENTUCKY CONVICTS CAN WORK OUTSIDE PRISONS.

Amendment Carried at Recent Election After Former Result Was Declared Unconstitutional.

The voters of Kentucky in the recent election carried by a large majority the constitutional amendment permitting state prisoners to work outside the prison walls.

Since 1891 Kentucky statutes have forbidden the taking of prisoners outside the prison walls.

Two years ago an amendment to remove this ban was carried by a large majority, but declared unconstitutional, as the secretary of state failed to advertise it for a sufficient period of time.

[Vice President Motor Car Sales Company.]

Good roads will unite the nation by introducing America to men who drive motor cars.

When the man from San Francisco packs his family into his proudest possession—his automobile—for a cross country junket to Bretton Woods or Atlantic City he will pass through a broad belt of the United States before he checks in at his destination. It is the same country that he has watched slide past the observation platform of the Cannon Ball Limited; but there's a big difference when he drives through it in a touring car.

The tank town in Nebraska which never even caused the limited to hesitate may be his night control, and if it is he will ask the hotelkeeper about the country, convey his family on a sightseeing tour after supper and perhaps get acquainted with a few of the boys who sit in front of the postoffice.

Broadens His Citizenship.

He will sleep and eat and ask road directions in Iowa, Illinois, Ohio, and half a dozen other states, and all the time he will be unconsciously absorbing local color and becoming a citizen of the United States instead of remaining a "native son." You can't be provincial when you have found out just how fast the man in Kansas drives and just how carefully the man behind the steering wheels observe rules of the road in New York state.

Before he has made the round trip, your San Francisco tourist will be using his well earned "boosting" reputation for his country as well as for the city where he lives. And this applies just as well to the New Yorker who drives west or the citizen of Peoria who drives either way.

Cements Friendship in U. S.

Good roads will do more to make this country prepared than merely facilitating the transportation of troops and munitions across country in time of war.

Their biggest service will be that of making the United States a [illegible] commonwealth of brothers, neighbors, friends who first met over picnic lunches by the roadside or at cross roads where one knew the right turning and the other didn't; whose friendships were cemented over blowouts, and who will finally have come to scorn state lines and boost "America first."

OHIO TO GIVE ROAD FUNDS.

Approximately $2,600,000 will be distributed by the state of Ohio to the various counties this year for good road purposes, State Highway Commissioner Clinton Cowen has announced. Half of the money will be available in March and the remainder some time in August. This money will be for main market roads, for intercounty roads, and for maintenance of these roads.

The Best Liked Car in the Country

Best liked because it's the most complete—because it embodies in the fullest degree every essential of motor-car satisfaction. Every point is a "talking point"—no factor of your motoring enjoyment has been slighted.

Pride of possession is assured by the wonderfully distinctive Briscoe-line body—a beautiful creation that is the despair of lesser cars.

The 114-inch wheelbase provides ample room—body room and leg room, too. With the full cantilever rear spring suspension it makes bad roads smooth and good roads smoother.

And you don't have to spend a dollar for extras. For every accessory that your satisfaction demands or your fancy desires is on the car.

Read this list and see if everything you want isn't included:

Electric starting and lighting system; two headlights with dimmer, for city driving; electric tail and license lamp; instrument-board lamp; special utility extension lamp and cord; storage battery; one-man top and dust cover; side curtains; ventilating windshield; electric horn; robe rail; foot rest; tire carrier in rear; extra demountable rim; speedometer; gasoline gauge; license plate brackets for front and rear; full set of tools; tire repair kit, jack, pump.

You can get prompt delivery on the Briscoe "38" if you act now—and we're at your service for a complete demonstration at any time.

The Standard of Value and Quality

You Must Place Your Order Now If You Want "Immediate Delivery"

Once again, we must urge you to act quickly in placing your order for a Paige Fairfield seven passenger "Six-46."

Don't delay. Don't put the matter off one day longer than is absolutely necessary if you would avoid disappointment later on.

Already the factory is flooded with orders for this wonderfully popular model.

Despite the fact that our manufacturing facilities have been tripled, we are facing an immediate shortage of Fairfields, and the spring retail season is only a few weeks off.

Just stop for a minute and consider the significance of the statement when we tell you that, so far in 1916, we have marketed more seven passenger cars than any other manufacturer in our price class.

Also, ponder over the fact that this month we shall ship approximately 25 solid train loads of the Fairfield model exclusively.

Last year, you will remember, there was a long Paige "waiting list."

Hundreds of people delayed their purchases until the last minute—and were then compelled to accept sixty and ninety days delivery—or compromise on a "second best."

So, be fair to yourself. Protect your own good interests. Go to the Paige dealer—place a cash deposit in his hands—and make sure that you will receive the car of your choice.

It is by no means our purpose to "stampede" motor car buyers into early or ill-advised purchases, but we know that a shortage is coming and offer this information in a sincerely helpful spirit.

And now let us say a word about the car itself.

First and foremost, we want to remind you that the Paige Fairfield "Six-46" is a tried and proven success.

When you buy a Paige "Six-46" today, you are buying a car that has passed the experimental stage. You are buying a car of known quality—known ability.

In a word, the "Six-46" is an eminently safe automobile investment.

It is a good car—not merely because we say so—but because its owners have conclusively established this goodness in the gruelling tests of more than a year's actual road work.

Here, then, is one substantial reason for the overwhelming demand which the "Six-46" enjoys. And there is another—a basic reason which has made this record possible.

Time and time again, we have stated our policy of scrupulously avoiding any expression in Paige advertising which might savor of exaggeration or misrepresentation. We make an honest product and we propose to sell it in an honest way.

But, facts are facts, and we boldly and fearlessly claim that the Paige Fairfield "Six-46" represents more actual dollar-for-dollar value than any other motor car on the market.

If this appears to be a broad statement we invite you to check us up by inspecting the car, riding in it, and conducting any comparative investigation which you may care to make.

Understand, we do not claim to make the only good motor car, nor do we ask you to believe that our Fairfield is the best American make.

But we do most emphatically insist that the "Six-46" offers a greater value for its price—$1295—than any other automobile produced in this country or abroad.

Furthermore, you will heartily agree with us if you will permit the Paige Dealer to give you one thorough demonstration—just one.

But, please don't forget—you must act quickly. Get your order in now—before it is too late.

GOOD HIGHWAYS EXTEND TRADE, IMPROVE HEALTH

Act as Spur to Business Besides Giving Pleasure to Motorists.

BY L. J. OLLIER.
[Vice President and Director of Sales the Studebaker Corporation.]

To some people good roads mean simply an advantage for the motorist, a convenience that was created and is maintained for the motorist's benefit, enabling him to get from place to place without racking his car to pieces or experiencing the necessity of being towed out of hub-deep mud.

I am forced to admit that good roads do add much to the pleasures of touring, and that the better the roads the more fun in driving a car. I have just returned from California, where any one can readily note the condition I mention. Californians enjoy life; there are more automobiles per capita than in any other state, and the people who own cars use them more than the people in any other state.

And what of the roads in California? Only one opinion can be expressed. These roads are excellent. They seem to lead everywhere. They enable one to visit all of the most beautiful spots in the state. And they are kept up well.

Roads Aid to Health, Pleasure.

Yet there is another side to this subject of the value of good roads. Good roads mean more than an opportunity to get out on tours from the health giving and pleasure standpoints.

Good roads are closely allied with progress and prosperity. They promote the more widespread use of automobiles, and statistics prove automobiles and prosperity always go together.

It is fair to say that good roads benefit everybody: the city dwellers, those who live in towns, and those who live on farms. Of course, the fast growing use of motor cars—the fact that automobiles are now considered practically a necessity for everybody—has been the biggest single influence in awakening this country to the fact that money expended in good roads extensions and improvements is money well spent.

Big Future for Automobile.

Not long ago A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker corporation, made the prediction that the day is coming when more people will use automobiles than will use railroads and trolley cars. In making this prophecy he had in mind, among other things, the better road conditions which are being more and more realized each year.

We can all remember how only a few years ago city people paid little attention to good roads, and how farmers were even opposed to the expenditure of funds for the betterment of highways. That, of course, was before automobiles came into such widespread usage, in the days when motor cars were considered an extravagance and were owned only by the rich.

Good roads and the automobile have taken people out into the country. They have banished forever the isolation of farm life. They have increased health and prolonged life. They have enabled people to dig in and put better efforts into their work as a result of the relaxation and broadening-out experiences of the week end trip into the country.

Quickens Worker's Ambition.

The prospect of being able to buy an automobile and receive the benefits of good roads has spurred the ambition and quickened the imagination of the man who walks or uses street cars. He wants to be independent.

He wants to get away from the limited vision that of necessity must be his just as long as he is bound to a life of pounding pavements and clinging to street car straps. He works harder and achieves more, with the prospect of spinning over good roads in his own automobile. For traveling only around town he may feel that he cannot afford an automobile; that he cannot get his money's worth. There is where good roads come in, enabling just such a man to get out into the country and broaden out.

Good roads have been a stimulator of business. By means of good roads an outlet to the congestion of cities has been afforded. New towns have sprung up.

Rival Routes to New Orleans Bid for Favor.

Jefferson Road Links Canada to Mardi Gras City

BY FREDERICK J. WRIGHT
[President Jefferson Highway Association.]

In New Orleans on Nov. 15 and 16 of last fall, after six months of systematic agitation, more than 400 good roads enthusiasts from eleven states west of the Mississippi river, met and organized the Jefferson Highway association. Now a ribbon of concrete and rock and gravel is rapidly unrolling between Winnipeg, Canada, and New Orleans, La., which latter city aspires to be known as the winter capital of America.

In less than six months of its official existence, the Jefferson highway has become second in importance among America's great new national highways. The Lincoln highway is naturally and rightfully given first place, connecting as it does, New York and San Francisco, and spanning the entire continent from east to west. The Jefferson highway, on the other hand, traverses the great agricultural center, and connects the Dominion of Canada at Winnipeg with the Gulf of Mexico at New Orleans. It crosses the rich agricultural states of Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, and Louisiana with a possible branch through the Ozark mountains in Arkansas.

It crosses eight zones of climate and at every season of the year has a climate at some point along its route which is an attraction to tourists.

Penetrates Historic Territory.

Thomas Jefferson is justly entitled to the honor which the Jefferson highway is expected to confer upon his name. The great north and south highway traverses the Louisiana purchase territory with the exception of a short dip into Texas, made to provide a level route around the mountains of Arkansas. This diversion makes the Jefferson highway a farm land, level country route from beginning to end. A branch, which Arkansas is energetically building, will provide an opportunity for tourists, who so desire, to enjoy the delightful Ozark scenery, fishing, and health resorts in western Arkansas.

Stretching from pine to palm, from snow to semi-tropic, the Jefferson highway has a 4,000 mile frontage on rich agricultural land. Most of its frontage is in improved farms and will average in value close to $50 an acre. One might figure it out by the front foot for the whole 4,000 miles extent and discover considerable value in real estate frontage on the great vacation route.

When the plans were first conceived for a new north and south highway to connect the eight or ten great American cities on and immediately west of the Mississippi river, it was expected that the movement would find disorganized roads to begin with along the entire line of the proposed route. The trend of travel and of American highways has been westward from the beginning of our history. Such north and south travelers as there were in the early days used the waterways. Tourists will be agreeably surprised to learn, however, that much north and south highway organization was found to be already accomplished. This previous work consisted of considerable stretches of organized road, as, for instance, the well known Interstate trail from St. Paul to Kansas City, via Des Moines and St. Joseph.

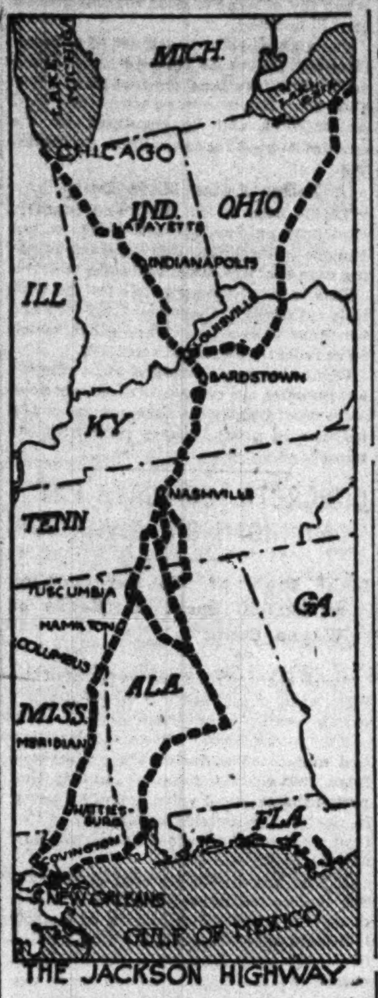
The greater project was immediately tendered the united services of these smaller organizations and has harmoniously merged them into the one great national highway.

Southern States Raising Money.

The actual work of graveling, rocking, macadamizing, or surfacing with concrete is now being arranged for with surprising energy. Single counties in Texas and Louisiana have voted $300,000 and $400,000 bond issues. Counties and road districts in which it would not have been supposed that 10 per cent of the voters would approve of bond issues for building roads have won their bond issues easily because of enthusiasm for the Jefferson highway.

Louisiana has a road law providing for parish bond issues. Texas laws are all that could be asked and its nine counties on the Jefferson highway are in the front rank in improvement financing. Oklahoma amended its road law this winter for the very purpose of enabling it to hold the main line of the Jefferson highway and of the nine counties traversed in that state, eight already have signified their ability and intention of passing bond issues for the improvement of the Jefferson highway along with other roads in the same counties. The Jefferson highway gave them the necessary sort of enthusiasm.

Highways must be built on the ground as well as on paper before they are satisfactory for purposes of traffic. The Jefferson highway was a dream in men's minds for a few months, then it became a highway on paper for a matter of a few weeks. Rapidly now the ribbon of gravel and rock and concrete is unrolling through Winnipeg, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Des Moines, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Joplin, Muskogee, Denison, Shreveport, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans, traversing the agricultural heart of America, the most broadly developed agricultural country in the world. In less than three years' time the great highway not merely ought to be but will be transferred from men's mind and from paper to the ground, a 2,000 mile, hard surfaced, 365 day road from Winnipeg to New Orleans. The spirit of the west is in it.



THE JACKSON HIGHWAY

Select Chicago as Terminus of Jackson Highway

BY P. L. ATHERTON.
[President Jackson Highway Association.]

The idea of a great north and south highway, as a memorial to the character and achievement of Andrew Jackson was first conceived about 1910 by the Daughters of 1812, an organization of patriotic representative southern women.

As first outlined, the scheme was to perfect a highway leading from Chicago to New Orleans. More or less missionary work was done along the proposed line of the road by the Jackson highway committee of the Daughters of 1812, of which committee Miss Alma Rittenberry of Birmingham, Ala., was chairman, but no definite form was given to the organization until in July, 1915, at a meeting in Birmingham, Ala.

At this meeting a temporary organization was formed, consisting of men interested in good roads from Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana. It was further determined at this meeting that the Jackson highway should run from Chicago on the northwest to Louisville, Ky., and from Niagara Falls on the northeast to the same point, the two divisions here joining and continuing southward through Nashville to New Orleans.

Road Born in Sunny South.

A few weeks later the Jackson Highway association convention, for the purpose of forming a permanent organization and of formally launching the whole movement, was held in Nashville, Tenn. The permanent organization was effected at this convention, and the permanent location of the highway made from Chicago to Louisville, Ky., and from Maysville, Ky., to Louisville, and thence to Nashville, Tenn.

Strong competition developed between the different routes from Nashville south to New Orleans, and a pathfinding committee from the board of directors, accompanied by a goovernment highway engineer, inspected all the competing routes, and as considerable stretches of the road on both routes were unimproved, both routes were given until October, 1916, to improve their roads and bridges. At that time the pathfinding committee will again go over the competing routes and will make the permanent selection.

In the rapid development of the good roads movement in the last five years various local road organizations have been formed in the states through which the Jackson highway runs, and a great deal of valuable work done in improving roads controlled by these organizations. The Jackson highway, when completed, will be largely the welding together of road systems developed by these smaller associations, making a continuous north and south highway between Chicago on the northwest, Buffalo on the northeast, and New Orleans on the south.

Present Condition of Roads.

At the present time about nine-tenths of the road in Indiana and Kentucky is in very good condition; in Tennessee about three-fourths of the mileage is in good condition; in Alabama and Mississippi more than one-half of the total distance is now in good order, and both states are rapidly building the unimproved sections of their road and improving the conditions of such portions of the road as are partially constructed. A great deal of interest has been manifested along the entire line of the road and all indications point to a great year of road building during 1916.

Automobiles can now traverse the entire distance between the northern termini of the road and New Orleans, but as active work is in progress at many points along the line—and this is especially true south of Nashville—part of the route during the coming summer will doubtless be uncomfortable for tourists. By the 1st of December, 1916, it is confidently believed that the entire trip from either Chicago or Buffalo to New Orleans can be comfortably and safely made.

CHICAGO CLUB URGES TOURS OVER THE DIXIE HIGHWAY.

Society Interests Motorists of the North in Trips Through South Instead of Europe.

BY JOSEPH T. LIEMERT.
[Vice President Saxon Automobile Company.]

"Tour in Florida instead of Europe," is the slogan of the Dixie highway committee of the Southern club of Chicago, which has formulated plans for interesting local motorists in the wonderful road that pierces the heart of the sunny, hospitable south.

A series of social gatherings, chiefly for Dixie highway educational and inspirational purposes, has been scheduled, and several automobile parties are being arranged to make a trip over the road to Florida this year.

The largest party is headed by W. B. Towler. The terminus of his tour will be Sarasota, Fla., where most of the members have winter homes. In this entourage will be several Chicago residents who heretofore have motored through southern Europe during the winter.

The committee believes that when the beauty of the country through which the highway passes, the excellence of the road, and the charms of the southland become better known, an ever increasing number of automobile tourists will be drawn to Dixie and the land where Ponce de Leon sought the fountain of eternal youth.

Inquiries from the south regarding summer tours in the north are being received daily, and the committee is working to bring the motorists of Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, and Florida to Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan during the hot weather. It is gathering road data and has volunteered to serve as a clearing house of information, assisting motorists planning a tour over the Dixie highway.

The Southern club has a strong interest in the Dixie highway. It sees in this road a reincarnation of the old southern travel artery of romance and fiction, the Mississippi river in the halcyon days of long ago.

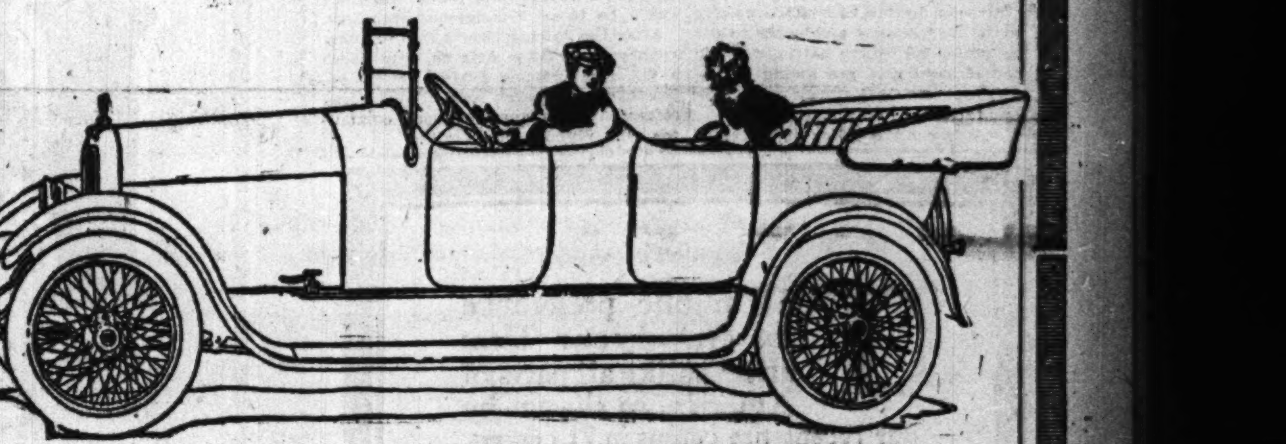
MARMON 34
NOW $2950
Because of Advanced Cost of Materials and Labor



The price of the new Marmon 34 is now $2950 for all open body types with the exception of the five-passenger model, which is now priced at $2900.

This increase in price is necessary because of the advance in the cost of the material and labor entering into this car's construction.

Aluminum, alloy steel, brass, and copper—all have become tremendously more expensive. There is not a single item on the car that has not undergone an advance in price.

To meet these conditions we had to either change the material and inspection specifications, or advance the price and continue the new 34 on its original high-grade, quality basis.

We chose the latter alternative because we believed that most people want this remarkable motor car at its best.

* * * * * *

This is the lightest car, remember, of 136-inch wheelbase, 74 (brake test) horsepower, and seven-passenger capacity, by 1100 pounds.

It is therefore easiest to handle and most economical in gasoline and tires of any car of comparable size.

It is the easiest to maintain, practically taking care of itself—there are only four grease cups on the entire car, all on the steering connections.

It holds the road better—even though weighing but 3540 pounds, fully equipped—than the heaviest car now running.

These advantages cannot be had at any price in any other car.

So, while now advanced in first cost—as all full-value cars must be—the Marmon remains the most desirable automobile from every standpoint that 1916 offers.

Two Hundred in Chicago

We have already sold two hundred of these remarkable cars in Chicago and are now delivering ten per week to those who have placed orders. If you are attracted by this new light-weight 34 you can get one by ordering now.

EFFICIENCY TEST IS BEING APPLIED TO LINCOLN ROAD

Reduction of Curves and Mileage Aim of Builders of Memorial Highway.

BY HENRY B. JOY.

[President Lincoln Highway Association.]

Ever since the route of the Lincoln highway was first proclaimed to the people of the United States by the Lincoln Highway association in September, 1913, and the work of promoting and procuring the establishment of a continuous improved highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, thereby started, it has been one of the chief aims and ideals of the association continually to shorten the distance between the two coasts, and by securing a more efficient route across each state and county eventually arrive at the final shortest and best road between New York and San Francisco.

Route Efficiency Defined.

The term "efficiency route," as applied to the Lincoln highway across a given state or county, has been defined as follows:

"If a straight line is drawn across a map of the United States from New York to San Francisco, a road following that line would be 100 per cent efficient, as it would be the shortest possible distance between the two given points. Such a road will of course be impossible, due to the topographical formation of the country, and impracticable due to the arrangement of our population.

"If, however, a road can be laid out with these two considerations in mind, which exceeds by about 50 per cent the theoretical mileage of the 100 per cent efficiency route, that road could be considered as 50 per cent efficient. The same rule would apply in states and counties. If, for example, in the state of Iowa it is desirable for the transcontinental road to enter the state at Clinton, on the Mississippi, and to leave the state at Council Bluffs, on the Missouri, the route of 100 per cent efficiency would be a straight line connecting these two points. We can determine then the efficiency of the road across the state of Iowa by comparing the present Lincoln highway mileage between these two points with the theoretical mileage of a 100 per cent efficient road."

Radical Changes Shunned.

It has been the constant aim of the Lincoln Highway association, then, to procure a road across each state through which the Lincoln highway runs as near 100 per cent efficient as is humanly possible and practical, and the efforts of the association toward this end have been ably seconded by the communities along the route in each state and by the people of the state, led by the patriotic public spirited citizens who are acting in the capacity of Lincoln highway consuls or representatives.

While it is not the policy of the association to make any radical changes in route from the Lincoln highway as proclaimed in September, 1913, inasmuch as that original proclamation outlined for the consideration of the people of the United States a transcontinental road which was as near 100 per cent efficient as was shown to be possible after months of investigation and analysis of road conditions, yet it has been possible in many instances to shorten or to make more efficient the road across many counties and states by slight changes in the way of the elimination of curves or by the building of bridges which would make the route more direct.

The route of 100 per cent efficiency between New York and San Francisco would be about 2,800 miles, and toward this ideal road the association's efforts have been constantly directed, with the result that the original mileage of 3,484 miles has been cut down to very nearly 3,300 miles with the aid of the people and the highway departments of the states traversed and of the local authorities in each county, township, and municipality.

It will thus be seen that the broad general principle of seeking to shorten the Lincoln highway mileage is one that has been handled very intelligently and capably by the local consuls and state consuls of the Lincoln Highway association and by the state and county officials of the sections which the Lincoln highway traverses. Examples of what has been accomplished in this line can be given without number, although the majority of instances of extensive shortening and a corresponding increase in efficiency lie mostly west of the Mississippi river, as the trans-state roads in the east were very largely as near 100 per cent efficient as was possible to build them at the time the Lincoln highway was routed.

INDIANS BLOCK ROAD AID IN OREGON RESERVATION.

Redskins Seek to Keep Highway from Court's Control—Case Taken to Washington, D. C.

Because the Indians of the Umatilla reservation in Oregon seek to block a move to place the Mission-McKay road under the jurisdiction of the County court, the matter will be taken up with the bureau of Indian affairs.

The road, about twenty miles in length, has been in use for many years, but has never been turned over to the county, which refuses to spend money on roads not in its jurisdiction. The consent of all the Indians along the road has been obtained for the transfer, but the tribe as a whole refused to sanction it.

The objections of the Indians are that they are able to take care of their own roads, and that the county has not spent much on reservation roads already under its jurisdiction.

BARS U. S. FUNDS FOR ROAD.

Government Refuses to Give Cash to Repair Roosevelt Dam Highway Called Apache Trail.

No federal appropriation is to be made for the repair of the Roosevelt dam highway, now known as the Apache trail. The house committee on appropriations takes the view that for the government to aid in maintaining this highway would be to set a dangerous precedent.

After the January floods Carl Hayden, congressman from Arizona, introduced a bill appropriating $20,000 for the repair of the Roosevelt road. The bill was referred to the appropriations committee who reported against it.

TOURING MAKES MOTOR CAR PAY JOY DIVIDENDS

Spread of Good Roads Robs Long Trip of Former Terrors.

BY A. M. ROBBINS.

[President Centaur Motor Company, Jeffery Distributor.]

Time was, and not so many years ago, either, when the word touring brought to mind a vision of mud holes, sand, tow ropes, and general inconvenience and discomfort.

We are not entirely out of the mud yet, but we are getting there, and the man with a car in Chicago today has countless weekend trips, little tours of a week or so, and more extended journeys over as long a period as he may wish, where roads will not worry him, where hotels are all that could be desired, and where the real blessing of owning an automobile will be appreciated.

I make it a point to urge upon every new owner of a car the pleasure to be derived from real touring. The Sunday afternoon drive, with the family over the boulevards is fine, but the man who confines his use of his car to the city alone is missing over half the fun which might be his. The real pleasure is to tour, and no man can fail to be better physically and mentally if he will get out and see how the rest of the world lives.

Charms of Middle West.

The question of where to go is easily answered. For weekend trips there are the resorts of Indiana and Michigan, the lake regions of Wisconsin is right at our door—Geneva, Oconomowoc, etc. The historic Starved Rock region, visited every year by thousands, is only one afternoon's drive away, yet to tens of thousands of Chicago motorists it's only a name.

For the man who can get away for a week there is no finer trip about Chicago than to drive from here to Indianapolis, over Indiana's fine stone roads, then to Louisville, Ky., and from Louisville to Frankfort, Lexington, and Cincinnati, thence back to Indianapolis and home.

Here is a thousand mile trip, easily driven in four or five days, over stone roads all the way, and which will take the average Chicagoan to what might well be another country. It is a particularly beautiful drive in the spring, and one which personally I always plan to make as early in April as possible.

The average man, with the sound of the Chicago traffic policeman's whistle in his ears, does not realize that less than two days' drive from here, through one of the most beautiful and fertile farming countries in the world, is the land of ox carts and blue grass—the country which bred Maud S.—the most wonderful stock region of which America can boast, and one of the most picturesque as well. The charm of the blue grass country, the hills of Kentucky, and the breath of spring in the air will draw you back year after year, and each trip will leave you better off in every way.

Eastern Tour de Luxe.

Then there is the east. I have just finished mapping out a trip for one of our Jeffery owners, which I have driven some eight times now and which I hope to again drive myself this summer. This trip, which embraces about 3,000 miles of driving, will give you and your family practically every sort of scenery which the eastern states can offer, yet there is scarcely a mile of roadway which will not compare with Michigan avenue in its perfection. This trip, which will consume four or five weeks, embraces the Berkshire region, Lake George, the mountains of Vermont and New Hampshire, the wonderful White mountain region, Bretton Woods, the long smooth drive down the coast from Portland to Boston, through Gloucester, with its picturesque shipping, then on to Plymouth, out Cape Cod to Provincetown, which doesn't seem to be a part of the United States at all; then to Newport, back to Springfield, and down the smiling Connecticut valley to Hartford and New Haven. From the town of Yale and Taft, the course leads to New York, thence to Atlantic City and Philadelphia, then home by way of Gettysburg, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Toledo.

A Tour Without Fatigue.

The possibilities of this route need not be described. It is a trip which can be driven by the average man driving his own car, and can be made without fatigue and with new enjoyment for every foot of the way.

These are only the barest suggestions of the thousand journeys, big and little, open to the man with a car who will get out and tour. The big idea is to get out and do it.

If you want to see an automobile pay real dividends in enjoyment, not only for yourself but for the entire family as well, make up your mind to tour this summer early and often.

AUTO PROGRESS OUTSTRIPS WORK ON GOOD ROADS

Expert Asserts Increase in Motor Cars Will Call for Better Highways.

BY W. G. PANCOAST.

[Manager Owen Magnetic Motor Car Company.]

When one motors into the country the overcrowded condition of the improved roads is a noticeable contrast to the few motor cars to be seen where the good roads cause has not perpeated.

This must lead to the conclusion that there are far too many automobiles today for the improved roads and far too few improved roads for the thousands of automobiles.

While the good roads cause has in the last few years been espoused by country and city dwellers alike, and notwithstanding the fact that the country property owners have responded generously in cooperation with their township or county to pay for good roads, yet the increase in the use of automobiles has far outstripped the progress of good roads building.

Good Road Building Lags.

It is doubtful whether the enthusiasm and the earnest efforts of the good roads advocates and property owners would have resulted in much greater improved roads. They are not at fault; their methods of producing roads have not been commensurate with the producing methods of automobile manufacturers.

The system—if there exists a system—of building good roads appears to be much on the piecemeal order, instead of a nation-wide movement. True, we have the Lincoln highway movement and the Dixie highway movement, which are all right in their way. Great credit is due them because they are the pioneers forming the first main arteries across the continent.

From these there ought to branch numerous other national highways, from which would extend state roads and country roads and eventually township roads, interlacing the entire counry with smooth, level roads on which all kinds of vehicles can make better time and safer progress.

Big Increase in Automobiles.

Only a nation-wide movement, supported by the individual states and by their constituent counties, can hope to produce good roads with sufficient dispatch to begin to keep up with the great yearly increase in the number of automobiles sold and used.

The use of automobiles will continue to increase faster than the growth of good roads, but it will increase much faster when the mileage of good roads is greater than it is today.

The highest point in the use of automobiles may never be reached—it is safe to say that we are far from that point today—but the time is coming when the use of automobiles will be regulated by the amount of good roads available for motoring.

Better Autos Made Daily.

Traffic both in the cities and country, especially on Sundays and holidays, has become so thick that drivers are demanding cars that are easier and safer to drive.

This is largely responsible for the multiple cylinders in the present day cars and for those without clutch and gears, which have recently attracted attention.

While simpler driving and more efficient automobiles are certain to come, yet good roads must greatly increase in number and mileage in order to keep pace with the number of automobiles in use.

CONCRETE HIGHWAYS PAY MICHIGAN BIG DIVIDENDS.

Make Profit of 125 Per Cent on $2,000,000 Spent on Roads of Wayne County.

Money spent in road improvement of the right kind is making a profit of 125 per cent a year in Wayne county, Mich. The county spent $2,000,000 on construction and maintenance during the eight years from 1906 to 1914, inclusive, and in this period the assessed valuation of property in the county, outside of the city of Detroit, increased from $62,707,000 to $114,548,120, or 82.6 per cent.

Of this increase 35 per cent, or $22,000,000, is credited to road improvement, because the assessed valuation of Detroit increased only 47.7 per cent. The increase in county valuation above the rate of increase in the city was eleven times the cost of road work, or 1,000 per cent profit in eight years on the total investment in improved roads.

More than 125 miles of concrete road have been put down by the Wayne county commissioners since the county system was adopted in 1906, and the roads built with the $2,000,000 bond issue are still in good condition and give every promise of more than outliving the bonds. The commissioners state in their ninth annual report for last year that they never have had to take up and replace a single 25 foot section since they have been developing this type of road, although some of the roads have been down more than seven years.

Every mile of durable roads laid is cutting down the cost of upkeep. Last year the commissions had forty-five miles more roadway to care for than the year before, yet they spent $5,178 less for maintenance, notwithstanding they have supervision over 1,245 miles of other types of road, such as macadam and gravel, outside of incorporated cities and villages.

THE public preference for Goodyear Tires affects alike all parts of America, as shown by our recent tire census in 71 centers.

The grand average of Goodyears was 21 per cent—and this with close to 200 brands of tires on the market.

This Goodyear preference is built upon the bed-rock of public satisfaction—the individual experience of the average man, who has found that Goodyear Tires go farther, last longer, and so cost him less in the end.

More Praise for KING 8 From Enthusiastic OWNERS

Mr. B. F. Hochild, Treasurer and General Manager of the Gordon Tire and Rubber Co., whose photograph we reproduce, writes us:

"My King 8 performs better than any car I ever owned. It has made the trip to Cleveland and back three times and has GONE THROUGH each time. By GONE THROUGH, I mean each trip has been absolutely free from tire and engine trouble. Twice I STARTED the trip accompanied by other cars—the King always GOT there first. Do you wonder I'm a King 8 fanatic? Mrs. Hochild says the lines of the King 8 are incomparable, and she knows."

POWER — ECONOMY — BEAUTY

The remarkable performance and luxury of the King brings it purchasers both because of and in spite of its moderate price.

With the touch of a finger the King 8 changes from a creeping movement to locomotive speed. With rarely a change of gears, the King takes sudden hills without a throb. Because of its simplicity and ease of operation it is the ideal car for women drivers. Its high engine efficiency is proved by the extreme economy on fuel, oil and tires.

Let us demonstrate why KING owners are enthusiastic. We can now make immediate deliveries.

SCENIC ILLINOIS TRAVERSED BY NEW HIGHWAY

Chicago-Peoria Road Takes Automobiles to Starved Rock, Deer Park.

BY C. H. VAN DERVOORT.
[General Sales Manager Moline Automobile Company.]

The promoters of the Illinois Valley way, which will connect Chicago and Peoria with an improved, well defined, and established motor road via the course of the Illinois river, is receiving the support of local motorists. Not only will this new highway afford direct connection with the Starved Rock State park and Deer park in La Salle county, but to the automobilist who desires to travel a road continually unfolding new vistas of river and forest rather than at times the monotonous journey through interminable cornfields the proposed way will afford a strong appeal.

An unusual feature will be the method of marking the way. Instead of using paint and convenient telegraph poles a concrete marker has been adopted by the officials in charge. It stands eight feet above the ground and is a slender, reinforced shaft with a square target surmounting it at a height of six feet eight inches. On each side of the marker is cut the inscription I. V. Way, and it has also been suggested that the sides of these markers be used at each county and township line to give the tourist his bearing at various points along the way.

Highway Born in September.

The project was launched at a meeting held in La Salle, Ill., Sept. 16, 1915, which was attended by Gov. Dunne, members of the legislature and representatives from Chicago, Joliet, and Peoria and the intermediate cities and villages along the Illinois valley.

The project contemplates the establishment of a continuous good road from Chicago to Peoria via the valley. It is doubtful if the scenic and historical possibilities of the highway as proposed are equaled in the United States. The location of Starved Rock State park, practically midway on the route, the intersection with the Lincoln highway at Joliet, the paralleling of the course of the Illinois waterway, and the establishment of direct communication between Chicago, Joliet, and Peoria and some intermediate cities and villages are included among the many important features of the project.

The route has been definitely established with the exception of a short distance in Bureau county, where several communities are striving to have the way routed through their respective districts. The way, as thus far designated, runs out of Chicago south, in a southwesterly direction, and keeps on the south and eastern banks of the Desplaines river to Joliet. Good roads enthusiasts in Will and Cook counties have been coöperating in the matter of improving the way between Joliet and Chicago, and definite assurances have been made that by 1917 at the very latest this section of the way will be improved with a concrete pavement.

Crosses River at Ottawa.

Leaving Joliet, the route follows the northern slope of the valley to Morris, and keeps to the north of the river as it proceeds to Seneca and Marseilles. At Ottawa the Illinois river is crossed and the southern bank followed to Starved Rock State park. Here the way runs along the Canyon drive, the beautiful scenic road which skirts the heads of the canyons and which has made Starved Rock famous. This portion of the way, while recently constructed, is now being improved with macadam and by the time the tourist season is on will be in splendid condition.

A new road, also being improved, leads directly north from the way at a point a mile north of the Starved Rock hotel. Continuing toward the west, the way passes the entrance to Deer park and thence into La Salle, crossing the Illinois river to the north shore at this point. The board of supervisors of La Salle county, at a session held this month, approved a proposition to improve the road leading south from Utica to the Vermilion river with an 18 foot concrete highway. This highway will join one of similar type which was completed last year from La Salle to the Vermilion river bridge, a stretch of four and one-half miles.

The road from the Shippingsport bridge over the Illinois river, to La Salle, a distance of one mile, was improved by the Chicago Portland Cement company and the Marquette Cement company. This road was completed in 1913. The way takes the north bank of the river from La Salle, taking advantage of three miles of pavement through La Salle and Peru.

Route Not Definitely Decided.

Spring Valley is the first stop in Bureau county, and as yet it has not been determined whether the wayy will be routed through Princeton or continue along the river to Depue and thence into Bureau. If the way is swung through Princeton it will run south to Tiskilwa and thence via Putnam to Henry. The river is crossed at Henry and the run is made to Lacon on the east bank of the river. The Illinois is again crossed at this point and the way routed to Peoria, on the west bank via Chillicothe, Rome, Peoria Heights, and Averyville.

Altogether the way traverse eight counties and in all of these, with but one exception, proects are under way for the issuance of bonds for the construction of good roads, ranging in amount from $500,000 to $1,500,000. The members of the Illinois Valley Way assocication, which is promoting the proect have in hand the improvement of such sections of the way as lie within their respective counties that are not already improved with the proceeds of these bond issues.

Much interest is being taken in the extension of the way from Peoria to Springfield via the Peoria road, and thence to St. Louis.

Good Roads Aid to Mail Carrier.

BY E. D. LANDWEHR.
[Chairman Good Roads Committee Illinois R. F. D. Carriers' Association.]

If any traveler appreciates the value of improved highways it is the rural mail carrier.

Rural mail delivery became general about fifteen years ago. At that time few persons, no matter how anxious to have their names on Uncle Sam's pay roll, cared to make daily rounds of twenty-five miles or more over mud roads with horse and wagon, and the practicability of the service was seriously questioned.

At the present time, with a slight improvement in the country roads and the adoption of motor vehicles, the R. F. D. route has been extended to cover not only twenty-five but fifty or more miles, but the time since the dawn of the better roads movement has been too short to put the rural mail service to the most exacting test.

Although much good has been accomplished by the champions of improved highways and the permanent roads that have been constructed recently promise much for the future, a rural mail route is no better than its worst stretches, and the R. F. D. service cannot reach its highest development until all roads, the main highways and their feeders, have been freed from mud.

KANSANS PLAN GOOD ROADS

Society Works for Macadam Highway to Connect Kansas City and Topeka.

Three hundred road boosters met at Lawrence, Kas., recently to plan ways and means of improving and macadamizing the sixty-five mile stretch of road between Kansas City and Topeka, the capital of Kansas. They organized under the name of the Kaw Valley Improved Highway association. H. S. Putney, Topeka, was elected president. Vice presidents were chosen to represent each city on the route.

EGYPTIAN TRAIL CHICAGO-CAIRO IMPROVED ROAD

Boosters Work to Better 400 Mile Highway; New Orleans Route Is Predicted.

BY LOUIS GEYLER.
[Chicago Distributor Hudson Automobiles.]

The Egyptian trail sounds like the title of one of Irving Berlin's songs, but it isn't. It is a new automobile route, extending from Chicago to Cairo, Ill., that was created in June of last year, and which promises to carry a great amount of automobile travel during the spring and summer touring season.

The highway measures approximately 400 miles, and the eighteen counties, including Cook, through which it passes have a combined population of 3,000,000, more than half the population of the entire state of Illinois.

The trail was laid out as nearly as possible to follow generally the line of the Illinois Central, the most traveled railroad artery in the state. It passes through Kankakee, with a state institution for the insane; Champaign, the seat of the University of Illinois; Mattoon, the metropolis of the central Illinois broom corn district; Centralia and Carbondale, railroad towns, and located in rich coal mining districts.

Better Roads Attract Autoists.

It is the duty of every vice president of the Egyptian trail to coöperate with his commissioners of highways in an effort to get "first aid" in bad weather to the Egyptian trail in his territory. Roads have been dragged, graded, and scraped along this route since the trail was organized that never before had been given any attention.

When the tourists began driving through as they did after news of the organization of the route was sent out, new good roads life and animus was instilled in the hearts of the people all along the line. Farmers were willing to pay if necessary to get the trail past their farms, and numerous attempts were made to deviate from the line following generally the line of the Illinois Central railroad.

The line has been marked from Cairo to the Cook county line, on every alternate telegraph pole, so that it can be followed easily by the tourist, day or night.

Trail Is Plainly Marked.

The trail mark of the Egyptian trail is a six inch black pyramid on an eighteen inch field of orange, the letter "E" to the left of the pyramid in black, and the letter "T" to the right. The trail marks face the road in all instances. Danger signs are being placed at railroad crossings and other places where there might be hazard to the tourist.

State aid roads are being built a mile or two at a time, adjacent to the towns on the Egyptian trail, and Mattoon township at an election held on March 16, 1916, voted to issue $120,000 in bonds to build twelve miles of brick roads, which will give the Egyptian trail a hard road almost entirely through Mattoon township.

But the dragging, draining, and keeping in condition of the dirt roads, while those processes give immediate relief, are not the main features which the organizers and officers of this trail are looking forward to.

More Government Aid in Future.

The time is not far distant when national and state aid will be more extensive than it is now. When that time comes, the Egyptian trail passing as it does through eighteen counties, through several senatorial and congressional districts, through towns where state institutions are located, piercing the great corn and broom corn belt, and extending now almost from the north state line to the southern, and connecting as it soon will with a through trail from Cairo to Memphis and New Orleans, will mean that this route will get its full share of the funds available for road building on the principal road arteries of the state. This trail may become the principal north and south route in the state, and when extended to New Orleans will provide a route from Chicago to the gulf.

PLANS TO BUY TOLL ROAD.

Pennsylvania Highway Commissioner Takes Steps to Control Lancaster Pike.

Action has been taken by the Pennsylvania highway commissioner for freeing from toll that part of the Lancaster pike running from the city line of Philadelphia at Overbrook to Paoli.

Mr. Cunningham has asked the Lancaster Improvement company, with headquarters in Philadelphia, to place a price on its holdings, so that the state might be in a position to purchase the road and throw it open to travel.

The Lancaster pike, known to the state highway department as Sproul highway route No. 120, is controlled by the Lancaster Improvement company.

NEED GOOD ROADS FOR WINTER SPIN

Only Permanent Improved Highways Will Stand Cold Weather Usage.

MACADAM GETS CUT UP.

BY CHARLES E. GAMBILL.
[Manager of Marmon Chicago Company.]

Motorists should appreciate the value of good roads at this time more than ever before. The past winter has been probably as bad a winter from the standpoint of roads as has been experienced since the motor car came into general use for transportation.

Conditions have been so varying all through the winter that even good macadam roads were hardly in condition to be traveled and most of the time it was absolutely impossible to get a motor car over any unimproved roads.

About the only highways which were used during the winter months were those that were constructed of brick, concrete, or had some kind of a tight binding which kept them from being cut up. People have been able to see just how bad a road that was considered good in the old days could be cut up by the heavy traffic which has been brought about by the automobile.

It is certainly to the interest of the city man to have good roads. The automobile has brought him in close touch with the country. He can very readily take a trip of a hundred miles in a day and the prospects of having a small place in the country can be much more readily realized than in the days when he either had to travel back and forth by train or had to get in close enough that he could use a horse and buggy.

His traveling pleasure was formerly confined to the city streets and very quickly the streets were improved to such an extent that they could be used all the year around. Brick, asphalt, and paving blocks took the place of macadam. Since he is no longer confined to the city streets it is to his interest to see that the country roads are made as good as the boulevards, for with the new travel by automobiles he needs good roads in the country just as much as good roads in the city.

This spring promises to be a great touring season. The demand for automobiles is greater than it ever has been, and the big, high priced touring cars are in just as much demand as smaller cars. People are always seeking to widen the scope of their trips.

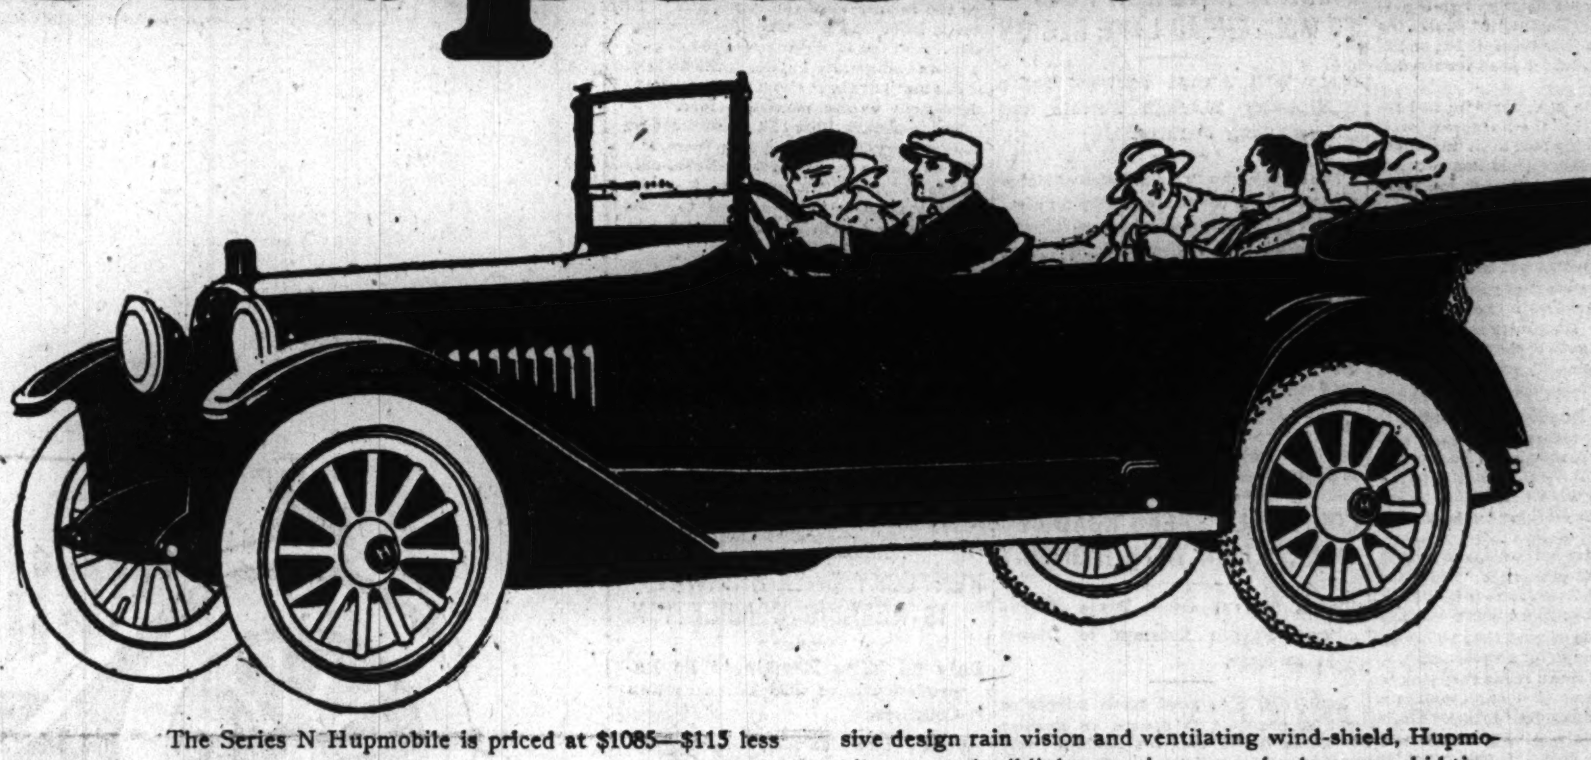
Hupmobile



The Series N Hupmobile is priced at $1085—$115 less than our former model.

Yet we have gone to greater lengths than ever before to maintain the Hupmobile reputation for quality. The Series N Hupmobile has twenty per cent more power, giving a quicker pickup, an even stronger pull on hills and in sand, and slower running on high speed. Note these mechanical features: Tungsten steel valves, disc clutch with 17 hardened steel plates, bronze-shell motor bearings, spiral bevel gears in rear axle, nickel steel axle shafts, vanadium steel mainleaf in springs, tubular propeller shaft. Compare these features with any car on the market.

The Series N Hupmobile maintains the reputation of earlier Hupmobiles for economy. It will probably reduce the Hupmobile repair cost record of less than ¼ cent per mile. Though twenty per cent more powerful, it is a fit companion for our earlier models in gasoline mileage, tire service and oil consumption.

Universal Service

Each purchaser of a Hupmobile receives, without extra cost, a book of coupons, good for 50 hours of service-labor on his car at any Hupmobile service station. Of these there are now approximately 3300 on main-traveled roads, and Hupmobile service is available in all parts of the United States and Canada.

We have been told countless times that the Hupmobile was the easiest riding car ever built. The Series N Hupmobile is more comfortable. The upholstery is deeper. Genuine high grade hair and improved cushion construction give the comfort of an old shoe. Springs are even more flexible and easy riding. Tires are large in proportion to weight. The 119-inch wheelbase cradles you over bumps and smooths rough roads.

The upholstery is genuine high grade leather. The open bodies are lined, with no highly polished surface exposed to scratches or mars. Floor-boards and clear running-boards are best linoleum. The tonneau is richly carpeted.

The Series N Hupmobile has the famous Westinghouse system for electric starting and lighting. In our own shops we build the genuine Golde one-man top and Collins quick-acting curtains. Five demountable rims, complete electric lighting equipment, latest and best speedometer, an exclusive design rain vision and ventilating wind-shield, Hupmobile patented tail light, genuine crown fenders, non-skid tires on the rear wheels, are regular equipment on the Series N cars.

You get these many improvements at $1085 for the five-passenger touring car or roadster. Compared with our previous cars the Series N model is not only a bigger value, but it is offered to you at a reduction of $115.

These two results have been accomplished—first, by a fifty per cent increase in production for 1916, which means better materials at lower cost and greatly reduced overhead cost per car; second, by an increase of factory facilities and improvement of factory methods—new machinery and new processes enable the company to build better at lower factory cost; third, we are confident that no car on the market is sold on a narrower margin of profit than the Series N Hupmobile.

In considering this car, please remember that the Hupp Motor Car Corporation is one of the few manufacturers in the United States that have never built a poor car or had an off year. Wherever you go you will hear the Hupmobile spoken of as a car of most unusual value at its price. That is why "we believe the Hupmobile to be the best car of its class in the world." That creed of ours is fact to Hupmobile owners.

The reputation of quality in our cars is the biggest asset of our business. And we guard it most jealously.

So when we tell you the Series N Hupmobiles are the best cars this company has ever built, and when its best cars are offered at this low price, you may well take our word for it that you will make no mistake in selecting a Hupmobile.

But we don't ask you to accept our word alone.

Please let us show you in an actual merit test that the Series N Hupmobile is just what we say—truly "the best car of its class in the world."

EUROPEAN WAR SHOWS BENEFIT OF GOOD ROADS

Belligerents Keep Highways in Repair Right Up to the Firing Line.

BY R. C. RUESCHAW.

[General Manager of the Reo Motor Car Company.]

I wonder how many Americans appreciate how great a part good roads will play in any preparedness plans for the future?

It is already apparent that wars of the future—if unhappily there be any more—will be fought along lines that have been developed in the recent European conflict. Not until that is over will we fully appreciate how great a part the motor truck has played in it. Long range guns transported on trains of motor trucks and moved rapidly from one point of the front to another will finally settle the question.

Considering that, one must appreciate that any plans for the protection of this country should include a system of good roads, not only running parallel with our coasts, but also connecting those parallel roads with the various manufacturing and distributing centers.

Motor Trucks for Supplies.

Given a system of good roads, it will be possible to transport supplies, munitions, and men from one point to another at a rapid rate and more flexibly than is possible with railroads alone. Of course the railroads would act as feeders, but on the motor truck we must depend for the distribution.

I was talking to a writer who had recently returned from the European front, and he said the thing that most impressed him was the wonderful condition in which the Germans and the French maintain their roads right up to the firing line.

He stated, by the way, that the motor trucks are considered so valuable they are never permitted to get inside the firing range. They go to that point and then the horses are sent with the loads into the danger zone. It's pretty rough on the horse, but it just goes to show the relative estimate that is placed on the old and the new method by those in control.

Wonderful Roads in Europe.

But the point I wanted to bring out was the part the good roads play in the matter. My informant tells me that they keep the roads in the war zone actually in better condition than any of our roads in this country.

Of course we hear in the dispatches that the roads in some places are "bad," but we must remember that that is a relative term and that a European would classify as "bad" a piece of road that we would consider good enough for a boulevard.

In building European roads they look to the foundation first. You can't maintain a road unless it has a foundation. Given that, it is a comparatively simple and cheap matter to keep the roads in first class condition.

Old Men Repair Roads.

The European combatants have never for a moment lost sight of the necessity of good roadways, even in the heat of the conflict. They know that the moment the roads are allowed to deteriorate the mobility of their forces will be destroyed. Older men who can't perform service at the front are kept busy filling up the ruts and holes and carefully puddling into them the mixed gravels, sand, and cement to make them as good as the other parts of the road.

They don't draw up a load of gravel and then dump it on the road and count on the passing traffic to gradually settle it into position—or making a worse hole. They go at it systematically and they keep at it persistently.

The most permanent investment for any country, as well as the great factor in national efficiency, is good roads.

Exhaust Echoes
by J. C. Burton

Andrew Lawrence Riker, the engineer who designed the first American automobile to win the Vanderbilt cup—the Locomobile which George Robertson piloted to victory in the 1908 classic—has had a motor truck named after him. The Locomobile company has decided to call its commercial vehicle the Riker, to differentiate it from its passenger car and incidentally to honor its chief of the slide rule and blue print, who has been identified with the automobile industry for two decades and is a member of the United States naval advisory board.

Dario Resta, the sensation of the 1915 automobile racing season, when he captured the Vanderbilt cup, the Grand prize, the Chicago Motor derby, and the two 100 mile invitation events run on the Chicago and New York speedways, has entered his Peugeot in the Indianapolis classic. Resta's entry is the fourth to be received by the Hoosier promoters.

MAINE TO HAVE NEW ROAD TO MOOSEHEAD LAKE REGION

State Will Award Contract for a Highway Through Forests and Lumbering Country.

The state highway commission of Maine will award the contracts shortly for completion of the new road which will tap the Moosehead lake region, opening up for tourist travel a route passing through the forests and lumbering region of the state. It is planned to complete all links in the road by July 1. This will be the second highway to enter the district of Moosehead lake from the south. It approaches the lake from the west, via Jackman and Rockwood. It terminates at Kineo, on the lake, which is the eastern boundary of Somerset county.

LOUISVILLE SEEKS ROAD IN CONNECTION WITH HIGHWAY

Wants Travel Over Dixie Highway—Fights Attempt to Divert It to East.

Louisville, Ky., good roads advocates will be prepared to oppose an attempt to divert travel over the Eastern Dixie highway by way of Knoxville and Cincinnati, instead of the western branch through Nashville and Louisville, but will do their part in persuading the officials of several counties on the western branch in Tennessee to live up to pledges made to the directors of the Dixie Highway association, according to statements made by officers of the Louisville Automobile club last week.

GOOD ROADS AND AUTOS A BENEFIT TO HUMANITY

Widen Circle of Motorists' Friends—Bring City and Country Closer.

BY E. C. TEBBETTS.

[Advertising Manager B. F. Goodrich Company.]

Seven or eight years ago I heard a minister dwell at length on a subject that had to do with religion outside of the church. He spoke of the great need of humanizing influences and of the value of the automobile as a means of taking one out of narrow environments into the outside world and all it means in bringing about a broader and better conception of life.

At the time I thought the idea was rather far fetched, but today I think not.

Anybody that merely sees an automobile in the light of a joy ride or a time saver is overlooking what might be called the main chance—the chance to see, observe, and learn about people and things which heretofore were surrounded with vagueness, if not with misconception. There is a chance to go beyond the narrow valley of provincialism into the precincts of larger appreciation and better understanding of humanity.

Auto Benefit to Farmer.

The other day I heard the question asked, "Is the automobile more useful to the farmer than the city man?" To me it looks like a "fifty-fifty" proposition. As I see it, the automobile has been a great community builder to the farmer. It has brought about a sort of get-together movement hardly possible before.

The boundary lines of existence are no longer marked by the old farm fence, and the quagmire country road that led only to the "Corners" is now a brick pavement that stretches far away to cities and towns—but neighboring cities and towns just the same.

Country Attracts City Men.

To the city man the automobile brings a new message—a message of the violets and of the pines and distant hills and plains, a message that tells a strange but wonderfully interesting story—a story that really does the heart and soul good, for I have seen many a case where it was the automobile that cut the humdrum out of existence and brought about new interests and enthusiasm.

Really human persons get the most out of life and the automobile does have a humanizing influence.

KENTUCKY DIXIE HIGHWAY IS NEARING COMPLETION.

Only 43 Miles Remain to Be Improved Out of 203 Miles in Ten Counties.

A little more than forty-three miles of road out of a total of 203 remains to be worked out on the Louisville and Nashville division of the Dixie highway, that is in the ten counties in Kentucky between Louisville and Nashville. Ninety-five thousand dollars is available for the work, according to a report compiled from estimates in the offices of the county judges in this district by W. A. Brownfield, Elizabethtown, Ky.

Now Comes the Stunning 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Cabriolet

Last autumn the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers was unveiled.

Recognition of its amazing merits was instant.

It proved the star performer at all the great automobile shows.

Now comes the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Cabriolet, and supreme engine speed weds closed-car comfort, elegance, and distinction. The performance of this new 3400 r. p. m. model is matched by the charm of the closed-car builder's art.

The enduring might of her 3400 r. p. m. motor puts speed where it belongs—in the clasp of almighty acceleration and singular fuel-economy.

The cataract of power from her speedy engine is held in sensible restraint—yet she'll go 60 miles an hour any time you say, while delivering 18 miles of marvelous going for every gallon of gas.

She's the season's favorite with women of taste for shopping jaunts, matinees, teas, and calls. So easy to drive that it won't wear out your wife or daughter to sit at the steering wheel. There's an uncommon amount of room, not only under the wheel but all around the wheel. Room for free swing of the elbows.

The heavy French plate glass windows are easy to adjust.

The top comes down for spring or summer use, giving you a handsome Six-30 Chalmers Roadster, and again a Cabriolet when another autumn rolls around. And so distinction weds utility.

This is a car that most families of taste cannot afford to be without.

I've stood at the curb watching closed cars of every make and kind, and there's none that goes about your business with lighter heart and surer step than this new 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Cabriolet.

There's a mighty lure to every line. Folk turn to look at her as she passes proudly by. Body by Fisher. Either leather or cloth trim without extra cost.

It's the car you'll want your wife to have.

$1400 Detroit

Color options: Oriford maroon or Valentine green with hood to match, or Meteor blue with black hood. Wire wheels are furnished, optional, at an extra charge.

$350 and a Ford makes a guaranteed one-ton truck

Here it is. A Ford and $350 gives you a truck with carrying capacity and efficiency equal to one-ton trucks costing $1500 or more. It runs 10 to 15 miles per hour under full load—delivers 12 to 20 miles per gallon of gasoline and gives the cheapest delivery cost in the world.

Public Service Co. buys 3

They had to have trucks they could absolutely "bank" on—long hauls—short hauls—emergency calls—quick runs. Any big corporation has to be shown. The Public Service Company of Northern Ill. bought one Smith Form-a-Truck. It did all they wanted it to do. Then they bought ANOTHER. This was proof that their first judgment was correct. Now, they have purchased the THIRD. The strongest testimonial in the world is that of REPEAT ORDERS.

About Miss Barrymore in a Bad Play, Well Acted

By Percy Hammond.

MANY indignant communications reach this desk protesting against Miss Barrymore's sacrilegious forthcoming in a play so shoddy as Mr. Hobart's vulgarization of the Emma McChesney fables. It is contended that an artist of Miss Barrymore's caliber should not descend to be a mere huckstress of the theater, but that with her family tradition and her celestial endowments she should have said to the satanic Mr. Hobart, "Get thee behind me, George," when he indicated to her the heavy riches that would accompany her appearance in his extravaganza, "Our Mrs. McChesney."

"See," Mr. Hobart may have said to her, "how plump my bags are, and my barns. My asses' backs with ingots bow, and I am an incarnation of fat dividends—from 'Experience,' et cetera, base wealth preferring to eternal praise from the insolvent or indifferent highbrow. Let us pursue the sordid way of wealth, for that is the path of comfort and contentment. Let us, in other words, get the dough."

As a Barrymore pioneer, and a conscientious celebrant at the shrine of her extraordinary attributes, I profess no patience with those playgoers who insist that she should act in good plays. She has acted in good plays more than any American actress, save Miss Adams, perhaps, and I feel that she has done her full duty to the drama as an alleged popular art. She has sugar-coated many a wholesome dramatic bolus, and with a fine combination of altruism and ambition she has sacrificed comfort and opulence to her desire to please the discriminating minority. Besides that her beauty and her personality have enticed to the adult theater thousands of esthetic morons into the gloom of whose perception she has shed an intelligent ray of light.

Now she presents a bad play, which is "Our Mrs. McChesney." A shrewdly unintelligent catalogue of cheap and popular expedients is this spectacle, a brazen, insolent affront to every one who does not, as Mr. Shaw or Mr. Chesterton has said, check his brains with his coat and umbrella. It is as if Mr. Hobart turned the crank of the hurdy-gurdy, and numerous monkeys blindly solicited our pennies. Miss Barrymore, thus embattled, pursues an admirable strategy, and when the exhibition is over we have the great dramatic compromise—a bad play, well acted and popular.

I wonder in what abandoned crypt Joseph Jefferson's memory would be entombed if he had not acted Rip Van Winkle, in as bad a play as "Our Mrs. McChesney." What is the foundation of Richard Mansfield's repute as a great player—in Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," which he regarded as his magnum opus, or "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which nauseated him, and others, every time he played it? Why does Mary Anderson linger in our recollection as a great actress—simply because she was an expert and lovely saleswoman, vending Parthenia as she would a pair of gloves? Is David Warfield an object of aspersion because he has always played in bad plays? On the contrary, he is a national hero because he has never played in a good one. Ada Rehan is best remembered for her Kate the Curst in "The Taming of the Shrew," Shakespeare's worst farce—but why proceed with the inventory?

Let the few of us embalm Miss Barrymore in our minds as Nora in "A Doll's House," and as Alice in "Alice Sit by the Fire," and as Zoe Blundell in "Mid-Channell," as Tante, as Carrots, and as the wonderful lady, whose name I forget, in "The Shadow." But let Miss Barrymore's fame reach its apex with the Philistine multitude in "Our Mrs. McChesney." If only Mr. George M. Cohan could have written that play instead of Mr. George Hobart all of us might have been pleased.

Billie Burke and "Gloria's Romance."

I TRUST that Miss Kitty Kelley and Miss Mae Tinee, the two most eminent expositors of the art cinematographic, will not be annoyed this morning when they read in the following paragraphs that a dramatic critic has scooped them. As I write this news both of them are young and beautiful and asleep; they do not, being fond of their firesides, drift through the Union loop late at night seeking the vagrant item. Slinking through Randolph street, gum shoed and otherwise disguised, I learned last evening that the Tribune-Billie Burke serial on which a vast treasure has been spent is to be entitled "Gloria's Romance"—indicating that Miss Burke is to be a lady named Gloria, and that she is to have, in the course of the story, a romance.

The editor of THE TRIBUNE has instructed me never to mention the moving pictures in my column; he contends that they are over my head and that I do not understand them. But in his absence I desire to say that recently in New York I scrutinized Miss Burke in this TRIBUNE serial and that I found her phenomenal. Her father was a great pantomimist, and he has, it seems, bequeathed to her much of his skill in silent acting. You will, I think, find Miss Billie Burke a better actress without words than with them, a wonderful and lovely canvas upon which many exciting moods and emotions are eloquently depicted. Gloria Stafford is her name, and she is vivacious, youthful, merry, beautiful, and involved in one of Mr. Rupert Hughes' most baffling mysteries she will nobly contend with Mr. Charles Chaplin and the comic supplement for the accolade of public favor. No actress so well fits the name Gloria as does Miss Billie Burke. "Gloria's Romance" will start on Monday, May 22, and Mr. Hughes' elaboration of its incidents will begin in this journal a week later.

Mlle. Pavlowa's interesting experiment of putting her opera company and ballet troupe into the Blackstone, having been denied admission to the wonted Auditorium, will be made Thursday, April 27, and will involve six performances. Her manager, Mr. Rabinoff, has been unable to rearrange his bookings elsewhere to take up the entire week in Chicago. These bookings, guaranteed enterprises in St. Paul and Minneapolis, were effected after he was told that he need not look for haven in the Auditorium. The operas to be sung are "L'Amore dei Tre Re," his doing of which in his October engagement in Chicago precipitated, in a measure, the tempest in opera circles; "La Boheme," with Miss Maggie Teyte; "Madame Butterfly," with the Japanese songstress, Tamaki Miura; "Otello," with Victor Maurel (he was the originator of Iago in the great Verdi work), Zanatello, Miss Teyte as Desdemona, and Miss Maria Gay as Emilia; and "I'Pagliacci," with Zanatello and Miss Felice Lyne, the cantatrice who calls Kansas City home. Pavlowa and her troupe will do all their popular divertissements, six new ones, the dances to the Bizet music which in October made a sensational appeal in the fourth act of "Carmen," and a new Spanish ballet to a score by Massenet. The arrangement involves two Sunday performances.

"The Follies of 1916" will be written by the dramatist of "Experience" and "Our Mrs. McChesney."

Pianists Three and Their Gentle Ways.

By Eric De Lamarter.

AFTER all, even though the essayists become tart of thought and expression at times and berate our audiences for their "stand pat" attitude, such a visitation and such a record as that of the last fortnight draw the sting from their epigram. There came Percy Grainger, whose exuberance burst through the barrier of indifference like the shout of a rowdy; his hair, his technique, his ideas of interpretation smote his hearers on the ear, even as his astonishing virtuosity in the presenting this ultra-modern, anguishing music startled the learned.

The audience took him to its bosom.

Then came Ernest Schelling, who, though hardly a stranger, yet ministers to our public rarely enough to present his undeniable talent at a fresh angle of interest with every appearance. He impressed an audience with a sense of aloofness, a sense of rather uninterested erudition; his composition is also of the modern school, and altogether of a lofty plane—rather the expression of the dreamer type of creative artist than of the shrewd showman who has calculated his effects. He plays without any of Mr. Grainger's "I'll make 'em like it because I like it" attitude.

The audience, again, took him to its bosom.

Then, still more recently, looms up Leon Ornstein, who stands in relation to the modish piano styles much as Rodin stood in relation to French sculpture of a few years ago. Mr. Ornstein wants it to be understood distinctly that he has no respect for beauty that, first of all, is merely pleasing. If he wishes to express himself by smashing discord and duclet cacaphony, he does it. He writes piano pieces, songs, a violin and piano sonata with the same bland disregard of aural comfort. He has no more mercy upon smug enjoyment than on the instruments he flails with mighty fist.

And audiences everywhere have taken him to their bosoms—albeit some of them may register apprehension.

This is true catholicity of attitude on the public's part. It is to be traced to one source—a hopeful confidence that Mr. Grainger, Mr. Schelling, and Mr. Ornstein are attempting to express sincere musical feeling. In the riotous "old days," under other skies, perhaps, such demonstrations might have resulted in ribald laughter, hisses, and vitriolic commentary. Not so today. There is a patience, a tolerance toward these untoward outbursts which means the impulse toward fair play.

It is not always easy to discern the idea of these disturbers of the peace. To read over such a score as Mr. Ornstein's sonata is to doubt the sanity of your sight. It seems preposterous. It is preposterous, for your ears tell you so. And yet, when studied until the barbed darts of his dissonance become imperceptible, it is patent that he has reason and a definite impulse behind this manifestation. Pleasant? Well, no; but neither were the feet of Rodin's "Key Bearer" pleasant feet. Yet, as you looked at those feet, you couldn't picture them patted into the lines of a Greek Adonis of the Euripidean period. Those feet belonged. So do Mr. Ornstein's excruciating delicacies of harmonic torture.

But there is a vast difference between Mr. Ornstein's idea of art and Mr. Grainger's or Mr. Schelling's. Mr. Grainger, a fresh air personality, is the most widely interested interpreter and creator of the three. Mr. Ornstein is frankly of the advance guard. Mr. Grainger indulges in extremes: to the Elizabethan period he turns for style and the diversion of creating in a naively sophisticated fashion; the "Mock Morris" dance is a clever example, with its tunefulness and its back country rhythms. Yet, Mr. Grainger is riotously at home in the playing of a score like John Alden Carpenter's Concertino.

Mr. Schelling, again, holds no brief for either of these fashions. Able to draw himself apart from the mad swirl of metropolitan music making when he will, he continues on his even way, resting confidently in the faith that art is not a spasmodic hopping over barriers into a strange bourne, there to come upon new ideas and freakish procedure; that artistic development is not a series of jumps in the dark, but an orderly pilgrimage through classic tradition and precedent to logical conclusions.

It's quite an interesting bit of a study—this watching of three able and diverse influences upon the development of the pianist's art. In all three cases is there evident the skill, the technical knowledge to give them adequate expression. The question behind all these manifestations, as it was behind the probation of Debussy's idiom, as it still is behind the probation of Schoenberg, Strawinsky, and Scriabin, is the emotional content—the "feeling," the impulse toward creation.

What place has this "feeling" in art matters, anyway? Our palladium of the American composer, Glenn Dillard Gunn, meditated long enough on an article which appeared in this column after his last concert of indigenous art to fan his eloquence into flame. Then he took his pen in hand and indited: "Consciously or unconsciously, the American composer is striving to express that feeling born of a community of ideals which makes us all Americans. This is his service to the nation, and a greater hardly can be rendered. You will agree with me that 'feeling' is the final measure of a race, just as it is the final measure of the individual."

"Feeling" is not all, as these "Nothing Mumbles But Bricks" poets seem to have proved. The question, however, is not quite the same; for, though it may not be apparent at the moment, there still is possibility that Mr. Ornstein's methods may reveal new technical laws in the fullness of time.

Let us try to sum up this contrast between Mr. Schelling's ideal and Mr. Ornstein's apparent ideal. Let's translate a couple of lines whose perfect union of "feeling" and technical skill bears testimony to the greatness of an English poet—

> ". . . quoted odes, and jewels five-words long
> That on the stretched forefinger of all Time,
> Sparkle forever . . ."

Shush just a moment! Robert M. Lee, the official office poet, is busy with the muse. Ah, here it comes, lilting along with the rhapsodic swing of your true impressionistic poet:

> "Querlish irkings of the paleozoic soul, stone heavy > in sodden weirdry,
> Glutting horses' hoofs and wolfish tang and glit > of gem beyond
> The bound of temporal mete . . ."

This represents about the impression Mr. Ornstein makes upon his general public. He has broken definitely with the classic, with its clarity, its mechanical expertness, its directness; he has not even paused to consider and make plain the steps by which he reached his proficiency in bewildering eloquence. He does not bother to lead his hearers gently by the ear through the underbrush of his logic. All such traditional procedure he eliminates by a jump.

To Mr. Schelling's mind the very traits Mr. Ornstein discards are the best guide toward the making and the playing of sound art of an enduring beauty. His is not so picturesque a method, and, of course, only time will prove the virtues of both.

But it is a very interesting little puzzle that the visits of these three pianists have given us.

Playbills of the Week

Central Music hall (formerly Whitney opera house)—The Theater Francais d'Amerique in a repertoire of French farces and comedies in the vernacular. The company has been through engagements in New York City, Boston, and Montreal, and comes hither under the auspices of Le Circle Français of Chicago. The arrangement of plays for the first week is: Tomorrow and Tuesday evenings, "Mon Ami Teddy"; Tuesday afternoons, "Petite Peste"; Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, "Blanchette"; Wednesday and Thursday evenings, "Mlle. Josette Ma Femme"; Friday and Saturday evenings, "La Sacrifice"; Saturday afternoon, "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon."

Princess—"The Taming of the Shrew," with Miss Margaret Anglin. A spirited, interesting, and effective revival of Shakespeare's lusty comedy, disclosing Miss Anglin in what proves to be one of her most engaging impersonations. The Petruchio of Lawson Butt is excellent. Revival worth seeing. Second week.

Powers'—"Our Mrs. McChesney," with Miss Ethel Barrymore. A footlighting of Miss Edna Ferber's stories in the vein of what we used to call "domestic drama." It affords good opportunities to Miss Barrymore, who proves her genius as a comedian by getting laughter out of George V. Hobart's lines. Second week.

Blackstone—"The Two Virtues," with E. H. Sothern and Miss Alexandra Carlisle. A pleasant drawing room comedy of manners, in which Mr. Sothern resumes, after a long period, his vocation as an actor of well bred carpet knights. It is agreeable to have him, in what he says is his final visit to Chicago, back in his mid-Victorian guise. Miss Carlisle is alluring as lady with lavender spots. Second week.

Grand Opera house—Augustus Thomas' "Rio Grande," well done by Miss Lola Fisher, Richard Bennett, Robert McWade, et al. Fourth week in Chicago.

Cort—"Everyman's Castle." This is a play by William Anthony McGuire, who may be identified as the author of "The Divorce Question." The new piece, it would seem, is designed as a social purge. Mr. Lackaye's company includes Miss Hilda Spong, Miss Kathleen Clifford, Miss Maude Eburne, Miss Alma Belwin, Cyril Scott, and Effingham Pinto. First time this evening.

Illinois—"Chin-Chin." Ninth week.

Olympic—"So Long, Letty!" Seventh week.

Garrick—"Experience." Fourteenth week.

Chicago—"Town Topics." Fourth week.

Little—"The Charity That Began at Home," with Mr. and Mrs. Browne and their company. Ninth and final week.

National—"The Crisis," with the stock company.

Victoria—"In Old Kentucky."

Imperial—"While the City Sleeps."

Majestic—McIntyre and Heath will head the changed bill tomorrow. They will divide the week, it is announced, among three of their familiar black face sketches. Miss Beatrice Herford, in her monologue; Miss Augustua Dial and her Navassar Girls, who play brass instruments; Ideal, a swimmer; Miss Madge Caldwell, in the sketch called "A Telephone Tangle," and Miss Ruth Budd, who performs on swinging rings, also are listed.

Palace Music hall—Miss Evelyn Nesbit, the celebrated witness for the defense, returns tomorrow to billtop. She will dance with Jack Clifford. Mike Bernard, a well known ragtime pianist; Miss Florrie Millership, at one time 50 per cent of the Millership Sisters, soubrettes of the two a day; Miss Bayonne Whipple in "Spooks"; Bert Melrose, a grotesque acrobat, and a septet advertised as the original Honey Boys, "veterans of the late George Evans minstrels," are other inducements.

McVicker's—Continuous variety.

Great Northern—Continuous variety.

Columbia—Miss Rose Sydell and her company, starting today.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

MAJESTIC.

McWaters and Tyson:

"Poor Jones, did you hear about him?"

"No."

"Lots of trouble. First his business went."

"Too bad."

"Then his house went."

"O, wasn't that unfortunate?"

"Then his wife went, and at last his automobile went."

"Great! It's the first time in years! It never went before."

M'VICKER'S.

Marie Sabbott and Armand Wright:

"What are you all dressed up for?"

"I'm going to be married."

"To whom?"

"Lizzie McSwat. Are you going to marry?"

"Absolutely."

"Whom?"

"A man."

"A real man? How did he propose to you?"

"He didn't propose. He just stood up in the corner and said yes. I'd have strangled him if he had said no."

"What kind of a wife would you advise me to take?"

"Don't take a wife at all. Court the single women and leave the wives alone."

New York Dramatic Letter.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If the shade of Will Shakespeare was Zeppelining here or hereabout last week we daresay it was measurably heartened by what it saw and heard. For we assume the spiritual William has long since forgiven Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree such crimes as he may have from time to time laid against him. Sir Herbert may not always have been kind to England's first poet, but he has at least been persistently friendly.

It was Sir Herbert's week. On Tuesday he appeared as Cardinal Wolsey in his own production of "Henry VIII." with all and sundry trappings that he had brought over from His Majesty's theater, London. On Wednesday he was interviewed as many times as he could be cornered. On Thursday he replied to cablegrams, telegrams, and letters of congratulation that were showered upon him. On Friday he added the receipts of four performances and found there was an increase rather than any sign of decrease in the daily average. And on Saturday between matinee and night performances he ran over the lecture on Shakspeare which he delivered on Sunday before the members of the Drama league.

Rather a busy period for a gentleman of 62 years, but Sir Herbert thrives on activity. While he was being filmed in California last month he frequently labored eighteen hours a day and counted it rather good fun. "Of course, what we got was not Shakspeare," he has reported; "but I daresay it will prove very interesting."

Something of the same might be said of the first Tree production. It is not commanding, but it is interesting. It suffers as a production pictorially when viewed in contrast with modern settings of Shakspeare's plays. The brave attempts at realism made with the scenery from His Majesty's theater suggest that it must be archæologically correct, as much of it looked old enough to have been built in Henry VIII.'s day. Massive it is, and as atmospheric as need be. Some of the scenes are of a faded grandeur, too, that is even more pleasing than the vivid urban coloring that has been so liberally spattered over the New York stage this season. But as a production it no more compares with that built for Mr. Hackett's revival of "Macbeth" than the product of a day seamstress would compare with a Paquin model. We mention this as a tribute to the generosity of local reviewers in their reception of Sir Herbert. You may be sure they never would have raved over so worn a production had it been shown under native auspices.

Histrionically, however, this "Henry VIII." is all that could reasonably be desired. It is not and cannot be made a good play. It is, in spite of all the editing it has undergone, still no more than an historical pageant, a succession of correlated but in no sense closely knit episodes.

The first act begins with Wolsey's condemnation of Buckingham, skips to Henry's indorsement of that injustice, and takes in the masquerade at the cardinal's palace, at which Henry flirts with the alluring Anne Boleyn—a scene indicating, so one of the Broadway wits was pleased to note, that Wolsey really originated the cabaret.

The hall at Hampton is set the full depth of the stage, with the cardinal, bracketed between two of his lady friends, at the upper end; his guests seated at two long tables at the sides of the room, while a rollicking ballet is performed in a "space cleared for dancing," much as it might be today.

The second act encompasses the farewell of Buckingham, the plot to divorce Katharine, the continued progress of flirtatious Anne, and finally the trial of Katharine and Henry's break with the cardinals.

Not until the third act brings to a focus the culminating tragedies of Katharine and Wolsey is the dramatic sweep of events felt, and it is in this section that both Sir Herbert and his company triumph. Before the dignified and womanly pathos of Edith Wynne Matthison's scene of physical collapse as the divorced queen it mattered little what the scenic backing might be. And when Wolsey read the speech of resignation bidding a long farewell to all the greatness his inexorable ambition had both granted and denied him Sir Herbert at once became the towering figure of the production.

Moving the scene to that portion of the palace in which it would be possible to arrange "an ante-chamber with adjoining chapel," he brought into effective juxtaposition a proper scenic backing for the two important incidents of Wolsey's fall—Henry's discovery of the cardinal's duplicity in the matter of the divorce and his turning to the church in his defeat, seeking that forgiveness that passeth all understanding and marshalling the forces of his still abiding faith for a last earthly charge.

He stood, as he read these last long speeches, a glowing scarlet figure against the somber background of the chapel, a flaunting, defiant churchman still bolstered by a human pride of achievement and a consuming faith in what destiny had marked out for him. Or he sat, touched with the weakness that so soon was to result in his death, in an ecclesiastical chair, his dishonored robes gathered about his feet, while he read ambition's lesson to the faithful Cromwell, or counted the cost of "treading the paths of glory" and found it excessive.

He rose at the last to a superb height, casting his cardinal's cloak of temporal power from him as a thing accursed, and approached the door of the chapel humbly, contritely, and yet still defiant in his faith. "Farewell the hopes of court; my hopes in heaven do dwell," he read in the measured tones characteristic of this actor, and Wolsey was gone.

Those who have seen Beerbohm Tree, before or since he became Sir Herbert, have doubtless classified him, as we have, as a pretty bad actor in modern rôles. He has a deliberation in reading that is annoying, an obviousness of gesture, a carefully studied method of projecting character that is more or less irritating to one familiar with the quicker, more natural, more spontaneous method of less conscious players. But in Shakspearean rôles Sir Herbert's very deliberation in a measure clarifies his reading, and his evident love for the spoken Shakspeare adds to rather than detracts from his performance.

His Wolsey, save in the earlier scenes, is a fine, forceful, dignified characterization. When it is most obviously the primer study of a conspirator under the red robe its faults may be traced to the sketchy nature of the play itself.

Will Shakespeare had his second inning at the William Winter testimonial. Rather a remarkable occasion this, viewed from any one of a half dozen angles. Here were fifty actors, most of whom had suffered a stinging lash or two from the pen of the good gray critic, volunteering in his old age to play for his benefit. Here was Ruth St. Denis adding her bronzed self to the pleasant company, though it was her particular contributions to the joy of this nation which Mr. Winter catalogued as among the lewd and lascivious dances of the harem when he was a defender of a pure stage and a clean stage.

Here were young players to whom Mr. Winter's name was only an echo and his written words a closed book giving their time to the success of the undertaking. And here were many managers who were presumed to hate him applauding generously whenever the speakers of the afternoon lauded the critic for his steadfastness to high ideals and his bravery in facing the loss of his job because he would not bend the pregnant hinges of his poor old knees to a box office and counting room standard of art.

It was all fine, and probably it made up, at least in part, for the insults that in the old days were freely heaped upon the brave old man's attitude toward the degenerate tendencies of modern plays, playwrights, and producers. We hope so, at least.

Mr. Winter sat in a box surrounded by friends and flowers, and after it was all over he went upon the stage, said a few graceful words of thanks, and had his picture taken with all the motley crew. After that he went to dinner, saw Sir Herbert Tree play Wolsey in the evening, and caught a late ferry for Staten Island. The end of a perfect day, no doubt, for this 80 year old stalwart of art, literature, and the drama. Proving that if we live long enough and are patient virtue is, indeed, often its own reward.

NOT merely to make music but to give you the pleasure of actually playing the piano—that is the purpose of the

Baldwin Manualo

The Player-Piano that is all but human

You really play it through the pedals in the same sense that an artist plays it through the keys. Just as he secures his effects merely by giving his musical feeling full sway in the fingering, so does one at the Manualo secure equally intimate effects merely through the instinctive expression of his musical impulses in the pedaling. The Manualo is controlled from the pedals as from the keys. It is a piano to you who cannot play by hand the same as to those whose fingers have years of training.

Values in Life.

IN hut happiness it is of first importance to find and keep true values. Life is imposed upon by what has preceded it and by what is to follow it. It is bullied by its antecedents, by pleistocene life and the tertiary period, and the 50,000 year old cave man of northern France.

These antiquities seem to take the importance out of present day living because we are, with the passage of a sufficient span of years, of no more importance than the skeleton remains which may be found in a cave.

We also are imposed upon by the importance of what is to follow us. The imposition of posterity upon the present is a tyranny. If we yield but a bit imaginatively we find that we are living not for the present but for the future, for the thing which except as it exaggerates itself can have no concern for us.

These two forces, that of the dead past and that of the unborn future, strive to disturb life, and in hut happiness there is a conscious and constant struggle against them. Life, in the span which may be ordinarily predicted for it, is worth while in itself, regardless of cave man ancestry and regardless of posterity; regardless of what has preceded and of what may follow.

The span itself, with its sensations, is wholly valuable. It does not need a justification in a future generation. It does not look for one in the past. It is itself the present. It is sensation and perception. That is enough. CLIFFORD RAYMOND.

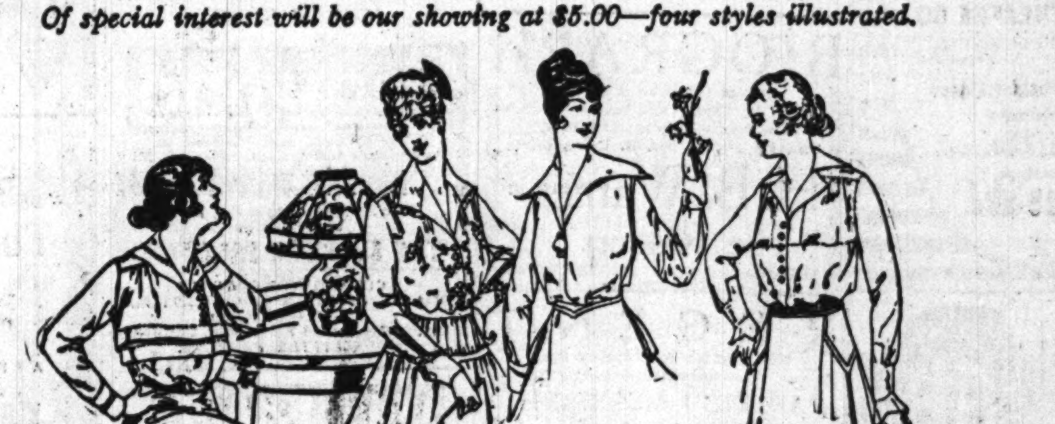
Blouses of Rare Beauty
at $5, $6.50, $7.50, $8.50, $10, $15 and Up

OUR Blouses this spring are lovelier and more enticing than ever before—and the values offered are really wonderful. Dainty pastel colorings are shown in French Georgette crepe, soire silk, and crepe de chine—some of them embroidered, others trimmed in laces of various patterns—in a variety of attractive styles.

Of special interest will be our showing at $5.00—four styles illustrated.



1—Crepe de Chine $5.00. 2—Embroidered Georgette $5.00. 3—Soire Blouse $5.00. 4—Combination of Georgette and Crepe de Chine $5.00.

We have, also, a splendid display of Lingerie Blouses very specially priced at $2.00. These are daintily embroidered or trimmed with narrow Valenciennes lace. Really they must be seen to be appreciated. Special, $2.00.

Fashion's Guide Posts

"Velasquez," a dainty new Neckwear conceit, is of fine French net, in a double collar effect, hand-embroidered, edged with tiny corded ruffles and topped with a rolling collar.

For evening wear, the newest, smartest Hose, have inserts of silver and gold tinsel to match the Slippers.

A Novelty Necklace which harks back to the antique is of dull green gold, with jade or coral settings.

A Novelty Striped Blouse Tailleur of handkerchief linen reveals the influence of Bakst in its unusual color combinations.

Proclaiming its allegiance to the Orient, is a Sailor of Chinese black Java straw, faced with gold-embroidered satin and with a huge gold dragon, appliqued on the crown.

The new Silk Parasols for motoring can be folded and put in a bag to hang at the side of the car, or be tucked away in one of the pockets.

"Variety is the spice of life," says one pair of Hose, slashed at the sides and laced with a tasseled silk cord.

Direct from the days of grandmother comes a quaintly severe Cape Collar of taffeta, with pinked frilling, caught with two prim little nosegays.

Charmingly attractive are the smart Russian Blouses of heavy Georgette crepe, with the deep collar and lower bodice inset with original designs in pastel shades. A belt or heavy cord is worn at the waistline.

A dainty Bracelet for afternoon or evening wear is in a sterling silver bar design, set with French rhinestones, linked to a flexible bracelet of silver, with the rhinestone settings.

Spring Coats and Wraps Are Wonderful to Behold

For the woman of exquisite taste we have the models needed for street, sport, motoring, afternoon or evening wear. A word must be said for materials which lend themselves so gracefully to the designs—they are wonderful, too.

Cintilla cloth is new and pretty; velours, Bolivias and Poiret twill are favored. Silks, serges, gabardines, checks and mixtures are also popular.

Prices $15.00 to $150.00

The Spring Frocks

for women are full of the quaintness of grandmother's days.

Hoops were worn then to distend the skirts, but this charming afternoon dress of crepe de chine has a heavily corded skirt to aid the tendency for flares. Simple surplice waist, priced $39.50.

Another lovely afternoon model arrived from a clever little dressmaker of note. In this she used chiffon taffeta, with fancy lace bodice, and ribbons of contrasting shades underneath draped skirt. Black, navy and gray, priced, $29.50.

Other beautiful frocks $15 to $200.

The Best Coat

we have seen at $25.00 is of Poiret twill and covert gabardine, lined throughout with plaid silks or changeable taffetas.

Latest News from Movie Land

by MAE TINEE

ALICE JOYCE COMES BACK.

JOYOUS news! Alice Joyce has emerged from the chrysalis of oblivion in which she has concealed her bright picture play self from the public for the last year or so, and is looking around with the idea of again appearing on the screen. Needless to say, a number of companies are eagerly flagging her. Which one she joins is a matter of conjecture, but we have a pretty fair idea. Which do you reckon? You remember Miss Joyce has been Kalem's favorite and the wife of the popular screen star, Thomas Moore. Now she has added to a list of titles that of mother of a small daughter, Joyce Moore, who, between you and me, was the real cause of her mother's absence from the motion picture play theaters.

E. H. Calvert of Essanay company is vurry fond of automobiling, and he has a new car, a roadster. It has a penchant for sinning—that is, it is a wicked, risque sort of motah. Said Mr. Calvert, "Want it understood that no one will drive this car but me." Said his wife, casting at the road divil a disparaging glance: "You are right; no one would."

Edith Johnson of Selig has been named by the Press club of Los Angeles as the most beautiful blond in motion pictures. Said beautiful blond has had a new dance named for her by the Pals club. It is called the "Edith Ecstasy."

While taking an exterior the other day a company of Pallas Pictures players were astonished by hearing from the innards of a passing rubberneck wagon the following announcement: "On your right is Dustin Farnum playing in a scene from "Davy Crockett." How the guide knew "Dusty" and what "Dusty" was doing is an answer to the famous question, "Why are press agents?"

The Famous Players studio in New York had a menagerie of its own last week. A monkey tied to a steam pipe chatted offensively at Mike, a Boston bulldog. In a corner a nervous and excitable pig made life hideous by his grunts and squeals, and as far from the pig as it could get lay a meek and penchant lamb, who is already known as a photoplayer of ability in Paramount pictures. This assortment of talent had been assembled to support Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clarke, and Pauline Frederick.

Thomas Meighan of Lasky had the honor last week of entertaining as his guest Harry Leon Wilson, the author of "Ruggles of Red Gap."

In Miss Courtot's next Gaumont photoplay, "Feathertop," her sister, Miss Juliette Courtot, will take a small part "just for fun."

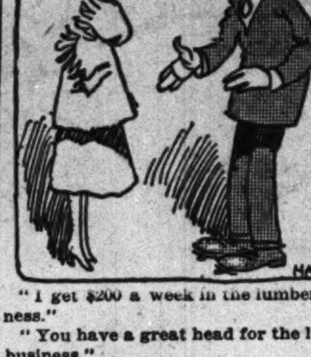
Back to the "legitimate" will come for a few weeks three Equitable and World Film stars. They are Charles Cherry, Alice Brady, and Jane Grey.

Vaudeville Wit.

MAJESTIC.

Ben Ryan and Harriette Lee:

"What business are you in?"



"I get $200 a week in the lumber business."

"You have a great head for the lumber business."

"Do you know you have wonderful teeth?"

"O, do you think so?"

"Yes, where did you get them? Now tell me something. Do you love me?"

"Ask me something sensible."

"O, that's not kind. Especially when I've bought you a nice present for your birthday."

"O, did you buy me a present?"

"Certainly, but may be you'd rather have the dollar."

FEATURE FILMS OF THE WEEK

"A Social Deception"—Selig Diamond Special feature with Harry Mestayer and Eugenie Besserer in the lead. A supposed crook is found to be a wealthy clubman and finally wins the girl of his choice.

"Audrey"—Famous Players picturization of Mary Johnston's novel of the same name. Pauline Frederick is featured.

"Autumn"—Red Feather Universal drama featuring Violet Mersereau and Lieut. Percy Richards.

"Her Great Price"—Metro production featuring Mabel Taliaferro. Ought to be good.

"I Will Repay"—Three act Essanay drama in which Marguerite Clayton, John Junior, and Edward Arnold are featured.

"Madelaine Morel"—Three reel Biograph picturization of Augustin Daly's play. All star cast.

"Revelation"—Five act American picturization of Sudermann's story, "Heimat." Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude are featured.

"The Code of Honor"—Three part American drama featuring Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh. This will show you how the secret service works.

"The Little Monte Carlo"—First installment of Kalem's new serial. Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby play the leads.

—"The Saleslady"—Famous Players production featuring Hazel Dawn.

"The Love Liar"—Five act Horsely Mutual drama featuring Crane Wilbur. A story of the loves of a much loved violinist.

"The Ranger of Lonesome Gulch"—Three part Mustang-Mutual drama in which Thomas Chatterton and Anna Little are featured.

"The Woman's Law"—Five part Pathe Gold Rooster feature with Florence Reed. An interesting drama full of heart interest, pathos, and intense dramatic situations, saith the press agent.

Stationary Photoplays.

Castle — Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "Ben Blair," Pallas production, featuring Dustin Farnum. Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, "For the Defense," a Lasky production with Fannie Ward in the lead.

Colonial—"Sunshine Dad," a five reel Fine Arts-Triangle farce, featuring De Wolf Hopper. Also a Keystone-Triangle comedy. An excellent musical program is given.

La Salle—"Audrey," five reel Famous Players picturization of Mary Johnston's novel. Also a comedy featuring Sidney Drew.

Studebaker — "The Saleslady," a five act Famous Players production featuring Hazel Dawn; also a Burton Holmes travelogue.

Ziegfeld—"The Hero of Submarine D-2," Vitagraph drama, featuring Charles Richman. "Her Great Price," Metro comedy-drama, featuring Mabel Taliaferro.

SIEGEL COOPER Says

There are only two types of women in the world: Those who know and those who are afraid they don't know. You can tell them apart in a minute when they come to choosing styles.

Take the woman who knows. When she comes to a Millinery Department and the salesgirl brings her a number of hats, she tries them on one after another until, suddenly, she finds the one she wants. She drags it down a little further on one side, gives it a few pushes and a couple of pats. Then she sticks her chin out, turns her head this way and that; her eyes light up and she says to the salesgirl: "This is what I want."

"3.98," says the girl, but the woman isn't listening. She's found what she wanted. It makes her good looking, and she knows it in a flash.

The Rengo Belt Corsets

Do you quickly break down your corsets? Do you rip them to pieces? Do they lose their shape after a short wearing? If so, you've never worn a Rengo Belt Corset. Try one and you'll realize the difference. You will be relieved quickly of all corset discomfiture. It's a stout woman's corset in the truest sense of the word. The materials are strong, the boning of the most flexible watchspring steel. A cleverly devised reducing feature is called to your attention, which extends across the abdomen and gives shapliness to any figure. Scores of new models. Be fitted Monday with a Rengo Belt Corset. Pick out the style that suits your figure; no matter what is required by nature, the Rengo Belt Corset will supply the need.

Style 215 is for the average, evenly proportioned figure. The elastic band in the back molds the figure perfectly below the waist. This Corset is of good quality coutil. The price is $2

Style 319 is especially attractive to stout and medium figures, for it has the double strength, extra heavy elastic webbing and the double watch spring steels, guaranteed not to rust. It also has the exclusive patented Rengo Belt Abdominal feature. It will positively give support and reduce the excess flesh at the back, hips and abdomen. Price, $3

Style 213 is a low bust model for average figures. It has the elastic gores over the abdomen; it is long over the hips and flat in back. An exceptionally good model, $2

Style 83 is called the Military Corset. It has the graduated front steels which add to its strength and reduce the abdomen. And it is so modeled as to give support to the rest of the figure as well. Price, $5

The Spring Selling With Wonderful Values

The other woman goes through the same process, trying on and discarding hats and finally finding the one she wants. But when the salesgirl says, 3.98, this woman says: "O! Haven't you anything higher priced?" Or, "Maybe I'd better look further."

Poor soul! She's afraid she doesn't know, and she pays for her fear every day of her life. Indeed (let us whisper it), that is what some large stores and the specialty shops live on for the most part—a woman's fear.

This great Siegel Cooper Opening Sale tomorrow is a sale for women who know. It's a sale of beautiful styles, of good qualities, and of wonderful values. And if you know these three things—style, quality, and value, you'll be delighted beyond measure.

There are two ends to this old Loop, and if you'll only shop at both ends, you'll buy at this end.

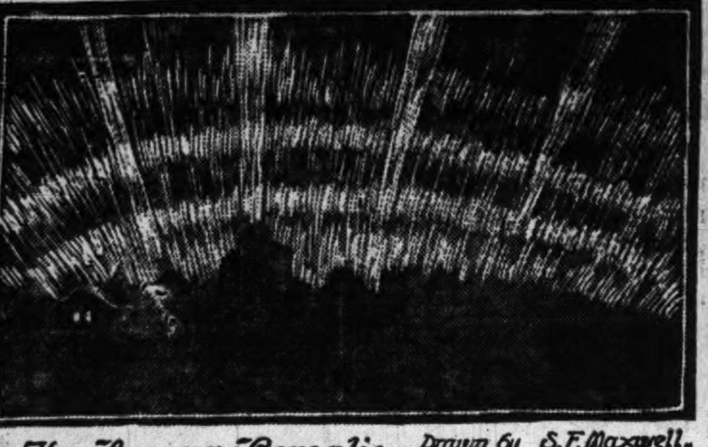
ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND



The Aurora Borealis Drawn by S. F. Maxwell.

THE months for the displays of the Aurora Borealis are March and September. They are then more numerous than at any other time.

The Aurora is the most interesting of the subtle demonstrations of the sun's power. It is more interesting than the zodiacal lights because it projects itself more conspicuously.

Occasionally even in the smoked atmosphere of a great city the Aurora will flare up and reveal its beauties. In the clear air of the further north where man's necessities have not clouded the media of his perceptions, it is a spectacle lacking nothing of what imagination would give it.

Usually the Aurora is white. Occasionally its colors brighten. They sometimes are golden yellow with edges of red and green. It has the appearance of shafts of lights springing up against the horizon or, at times, of a mist which spreads over the horizon.

Its height varies. Sometimes it arises from twenty-two to forty-four miles above the ground; sometimes it reaches a height of 600 miles.

The Aurora was for a long time a mystery, just as the zodiacal light was. When it was discovered that light has a propelling force and that certain particles are so small as to yield to this force, there was a beginning of understanding. It was found that particles of red hot carbon are deflected by a magnet.

If these particles, projected by the driving force of the sun's light, come into the influence of the earth's magnetism, they are bent in whorls. The earth is most exposed to the sun at the equator. That is where the corpuscles driven from the sun must come most numerously.

Near the poles they come into a condition of atmosphere which resembles a vacuum. There they begin to give out the lights of what are known as cathode rays. In doing so they are destroyed. The sun drives the particles from it by the driving force of light. They enter the earth's magnetic influence and in the cold near the poles they are destroyed, revealing their extinction in the luminosity which flares up along the horizon.

In the north this is the Aurora Borealis. In the south it is the Aurora Australis.

The zodiacal lights are similarly explainable, but they require trained perceptions for observation, whereas the Aurora has come into the average person's sight.

They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

PALACE.

Marie Fitzgibbon: A little girl was in the habit of praying every night. One night, after asking for a blessing for her father and mother and her many little brothers and sisters, she added: "And please God don't send father any more children. He doesn't treat the ones he's got now right at all."

A teacher in a public school asked her class of little tots to stand at the blackboard and draw the picture of what they wanted when they grew up. All the class but one responded. This one was a little boy.

"Willie," said the teacher, "don't you want to be anything at all?"

"Yessum," said Willie, "I want to be married, but I don't know how to draw it."

On another day she asked the pupils to state what they had to thank God for. One little girl said she thanked him for her pretty rosy cheeks, another for her long hair, and a husky youngster volunteered his gratitude to the creator because he was a good baseball player. Only one boy refused to say anything. He was freckled, bowlegged, and all his teeth were missing.

"Thomas," said the teacher, encouragingly, "haven't you got anything to thank God for?"

"Naw," the youngster said, "he darned near ruined me."

Pslams of Life

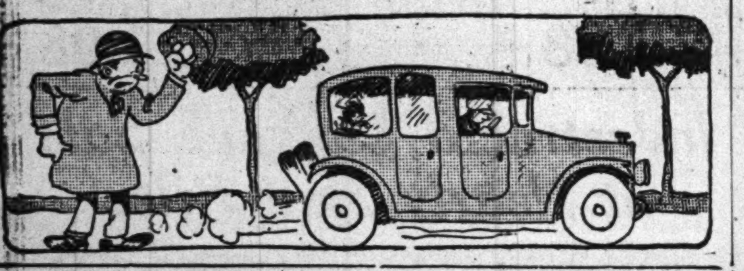
by J. P. McEvoy

THE CURE.

For years he cursed the wicked rich in horrid, hectic tones;
He cursed them hide and fur and teeth and feathers, hair, and bones;
He cursed them in the morning and he cursed them in the night;
He panned them auburn, blond, brunette, and yellow, black, and white.
He hated them and all they had with a hate beyond compare—
He hated them down to Hades—and up the Golden Stair;
But an uncle died and left this guy a bunch of yellow ore,
And now you never hear him curse the wealthy any more.

"The plutocrats," he used to say, "have ground us down and out;
They scourge us to disease and death beneath the bloody knout;
They take the bread from out our mouths, the rags from off our backs,
And live the while in mansions grand while we exist in shacks.
O, curse the rich and all they have and those who gave them birth;
I wouldn't touch a cent of theirs for anything on earth."
But an uncle died and left this guy a million bucks or more,
And I have got it pretty straight it didn't make him sore.

He'd stand beside the avenoo, this democratic guy,
And shake his fists at limousines as they went crashing by;
He'd curse a pants that had a crease and shoes that had a shine,
And rave of lobsters, caviar, and any kind of wine.
The cognoscenti he'd condemn and hoi polloi he'd praise;
You have no faint conception of the fuss he used to raise.
But an uncle died and left him many flocks of golden ore,
And, strange enough, he doesn't curse the wealthy any more.



TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

Last week's best sellers at a leading Chicago bookstore:

WAR.

"The First Hundred Thousand" (Houghton-Mifflin), by Ian Hay.

FICTION.

"The Real Adventure" (Bobbs-Merrill), by Henry Kitchell Webster.

"Pollyanna" (Page), by Eleanor H. Porter.

"Dear Enemy" (Century), by Jean Webster.

"Destiny" (Watt), by Neville Buck.

"Life and Gabriella" (Doubleday-Page), by Ellen Glasgow.

"The Side of the Angels" (Harper), by Basil King.

NONFICTION.

"Eat and Grow Thin" (Dutton), by Vance Thompson.

A FEW MONTHS BEFORE WAR.

IN view of his new book, "Ways to Lasting Peace" [Bobbs-Merrill], this bit of news about David Starr Jordan is especially interesting. It comes from Dr. James A. Macdonald, author of "Democracy and the Nations" [Doran]. Dr. Macdonald declares that Bernhardi outlined the whole plans of Germany to a select few at Leland Stanford university a few months before the war. He told how Germany would make a feint of getting by the French fortifications while in reality she was marching through Belgium, then drive on to Paris, exact a sufficient indemnity to pay the costs of the expedition, and then wheel round on Russia and crush her before she could mobilize. The only Americans who were parties to that conference," says Dr. Macdonald, "were David Starr Jordan and Benjamin Ide Wheeler. Prof. Wheeler was fascinated, but Jordan wasn't particularly impressed." A few months before the war!

Leonard Merrick, who is one of the most delightful writers that I have ever met in the pleasant paths of library lanes, has been lost to sight for a long time. Word of him has finally come from London: "The author of 'Conrad in Quest of His Youth' had a breakdown last spring which obliged him to resign from the United Arts Volunteer Rifles, of which he was one of the keenest members, and since then it seems has had to undergo three operations, from the third of which he is now recuperating in a nursing home at Bristol."

A flurry of interest has been aroused by the announcement that Col. Edward M. House, President Wilson's confidential adviser, is the author of "Philip Dru, Administrator" (Huebsch), published in 1912. Philip Dru works out an entire reconstruction in the American system of government. If he speaks with the tongue of Col. House his views will be most eagerly sought alike by legislators and the merely interested reading public.

◆

"The Diamond from the Sky," Roy McCardell's ten thousand dollar serial—in case you've been waiting open mouthed for the news—is published this week by the Dillingham company.

Elizabeth Cooper has written an interesting book in "The Harem and the Purdah" (Century). One bit of national scandal in it is that in Egypt 90 per cent of the marriages end in divorce. A man and his wife can mutually consent to give each other up, and it's a fact without their having to go to court at all. Women aren't treated fairly there, though, in the matter of divorce. Whereas a man may marry immediately upon the granting of his freedom, a woman must wait three long months before she can marry again.

Do you remember "Mixed Marriage"? It was one of the brightest bits of sunshine and shadow in that canvas of clear light which the Irish Players painted for us a couple of years ago. And "The Magnanimous Lover"? They are both in St. John G. Ervine's new book, "Four Irish Plays" [Macmillan]. "The Orangeman" and "The Critics," a jolly little "morality for the press," Mr. Ervine calls it, complete the volume.

◆

"Behold the Woman" [Lippincott], by T. Everett Harré, according to modest announcements, is full of "a riot of color, a turmoil of licentiousness, the beauty of imagery, and the glory of the spiritual transfiguration." Furthermore, Mary Garden is said to have desired Richard Strauss to compose an opera with this book as the theme. That's what they say.

◆

In explanation of the delay of the publication of the second volume in his "Elements of the Great War" (Hearst's International Library), Hilaire Belloc writes: "I know that my 'Elements of the Great War, Second Phase,' is delayed, but I really must point out to you that it is impossible in the strain of the present war to be certain of a fixed date as one would be of a noval, say, in time of peace. I am, for instance, only just at this moment returned from a long inspection of the sites of the battle of the Marne with an officer of the French general staff."

The Shakspeare Memorial Masque "Caliban: By the Yellow Sands" (Doubleday-Page), written by Percy MacKaye of the tercentenary, is now available. The more elaborate illustrations are by Urban and the smaller ones by Jones. There will be two editions, one in cloth and one in paper, so that no one Calibanishly inclined need go unmasqued. Caliban is to be presented in the stadium at the College of the City of New York, which is being (the stadium, not the college) remodeled for the purpose.

Tired, Aching Feet and Limbs are promptly relieved by applying Absorbine, Jr., the antiseptic liniment. It is soothing, healing, and invigorating—puts vim and energy into jaded muscles. One of the many enthusiastic users writes: "I received the trial bottle of Absorbine, Jr., all right and at that time was unable to walk without a cane, just around the house. I used it freely and inside of two days could walk without limping, something I had not done in two months. I went to the drug store and procured a $1.00 bottle and today can walk as good as ever. I'll never be without it. I am recommending it to everyone I can, for I am a living witness."

Absorbine, Jr., should always be kept at hand for emergencies.

At druggists, $1.00 and $2.00 a bottle, or sent postpaid. Liberal trial bottle for 10c in stamps.

An Anti-Carbon Oil at Last!

All Viscomotor Oil has to stand a laboratory test of 460 degrees without burning. If it burns too soon, the oil from which the sample was taken is rejected.

Your Margin of Safety

This means that Viscomotor Oil withstands a terrific heat in your motor cylinder without carbonizing—about 45 degrees more heat than the average oil can endure. Many oils completely burn at a temperature where Viscomotor only begins to carbonize, and they begin to carbonize at about 15 degrees above the normal temperature of your motor at moderate speed. High speed wipes out their margin of safety, and trouble begins. But the margin of safety in Viscomotor Oil is 45 degrees greater—enough to take care of greatly increased speed.

VISCOMOTOR

The Anti-Carbon Oil

Tested By Experts

Viscomotor Oil is tested by experts—specialists who have been solving lubrication problems for years. We have been making nothing but lubricating oils for a quarter of a century. Our engineers are national authorities. Their skill and science reach a climax in Viscomotor. Why be satisfied with low-grade oils that run off, evaporate, burn at low temperatures, when Viscomotor gives the benefit of their knowledge? They have ended lubrication troubles of thousands. Let them end yours.

War Map of Mexico

IN COLORS!

The Tribune next Sunday will publish in colors a war map of Mexico, showing the difficulties to be met by the American army. The map gives in detail the topography, geography, industries and other essential and strategical points as applied particularly to warfare.

Upon this war map of Mexico in colors the reader will find designated the forts, fortifications and fortified towns, volcanoes, extinct volcanoes, mountain passes, rivers, springs, deserts, swamps, marshes, plains, railroads, mines and other data signifying the conditions of the country.

This war map of Mexico in colors comprehends not only the territory covered by the Pershing expedition but the entire area of the country. The map, therefore, should be preserved for reference in case the present trouble develops into a general invasion.

Mexico's natural barriers to invasion are deserts to the north and mountains on the east and northwest. The battlefields of the last Mexican war of 1846-1847 were Monterey and Buena Vista, in the mountain barrier of the Sierra Madre, where Gen. Taylor won the decisive battles. The barrier also counted in Scott's march from Vera Cruz to Mexico City, the Cerro Gordo pass being the scene of Scott's main victory.

Pershing's drive after Villa was first over a desert thirty miles wide to the Sierra Madre foothills, then to the Sierra Madre proper, mountains 8,000 to 10,000 feet high, the most barren and desolate in the world. There are no roads, and the lack of food, water and fodder made it necessary to establish communication with the American border, over which motor trucks and wagon trains could carry supplies.

All features of military importance are indicated. Follow the Mexican campaign intelligently by studying the

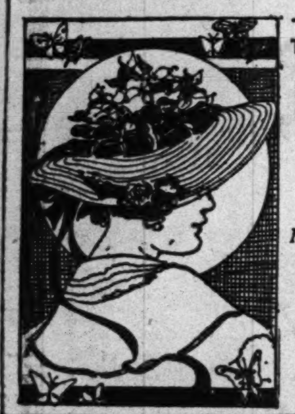
Handsome New Spring Millinery

Second Floor—State Street



This great millinery store is enriched with copies of the most charming hats from the leading modistes of Paris. The styles are varied and delightful, so that every woman looking forward to the spring season will be indeed charmed. Here's a beautiful group, made of Milan hemp, lisere and fancy straws, trimmed in probably more styles than you'd really believe, with flowers, ribbons, fancy wings, etc.; worth to $9.00, special for Monday at...... 4.95

Milan hemp dress shapes, the bold dashing sailors, demure poke bonnets and the saucy little turbans, black and a riot of light and dark spring colors, many just a little different from those previously shown; well worth $1.50, tomorrow at... 73c

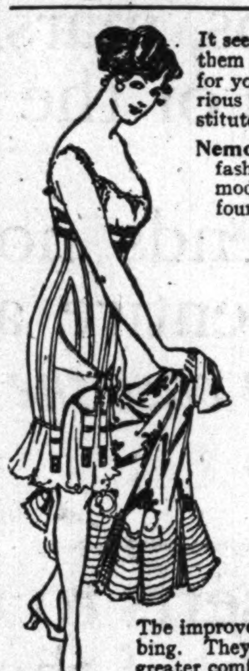
Hats Trimmed Free

Are You Actually Aware of the Real Importance of a Properly Fitted Corset?

Third Floor—Center



It seems as if the majority of women do not realize that a corset can be of immense help to them in health, comfort and appearance—the corset that is properly fitted can work wonders for you, especially so if it is a Nemo corset, for they all embody special features helpful to various types of figures. Our expert corsetieres, all graduates of the Nemo Hygienic Fashion Institute, will fit them correctly—for this fitting service no extra charge is made.

Nemo corsets, above all others, are designed with such care that they embody all the fashionable lines while retaining their matchless hygienic features, made in such a variety of models that every figure is provided for, most of them having some patented feature not found in other corsets.

How many women know that the Nemo "Nip-in" waist does not press, but gives more room than before, where room is needed, because of the shaping at the side? Still it produces a smaller sized waist effect. Why not let our corsetieres study your figure and fit it correctly with exactly the Nemo corset it should have?

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." A Nemo corset, fitted as it should be, will correct the sagging of the abdominal organs, and, if worn, in time will prevent ptosis, which physicians will tell you frequently results in serious digestive disturbances, and which, if not corrected, leads at length to diseases. Can you afford, when such benefits are possible, to select your corset in a careless manner? We are willing and anxious to help you, for we realize that many women have but to learn how our service aids them, to appreciate it. Three popular styles of Nemo corsets for full figures at $4, including

No. 402—Nemo corset for the stout short figure, small or flat bust, excess flesh on abdomen rather than on hips......
No. 403—Nemo corset for the figure of medium height, with full bust, large hips and abdomen......
No. 405—Nemo corset for the tall figure, full bust, large hips and abdomen.

Choice $4

The improved relief bands on these models are now composed largely of semi-elastic Lastikops webbing. They simply gather up a large "spready" abdomen, support, reshape and reduce it, with greater comfort to the wearer than ever before, and bring wonderful figure improvements.

Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets in Complete Variety at $3 to $10

Prof. Laughlin Ends Long Career With University.

> Chicago has given generously to foreign sufferers during the past winter—and the appeals to our charity from foreign countries are ever growing. Do not let us forget our people—the sufferers at home. Read the following appeal from the United Charities:
>
> "Your townspeople are suffering; 5,000 families need your help. The United Charities will use your contribution to meet distress right now. Help supply food, fuel, medicine. Help provide prompt service to restore many of these poor folk to self-support. Send money today to David R. Forgan, treasurer, 168 North Michigan avenue."

By Mme. X.

The first thunder in March
Eels leap in the pool.

CHICAGO eels leaped in Chicago pools last Tuesday evening at 9:46. Officially, spring began that day. But spring is like barking dogs. You may know it's spring and I may know it's spring, but—etc.

A sign of the season's birth was the spring convocation on Tuesday afternoon at the Chicago university in Mandel hall. It was an impressive spectacle, one full of color and dignity. The chancellor wore crimson robes and a feathered black hat. Prof. William Hale also wore a crimson gown. Different colored hoods adorned the robes of others of the faculty to indicate their alma maters. The professors sported gold tassels on their mortar boards, the graduates red ones, and the undergraduates black ones.

The mortar board is, by the way, a most becoming form of headgear; second cousin once removed of the German Uhlan's war bonnet.

Miss Amita Jewett, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jewett, was among the graduates, having earned and acquired the degree of doctor of philosophy. Among her relatives and friends present at the ceremony were Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick and the Edward Blairs.

Retires After Long Service.

The chief address of the day was delivered by Prof. J. Lawrence Laughlin, who spoke on "Economic Liberty." It was his valedictory, as he is now retiring after twenty-five years' connection with the university. His going means a great loss to Chicago as well as to the university. Besides being a delightful man, he is the foremost authority in this country on his subject, political economy, and has an international reputation. Many years ago he was invited by the government of the island of Santo Domingo to make for it a new and modern currency system, which he did to the entire satisfaction of the Santo Domingoans.

He and his wife, who is a sister of Frank and E. W. Cramer, and well known here, will make their home in a quaint old New England farmhouse in the New Hampshire hills, near Joffrey, a house they bought and fitted over a few years ago. Their son is at school in Concord, Mass., and it seems probable that Chicago has permanently lost an interesting couple, whose going leaves us the poorer in that element of intellectual cultivation without which a society is apt to become crass and materialistic.

Colony of Newlyweds.

Smart looking the houses are going to be that David Adler is putting up in Lake View avenue for Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Harry Dangler, Ambrose Cramer Jr., and Abram Poole. The black brick, pointed with white, the light stone first story and trimmings, and the nile green shutters will make a dashing color effect, especially when the balconies which will adorn each house, are trimmed with flower boxes.

It will be quite a colony of newly weds, as the Danglers expect to return from their honeymoon in California by the time their house is ready for occupancy, while the marriage of Miss Grace Meeker to Ambrose Cramer Jr. on April 12 will establish that young menage in the Georgian block. It is possible that David Adler, whose marriage to Miss Katherine Keith is to be celebrated in June, may build either in that group of domiciles or in the immediate neighborhood.

That leaves George Porter and Abram Poole the sole surviving bachelors of the five who only last winter planned with Mrs. Arthur Ryerson and her family to found the little colony overlooking the lake, with the green lawns of Lincoln park in the nearer foreground.

A recently announced engagement in the east is of interest to many Chicagoans. It is that of Miss Mabel Kennedy, daughter of Mrs. Robert W. Kennedy, to Jerome Orrell Eddy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Eddy of Chicago. Miss Kennedy is a niece of the Rev. Charles A. Lippincott of South Bend, Ind., former pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Chicago.

Collector of Futurist Pictures.

The Arthur Eddys have lived many years in Buena Park and have in their home on the corner of Sheridan road and Buena Park avenue what is probably the finest, most up to date collection of ultra modern pictures, containing various noted examples of the cubist, post-impressionist, and futurist schools of painting.

Mr. Eddy has rejoiced in several hobbies, each one of which he has ridden with the skill and finesse of a true connoisseur. He has long been known as a collector of rare and exquisite wines. First editions and unusual books, too, have been a fad of his. He was one of the first bicyclists here and an enthusiast on the wheel. It was a natural transition from that to automobiling. He was almost the initiator in motoring, running his own car at a time when every one turned to look at an automobile, so new and strange were such vehicles.

Then he began collecting pictures, and was widely known as a patron of recognized artists. He wrote "Beauty, the Soul of Art" [or was it "Art, the Soul of Beauty"?]. It wasn't until a few years ago that he developed into a pioneer, forsook the beaten path of the conventional, and accepted and became the prophet of the new and adventurous painters, among whom are numbered Picasso, Van Goch, Marks, et al.

Fisherman and Fencer.

But his hobbies are not only esthetic ones. In the field of sports he has a fine zeal and great success. As a fisherman he achieved no little renown in southern California, where he angled for finny denizens of the deep off the Catalina islands, while more recently as a fencer he has been winning even more noteworthy laurels.

Which is fencing, an art or a sport? Whichever it is, it is a distinctly chic and distinguished accomplishment. It is a pity that it is not more popular in this country. It develops so much grace and agility, as well as being one of the best means of keeping down the flesh and ministering generally to good health.

At a recent fencing match in New York, at the New York Athletic club, there was an interesting test of its qualities as a sport for the no longer young. A team of men over 55 years of age tilted with a team of fencers under 25 and won by a score of 6 bouts to 4.

Mr. Eddy, who was one of the 55 year olders, met and worsted—outpointed is the technical term—the national three weapon champion, Steddiford Pitt, 5 to 2. It was a great achievement and justified the swordsmen's claim that fencing is as good exercise for men no longer young as is golf, that mainstay of the timorous elderly.

Jerome Eddy does not as yet follow in his father's footsteps, except that he brings to his business career all the enthusiasm and intensity of purpose that animate the latter in his devotion to hobbies. Young Eddy has worked up from the very bottom of the ladder in the American Steel Foundries company, learning one department after another, a fine experience, though a severe test.

Mrs. Arthur Eddy has been spending most of the winter in Baltimore on account of her health.

Appeal for Soldiers' Orphans.

Many foreigners have come to us since the beginning of this war, each with a tale of woe and want, and this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Orchestra hall those two gifted young Englishwomen, the Misses Schofield and Fell, who were here some time ago, are again presenting the case of the fatherless children of France.

It is on the face of it an appealing story. Without outside aid the children of the men who fall in the trenches cannot be so reared as to make a new France not unworthy of the France now fighting for life. If nothing else be achieved—and much else will be accomplished—the money will be well spent in drawing us as a nation in closer touch with the other great republic.

At the university where these two young women spoke last Monday afternoon for the fatherless children of France, $5,000 was raised almost immediately. They have been making addresses all over the country, from Boston to San Francisco, and have raised over $100,000.

Meanwhile, from Holland comes Miss Hendrika Van Der Flier, daughter of the late court chaplain at The Hague, to ask our aid for the 1,235,000 Belgian children now being sheltered and cared for in Holland. She brings letters from our former fellow citizen, Miss Julia Lathrop of New York. Miss Van Der Flier will speak on her topic at Mrs. William Monroe's next Friday evening.

Mrs. James Keeley gave a tea for Miss Van Der Flier on Friday afternoon, when there was much interest in the young Dutch woman, with the wholesome, cheerful countenance and the sweet voice. She said that worse than the sound of the firing which came to the nearby Holland communities was the ceaseless tap, tap, tap of the refugees' feet as, in vast, dreary, tragic hordes they drifted through the Dutch towns. Day and night the sound went on. Villages of 8,000 inhabitants grew in two or three days to number 28,000. It was a problem to tax the resources of even thrifty Holland.

To Tell of Clearing House.

Still a third advocate of foreign benevolent enterprise is Herbert Ward, who, with his wife, is coming here soon to speak Thursday evening, April 13, at the residence of Mrs. R. T. Crane, on the work of the American clearing house in Paris, a most excellent enterprise started by Myron T. Herrick at the beginning of the war. It is through this office that most of the vast shipments of hospital and other supplies which have been flowing to France in a steady and increasing flood are distributed to their ultimate goals.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward are intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, with whom they will stay during their sojourn here.

Mr. Ward is a many sided man. He was with Henry M. Stanley on the expedition the latter organized to rescue Emin Pasha (who didn't want to be rescued). Previous to this experience Mr. Ward had traveled extensively in the east, been three times around the world, and had seen several years' service in the Congo. After his marriage to his American wife he settled down in Paris and devoted himself to sculpture, in which he has made a great name.

At the outbreak of the war he offered himself for service in an ambulance corps, while both his sons enlisted in the English army. The elder was killed and the younger, a lad of 17, who joined a British aviation corps, is now a war prisoner in Germany. Mr. Ward himself was severely wounded and was decorated with the "Croix de Guerre," as well as being mentioned in dispatches.

He is said to be a delightful, as well as a brave, man, and in the great chorus of appeals from the other side it is well to have a good, strong male voice in the largely feminine strains that bear the burden of the song.

Preparing for the Submarines.

There are many ways of meeting danger, but none where a more matter of fact philosophy inspired a course of conduct than in the case of an American woman who, with her husband, was traveling on a ship in the submarine infested waters off France.

As is the custom in this war zone, all the ship's lights were darkened, no one was permitted so much as to strike a match on deck to light a cigaret. Ports were closed, as were all deck doors, so that in the interior of the ship the air soon became stiflingly close. The husband of the woman in question on going to their cabin found her putting on all her best clothes, woven silk underwear, French lingerie, newest Paris gown, smartest hat, jewels, gloves, and so forth.

"What in the world are you doing?" he inquired.

"If I'm going to be torpedoed and sunk and washed up on that French coast I'm going to be picked up dressed to perfection," she replied, coldly. "My clothes will be spoiled anyway, and might as well be spoiled on me as in the trunk."

Plans Great National Festa.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers has long been noted for putting through brilliantly and effectively whatever she undertakes, and now is planning for the benefit of her favorite charity, the country home for convalescent crippled children, a big entertainment at the Auditorium on May 9.

This will be a sort of great national festa when will be sung the war songs of America, those of the civil war and the Spanish war. The hall will be hung with flags. The Illinois National guard will be there in full uniform (if they're not headed for Mexico by that time). There will be, it is hoped, a detachment of those smart, snappy marines from the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

Miss Margaret Billings and Miss Isabel Robbins have undertaken to get up some dances in costume of the decade between 1855 and 1865, when the schottische, polka, and quadrilles were the favorite dances. There will be many other features on the program and Mrs. Chalmers has already sold twenty-three of the fifty-seven boxes that rim the Auditorium.

Borden Going to Alaska.

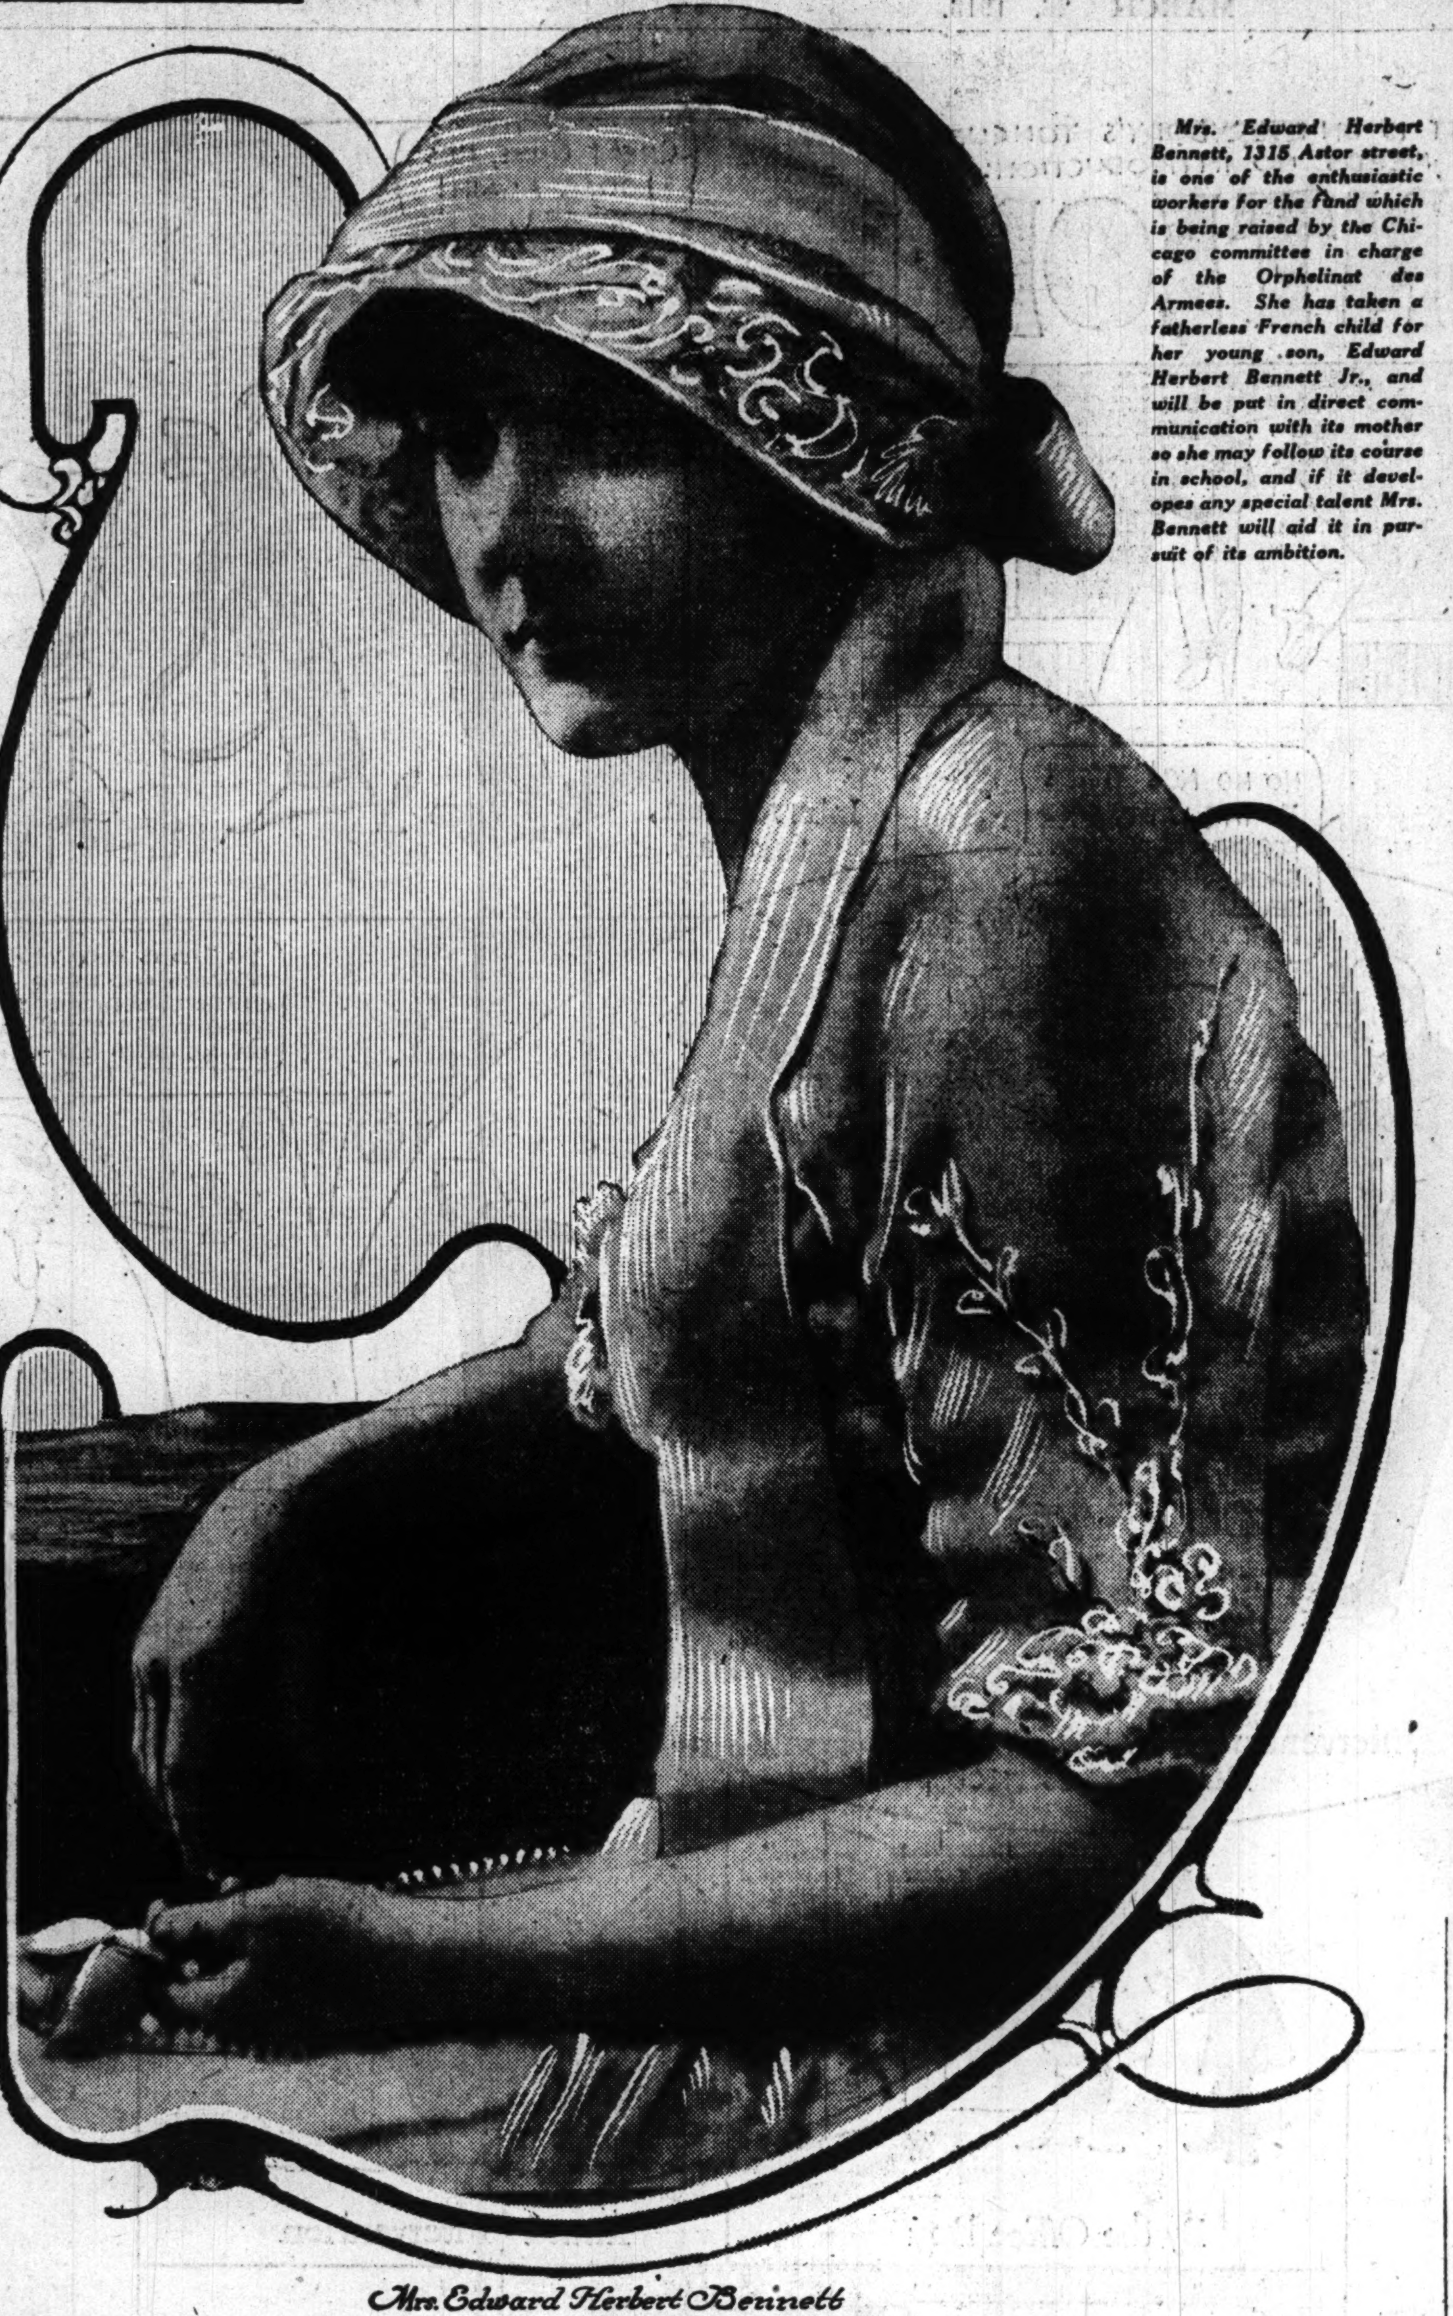
The John Bordens went east on Wednesday preliminary to making a two months' tour of the Pacific coast. Mr. Borden has shipped his roadster to Southern California, where, probably at San Diego, he and Mrs. Borden will embark in it for a coastwise trip up to Seattle, taking in all the places of interest on the way.

At Seattle Mr. Borden is having built the ship in which he is planning to embark on a fur hunting arctic trip, for he is going into the pelt business. The ship is to be constructed especially for this work. Its name is the Polar Bear, and at the end of their motor trip young and charming Mrs. Borden will bid her adventurous husband Godspeed and good luck. Already his friends are asking him to bring them home the softest and rarest of the products of these chill polar regions.

"We'll rally 'round the flag, girls, we'll rally 'round the flag" is the song of the women in that unique conglomeration of swelldom and toughdom, the Twenty-first ward, as they are starting into a rush campaign to—well, I don't know whether it is to elect Earl Walker or to defeat Dorsey Crowe. Tomorrow afternoon, under Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's vigorous leadership, there will be a ward massmeeting at the Plaza hotel in North Clark street, where speeches will be made by Mrs. Fairbank herself, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. James W. Morrisson, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Miss Susete Ryerson, and the Republican aldermanic candidate in that ward, Earl Walker. Here's where Mr. Nelson's famous north side public speaking class has its first skirmish, as three of the afternoon's orators, Mrs. Ryerson, Mrs. Baur, and Miss Ryerson, are from this class.

The Twenty-first ward women are beginning to follow his honor, the mayor's advice, and going in for some constructive work—which may entail, however, some destructive work. But it's "rally 'round the flag, girls," and show the men what the ballot means to us.

She Will Raise a French Child Whose Father Has Been Killed in War.



Mrs. Edward Herbert Bennett, 1315 Astor street, is one of the enthusiastic workers for the fund which is being raised by the Chicago committee in charge of the Orphelinat des Armees. She has taken a fatherless French child for her young son, Edward Herbert Bennett Jr., and will be put in direct communication with its mother so she may follow its course in school, and if it developes any special talent Mrs. Bennett will aid it in pursuit of its ambition.

WEDDINGS.

The wedding of Mrs. Alice Stearns of the Lakota hotel and Charles H. Foster took place on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at 3726 Sheridan road. The Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, officiated. After May 1 they will be at home at 3726 Sheridan road.

Miss Edna Anna Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Wheeler, 6051 Dorchester avenue, was married to Guy Warren Ballard last Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at St. Paul's Episcopal church, the Rev. George Thomas officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Ballard will be at home after April 3 at 6730 Ridgeland avenue.

On April 25 Miss Henrietta Mae Magie and Chester Alan Wardwell will be married at 8:30 p. m. in Christ church, Winnetka. Subsequently there will be a reception in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ogden Magie. Mr. Wardwell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Otis Wardwell of Haverhill, Mass. His brother, Sheldon Wardwell, will serve as best man. Three brothers of the bride—Frank Ogden Magie Jr., John Quick Magie, and little William Ashley Magie II.—will attend Mr. Wardwell. The first two named will act as ushers, in company with Warren Scribner and Dudley Ranney of Boston, and the third as a page. Miss Dorothy Jane Magie, the bride's sister, will be maid of honor.

Announcements have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Tyng Cowell of the wedding of their daughter, Natalie Ringwalt, and William Sumner Smith last Tuesday in Washington, D. C. At home cards have been issued for 1248 East Forty-sixth street, Chicago, after May 1.

Miss Mildred Armour, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Cochrane Armour of Evanston, was married on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock to Chester Ericson, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto C. Ericson of Evanston, at the bride's residence, 1608 Ridge avenue. Following the ceremony there was a reception attended by a large number of friends. Mrs. Seymour Morris Jr., formerly Miss Margaret Armour, was her sister's matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Thoman of Evanston and Miss Catherine Bergin of Nanticoke, Pa. The service was read by the Rev. David Hugh Jones of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston, assisted by the Rev. J. G. K. McClure, president of McCormick Theological seminary. Melvin B. Ericson was his brother's best man and the ushers were Seymour Morris Jr., Russell Walcott, Edward Ball, Howard Stone, John McWilliams, and Donald Armour, all of Evanston. Mr. and Mrs. Ericson will live in Evanston.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Rose Tuberville Griffiths and Earle K. Raford of Kansas City, Mo., which will take place on the evening of Saturday, April 8, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Griffiths, 1518 Judson avenue, Evanston. The ceremony at 8:30 o'clock will be read by the Rev. William T. McElveen, pastor of the Evanston Congregational church. Miss Hattie Lee Barton of Kansas City will serve as maid of honor for Miss Griffiths and Mrs. Paul L. Griffiths will be matron of honor. Miss Mary Jane Barton will be flower girl and Hughes Rector Barton ring bearer. Joseph C. Griffiths, brother of the bride, will act as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. William Meyer of 5304 Woodlawn avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Virginia, to Henry Howard Sessions, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Sessions of 1415 East Fifty-fourth place.

The date of the wedding of Miss Grace Meeker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker of 3030 Lake Shore drive, and Ambrose C. Cramer of Lake Forest has been changed from May 6 to Wednesday, April 12. The wedding will be a small home ceremony at 4 o'clock, with the members of the two families and a few intimate friends the only guests.

Mrs. Norman Tupper of 120 North Keeler avenue announces the marriage of her niece, Miss Marjory Watson, to William H. Garten on Monday evening. The Rev. Alfred Grey performed the ceremony. Miss Arrilla Tupper served her sister as maid of honor. Mr. and Mrs. Garten will be at home after April 1 at 120 North Keeler avenue.

Rabbi and Mrs. Louis Kuppin of 411 East Forty-sixth street, formerly of Quincy, Ill., announce the marriage of their daughter, Cecelia Landy, to Lee Elliott. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father at the Blackstone hotel on Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. After April 15 Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will be at home at 411 East Forty-sixth street.

Mr. and Mrs. David L. Goodwillie of 228 Forest avenue, Oak Park, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Mary Cecelia, to James Foster Townsend of Proctor, Vt. The wedding will be solemnized on Saturday, April 8, at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Mrs. F. H. Gansbergen of 2238 Lincoln Park, West, announces the engagement of her daughter, Gladys, to Bruce B. Paddock. The wedding will take place early in June.

Devoted to the HEALTH, COMFORT and BEAUTY of WOMEN

A good friend has set us to thinking. She said:

"Your Wonderlift ads remind me of patent medicines."

Which means that our ads have given her the idea that the Wonderlift is a sick woman's corset.

Probably that's our fault—we may have said too much about the marvelous health features when, in reality, the Wonderlift is quite as remarkable as a style corset.

Here's the fact:

The very features that make Nemo Wonderlift Corsets so healthful also mould the figure into perfect fashion-lines.

For instance:

1. The Wonderlift Bandlet promotes health by giving perfect physical support. It also prevents the corset from riding up and twisting, thus preserving smooth, fashionable lines.

2. It reshapes and reduces a too-full figure, and builds up and rounds out a too-slim figure. In other words, it corrects unattractive figure-defects; [illegible]

3. The Nemo "bridge" ensures freedom from pressure over the pelvic region, promotes free breathing and good digestion, i. e., HEALTH. It also induces an erect, graceful, fashionable pose, without which no real STYLE is possible.

EMPHATICALLY the Nemo Wonderlift IS a STYLE Corset of the highest class, and it is MADE SO by its wonderful HYGIENIC FEATURES.

There's one Wonderlift model for very slim figures with short light bones and concave abdomen—No. 557, at $5.00.

And for the biggest women, with rolls of flesh all over—No. 998, at $10.00. This is the only corset of its kind ever made.

There are other models not shown here:

554—[illegible]
555—[illegible]
556—[illegible]
1000—[illegible]

We confidently repeat this prediction:

In due time, nearly every woman who wears a corset will wear a Nemo Wonderlift.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Vanderbilts Go South and Hurry Right Home Again

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—People are saying to one another, "Why are Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt like the king of France?" The answer is: "Because they marched to Aiken and marched right back again."

The analogy between them and the king is not, to my mind, conspicuous. He marched up a hill and marched right down again. They went down to Aiken and hurried right up to New York again. If you want to take poetical license you can of course say they marched—you might even say that they executed a forced march, but it was by special train which they had "sped up" to its capacity.

The facts are that they arrived at Aiken at about 8 in the morning and they left for home at 7 that same night.

People, of course, began to cast about for the reason. They rather count on Mrs. Vanderbilt not to take whims. But that is a large confidence to place in the rich and great. The most reliable of the set are subject to them. Friends suggested that Mrs. Vanderbilt's daughter, Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, was taken suddenly sick. Inquiry was made in New York, however, and this was found to be untrue. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt said they had only meant to stay a day when they came, and this gives every indication of being true.

It leaves one only to marvel at what the rich and idle do for pleasure. Any mere reporter would regard it as a hardship to make such a railroad journey in that period of time. By an amusing irony, a magazine editor earlier in the winter wished me to go down to Aiken to see this very Mrs. Vanderbilt. I, who seldom make any stipulations, said that I could not make the trip unless I might remain there for a day or two to rest.

Of course, they may not have been on a pleasure trip at all, but on a serious errand. Still, I would not give much for money if it could not relieve me of such hard work as that.

Two nights after their return Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt went to the performance of Lou Tellegen. Mrs. Vanderbilt wished to see the man that Geraldine Farrar married. She was dreadfully disappointed not to get there on Monday night when Miss Farrar, who is one of her favorites, left the box she was occupying to go on the stage and kiss her husband.

Cruising in Southern Waters.

The steam yacht Whileaway, with its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, put in at Havana the other day. As I mentioned before, there is a large party on board. They reached the Cuban city while Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor and party from their yacht Noma were looking the town over. According to advices by letter, which have been creeping into the town from the various participants, a "large time was had."

Miss Irene Langhorne Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, has set April 27 as the date of her marriage to George E. Post Jr. It is going to take place in St. Bartholomew's church and will be an elaborate and beautiful occasion.

Miss Elsie de Wolfe and Miss Anne Morgan have gone to White Sulphur Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, who have been spending the winter in Santa Barbara, Cal., are returning to New York. If only they could hear what our janitor has to say about our present visitation of weather, I think they would have delayed their passage. He was remarking that New York was no fit place for a self-respecting person to live in at present, and I think he is right. Wallace Irwin, who with his bride lives right across the street from me, is even now struggling to guide her through a snow drift in the face of hard, driving particles of blinding snow.

Mrs. French Vanderbilt, who with the most amiable attitude toward the city came here on a little pleasure trip, returned to Newport, preferring the climate of a summer resort to an early spring day in New York.

Mrs. Biddle Model Saleswoman.

Women are having a great time these days scaring up money. A lot of society favorites last week went to clerk in Gimbel's. I happened into the store to buy a waist and was waited on by no less a dignitary than Mrs. Nicholas Biddle. I might add that I have never been so fully and completely waited on before. It would pay the stores, I should say, to employ the women at their own price.

She showed me everything on hand, tried everything on me that I could get into, mentioned prices unasked (I was ashamed to inquire about anything so commercial as money on what seemed to be such a purely social occasion), and told freely just what she thought looked nicest on me. Of course I bought! Thereupon she collected for me my scattered belongings, consisting of one fur coat, one muff, one purse, one umbrella, three packages, and a TRIBUNE letter, and she rang the elevator bell for me!

I am not used to such attentions from clerks, and it put me frightfully ill at ease.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Capital Has Much Lenten Fun in the Name of Charity.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]— Washington is having rather more than the usual assortment of Lenten fun in the name of charity, and a whole lot more that scorns any such excuse. The charity fete figures rather conspicuously in the activities of the last week.

The St. Joseph day celebration at the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor on Monday, a skating carnival for Neighborhood House on Tuesday, the beginning of a series of lectures by S. Richard Fuller, for which Mrs. Dimock has loaned her house, and which are to be for the benefit of the women of France whom the war has made homeless, and the ball for the benefit of the sick and wounded soldiers of Russia, had their place on many of the smart date books.

That St. Joseph day celebration is always an appealing little function. Society women who are interested in the Little Sisters and their old people on that day cook and serve a great spread for them.

It is said that in the nearly twenty years that she has been in Washington never a St. Joseph's day that Mme. Jusserand has not donned an apron and served at that dinner. Mme. De Riano, Miss Jane Riggs, Mrs. James F. Barbour, Mrs. John Dwight, and the Misses Patten are some of the well known women who share Mme. Jusserand's tasks.

After the dinner there is a distribution of tobacco and candy, and so far as possible the day is made a red letter event to the poor old souls for whom the Sisters care.

Carnival Helps a Charity.

The skating and dancing carnival was a decidedly, not to say noisily, frivolous affair, in which most of the younger set were actively interested, many of their mothers figuring passively as patronesses.

Being a patroness, by the way, is rather a passive matter in Washington. It means, as a rule, nothing more serious than lending the light of one's countenance or the use of one's name. There are no penalties of patronage, in the shape of an obligation to dispose of a stated number of tickets.

It was a costume party, in which many of the costumes worn at private fancy dress affairs during the winter and at the Beaux Arts ball made their appearance again. Fun was fast and furious, and when the returns are in Neighborhood House should be considerably better off for the evening.

The Russian ball, planned originally for the Playhouse, was transferred to Rauscher's, after a promise to appear had been received from some of the artists of the Ballet Russe, and it was realized that the Playhouse would be a bit small for their performance and for the audience it was likely to bring out.

The affair was under the patronage of a most distinguished group of social leaders, including among others Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. Blaine Beale, and Mrs. Perry Belmont, with Mme. Bakhmeteff, of course, as prime mover.

It was not a fancy dress affair, but the women who came were asked—not required, but requested—to wear the Russian headdress, the "kahoshnik." As there are not a great many of these articles of attire included in the wardrobes of Washington women, the request did not meet with any very general response.

The ball was preceded by a card party and tea, during which part of the Marine band played. In the evening a local orchestra took up the task of supplying the music.

Dinners Precede Musical.

The third of the White House musicales came along on Tuesday night, with no startling feature to distinguish it from the others. The musicians were John Powell, pianist, and Vernon Stiles, tenor. Mr. Powell is a Richmond boy and the son of one of Mrs. Wilson's old teachers, and it was her desire to help him along, "for auld lang syne," which prompted her to give him this opportunity.

The musicales are developing into convenient places to take one's guests after a dinner, and one suspects some Washington hostesses of thriftily planning a series of Tuesday dinners as soon as it was known that Tuesday was the night selected for the White House musicals.

The counselor of the state department and Mrs. Frank Polk entertained at dinner that night in honor of Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia orchestra (which had given the last of its season's concerts at the National during the afternoon) and Mme. Stokowski, their house guests for the night. Quite naturally they brought their dinner party to the White House musical, and the president and Mrs. Wilson, who had occupied a box during the afternoon had an opportunity to tell Mr. Stokowski what they thought of him. Miss Wilson met the musician most enthusiastically and told him how he had "almost made her cry."

But the Polks gave a dinner on Tuesday, the 14th, and brought their guests to the White House musical; and, if memory serves, they gave one on March 7 and brought their guests to the White House musical. One is minded of John Gilpin, a citizen of credit and renown, "and though on pleasure he was bent, he had a frugal mind." Perhaps it is accident, but anyhow it's a coincidence.

Then there were Mr. and Mrs. St. George Tucker, who gave a dinner on Tuesday night in honor of Secretary of War Newton Baker, and had Secretary and Mrs. Daniels among their guests; they turned up later, and late of course, at the White House musical. And there were the Japanese ambassador and Viscountess Chinda (with them it was certainly not design, however), who had a dinner in honor of the vice president and Mrs. Marshall, and turned up later—and late—at the White House musical.

Diplomats Make Summer Plans.

The cabinet is not yet announcing any summer plans. Some of the diplomats are taking time by the forelock. The Bakhmeteffs will be at Newport again, having leased Stone villa once more. The Rianos also go to Newport, having taken the De Rham villa.

The Germans of course can't go where the Russians are, though Count von Bernstorff has a decided penchant for Newport. In view of Uncle Sam's taking over the wireless station there, Sayville may not seem as desirable for the German summer embassy as it did last season. Count von Bernstorff has announced no plane, but Prince von Hatzfeldt, counselor of the embassy, has taken three houses at Rye, one for himself, one for twelve secretaries as residential quarters, both of these—and one to serve as offices. Presumably that will be the headquarters of the German embassy, even if Von Bernstorff himself does not figure in the transaction.

It is a curious situation in Washington just now, when not only congressionals must be regarded as an uncertain proposition socially, but army folk cannot be counted upon. Washington is quite accustomed to finding a parliamentary situation encroaching on its dinner parties and other hospitalities. Even a White House party has on occasion been seriously interfered with when more members of the senate or house had taken their congé than could well be spared from some important discussion, or perhaps even a vote, and the sergeant-at-arms has sent out to round up the absentees. Nor have senatorial or congressional hosts been exempt when that call came. The old time dinner goer in Washington is full of anecdotes of dinners interrupted, threatened, spoiled, or even benefited by a legislative contretemps.

But army officers have been considered entirely reliable either as hosts or guests until just recently the Mexican "situation" has confronted society to its confusion and undoing. Engagements of weeks' standing have been broken during the last two weeks by army men whose marching orders have come, and others who remain under orders to be ready for departure at any time are not making dates or are making them only tentatively.

SUBURBAN CLUBS.

Tomorrow the civics department of the La Grange Woman's club will have annual reports of committees. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year. The music department will meet on Tuesday. A paper on "Western American Music" will be given. The election of officers will close the program.

Mrs. John G. Fetzer of Hinsdale will read "The House of Rimmon," by Van Dyke, on Wednesday, which will be "reciprocity day" at the Downer's Grove Woman's club.

James J. Cleary will speak at the River Forest Woman's club on "The Parting of the Ways Home" on Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

At the regular meeting of the Elmhurst Woman's club tomorrow at Community house, Mrs. Charles B. Hopper will speak on "The Home and the Public Library—a Library for Elmhurst."

On Wednesday the annual meeting of the Nineteenth Century Club of Oak Park will be held at Scoville institute at 10 a. m. The morning session will be given over to the election of officers and the transaction of business, after which the club will adjourn to the First Congregational church for the annual luncheon and afternoon program.

On Tuesday the regular monthly meeting of the George Rogers Clark chapter, D. A. R., will be held at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. George Walker, 250 Forest avenue, Oak Park. The program will be an illustrated lecture on Louisiana, by Thomas J. Casey.

At the meeting of the Woman's Club of Hinsdale on Tuesday morning Mrs. Walter Davidson will speak on "National Amusements of Mexico" and Mrs. D. P. Hueston will review "The White Umbrella." At 2 o'clock Mrs. W. H. Knight will speak on "Dramatic Literature of the Bible," and Mrs. R. M. Gibson will give an interpretative reading.

The next meeting of the Maywood Catholic Woman's club will be held on Tuesday. There will be a paper on "Dickens," by Mrs. W. J. Shanks and humorous sketches by Mrs. Charles Woodward. Mrs. Paul P. Schissing will be hostess.

Never on Sale in Stores

Following our usual custom of being foremost in the production of exclusive and artistic furniture, we have opened a department of decorated "REEDCRAFT." The collection will include pieces in old ivory, Pompeian, Tiffany and bronze. To lovers of art the ensemble will be a revelation.

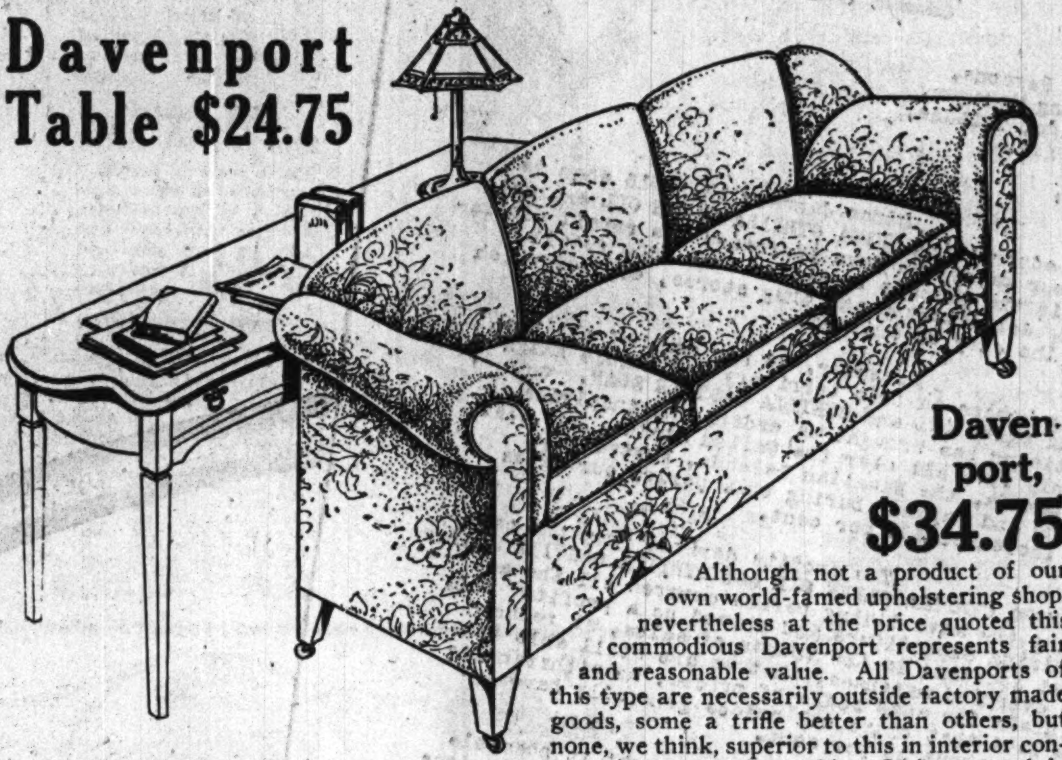
703-721 W. MADISON STREET

This week inaugurates our 49th Annual Spring Sale. On the 30th day of this month just 49 years ago John M. Smyth Co., the largest furniture store in the world, sold the first outfit that was to make the unequaled achievement of ultimately furnishing two million homes. The extensive alterations on our 6th and 7th floors are nearly completed, hence in about two weeks much merchandise must be shifted about. Rather than do this we are offering many articles of Dining Room and Bedroom Furniture at greatly reduced prices. Until June 20th, store open every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evening until 10 o'clock.

Davenport Table $24.75



Davenport, $34.75

Although not a product of our own world-famed upholstering shop, nevertheless at the price quoted this commodious Davenport represents fair and reasonable value. All Davenports of this type are necessarily outside factory made goods, some a trifle better than others, but none, we think, superior to this in interior construction or workmanship. It is covered in genuine Tapestry of a very pleasing figure and the entire length is 82 inches. The seat consists of 3 cushions supported by spiral springs. This Davenport might be worth anywhere from $39.75 to $50.00. Our present stock being somewhat heavy, we are offering them at............ $34.75

ADAMS CHAIR IN TWO SECONDS A BED

The spring is slat fabric, with box spring coil supports, and mattress is extra thick, not a pad. There is a tray underneath the seat for blankets. The chair is 35 inches wide, and when open, bed is 6 ft. 4 inches long.

Truly the most wonderful article of furniture ever created—a masterpiece of American ingenuity.

The price is $36.25 and upwards, depending on the kind of covering. Can be had in artificial leather, such as is used for automobile tops, for the porch, also in tapestries, denims and velours.

The price, remember, includes a slat fabric spring, with box spring coil supports, also a thick felt tufted mattress with Imperial edge, which would total alone $12.00 to $15.00. Such quality has never before been put into convertible furniture.

If you are considering larger or small quarters, the Adams Chair solves that problem, it either adds or saves a room.

It is a smart, comfortable, upholstered Easy Chair, with soft spring edge seat. Quick and easy, "in two seconds a bed," ready for occupancy. The mattress, sheets and pillow are found in position when opened, and not removed when closing. There is not a single adjustment of any kind, such as cross bars, braces, mattress holders, straps, swiveling legs, dangling part, stays, locks, etc. —nothing to fuss or bother with either when opening or when closing. Completely sanitary, as it is all steel; not affected by steam heat; guaranteed not to warp or loosen or get out of order.

The Adams Chair is made for daily comfort and use, and not merely "good enough" for emergency, durable and practical.

Last, but not least, it saves about 21 square feet of room. This figured as rent, an Adams Chair would soon pay for itself.

Buy at once. If you delay your purchase you are paying for an Adams Chair now—in rent equivalent—but not getting it.

Chicago, Ill. March 7, 1916.

Mr. E. W. Parsons,
Advertising Manager,
The Chicago, Tribune,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

Since January 16, 1916 when we started advertising EXTRA CYRILLA OLIVE OIL exclusively in your paper, we have increased the retail distribution in the Chicago territory over 5000 retail grocery, delicatessen and drug stores, 4000 of which are in the city of Chicago.

Moreover, 95 per cent of all the jobbing houses in this territory now handle EXTRA CYRILLA OLIVE OIL and CYRILLA CASTILE SOAP. Our advertising has brought us orders and inquiries, not only from all over the United States, but also from Canada, the Hawaiian Islands, Australia, England and Japan. During this period our sales have increased 600 per cent.

The profits derived from the sale of EXTRA CYRILLA OLIVE OIL and CYRILLA CASTILE SOAP during the advertising period covered all the advertising expenditure and showed us a profit. This great increase in the volume of sales, so reduced our overhead expenses, that we are still able to maintain the same scale of prices, notwithstanding the fact that olive oil prices generally have increased about 15 per cent.

We had never thought it possible that advertising, even with such highly meritorious products as EXTRA CYRILLA OLIVE OIL and CYRILLA CASTILE SOAP could bring such remarkable results and we wish to express our deep appreciation of what THE TRIBUNE has accomplished for us. We wish especially to thank Mr. Merrill, head of your Merchandising Service department, for his invaluable co-operation.

Very truly yours,

THE GARIBALDI COMPANY.

Per L. E. Schoenfeld
Vice President.

What The Tribune Did for Cyrilla Olive Oil

You people who doubt the power of advertising read the letter above. You manufacturers who do not realize the high efficiency of The Tribune's Merchandising Service Department read this letter. Five thousand new dealer customers put on The Garibaldi Company's books and the volume of sales increased 600 per cent—results that usually take many months or even years to accomplish!

Nothing could more plainly or forcefully illustrate the tremendous value of the SERVICE rendered to Tribune advertisers by The Tribune's Merchandising Service Department. Nothing could more strongly illustrate the power of good advertising when displayed in the more than 300,000 copies of The Tribune on week days and the more than 600,000 copies on Sundays.

The Garibaldi Company didn't splurge. They went along on a sane, conservative basis, using no other medium besides The Tribune, and INCREASED THEIR SALES 600 PER CENT. Moreover their products are in a field of keenest competition, and they had enormous obstacles to overcome in getting into so many stores.

When you wish to expand your business on common sense, conservative lines, and with a minimum of expense, get in touch with The Tribune's Merchandising Service Department. "Winning a Great Market on Facts", just off the press, will be sent on request.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Manegold of Milwaukee announce the engagement of their daughter Nora Elizabeth to Albert R. T. Lillie of Chicago.

The engagement is announced of Miss Katharine Le Gendre, daughter of James E. Le Gendre of 5 Audubon place, New Orleans, to Henry B. Keep, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Keep, 1200 Lake Shore drive. Miss Le Gendre is to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of her fiancee's sister, Miss Katharine Keep, to Robert A. Gardner, on Saturday, May 6.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Mrs. Jane Caldwell of the Brewster apartments to Dr. J. E. Weirick of St. Paul. The wedding will take place on Saturday. Dr. Weirick and his bride will be at home after July 1 at the former's suburban residence, Somerset farm, on the Jefferson highway, in St. Paul.

FUTURE EVENTS.

Plans are about complete for the "White Elephant" sale in behalf of the Children's Memorial hospital. Mrs. Fred W. Upham is director of the affair, which will begin on April 5 and continue for a week.

Mrs. William Stanton Monroe, 64 East Elm street, will open her home Thursday afternoon to introduce Miss Hendrica van der Flier, who comes from The Hague to present an appeal in the interest of young children refugees from Belgium into Holland, who have poured in by the thousands. Many of them are separated from their mothers. Miss van der Flier is stopping at the Virginia hotel. Several luncheons and teas are being planned in her honor.

The following is a list of the plays to be given during the two weeks' season of French drama at Central Music hall, 64 East Van Buren street, under the auspices of the Le Cercle Français:

March 27 and 28—"Mon Ami Teddy," with Edgar Becman and Yvonne Garrick.

March 29 and 30—"Mlle. Josette Ma Femme," with Lillian Greuze.

March 31 and April 1—"Le Sacrifice," with Yvonne Garrick.

April 3 and 4—"Arsene Lupin," with Edgar Becman.

April 7 and 8—"Divorcons," with Lillian Greuze.

MATINEES.

Tuesday, March 28—"Petite Peste," with Lillian Greuze.

Wednesday, March 29—"Blanchette," with Claude Benedict.

Thursday, March 30—"Blanchette," with Claude Benedict.

Saturday, April 1—"Le Voyage de M. Perrichon," with Claude Benedict.

Tuesday, April 4—"Arsene Lupin," with Edgar Becman.

Wednesday, April 5—Three one act plays.

Thursday, April 6—"Le Voyage de M. Perrichon," with Mr. Benedict.

Saturday, April 8—"L'Abbe Constantin," with Claude Benedict.

The company is recruited largely from the leading figures in the Comedie Française, who are in this country on account of the war.

The Bandbox Shop is extending its activities and plans to invade Minneapolis this week with an assortment of the newest blouses, suits, sweaters, and hats. A group of prominent young society girls of that city will turn saleswomen for the four days' sale which is to be held in the Woman's club. The proceeds are to go to the French war orphans.

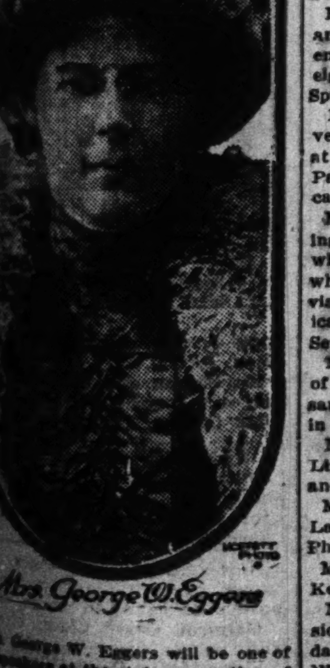
Mrs. William J. Chalmers is planning an entertainment to be held in the Auditorium on May 9 for the benefit of a country home for convalescent crippled children. Associated with Mrs. Chalmers are Mrs. Reuben H. Donnelley, Mrs. Thomas E. Lyon, Mrs. William C. Pullman, Mrs. Norman Williams, Mrs. Hugh McBirney Johnston, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Honoré Palmer, Mrs. John A. Stevenson, Mrs. Frederic C. Bartlett, Mrs. Arthur D. Bevan, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Miss Helen Birch, Miss Edith Blair, Miss Margaret Conover, and Miss Elizabeth McCormick.

Mrs. Robert Redfield of 1714 East Fifty-sixth street will entertain twelve guests at dinner at the Blackstone on Tuesday evening in honor of Havrah (W. L.) Hubbard, who is to give one of his opera interpretations under the auspices of the Cordon at Recital hall, Fine Arts building, at 8 o'clock that evening.

Among the patrons and patronesses of the series of concerts of the American Symphony orchestra beginning today are J. Ogden Armour, Charles G. Dawes, Chauncey Keep, Julius Rosenwald, John G. Shedd, Charles H. Swift, Arthur Bissell, Albert Loeb, Mrs. Joseph Fish, Mrs. Z. P. Brosseau, Mrs. Archibald Freer, Mrs. Lyman Walton, and Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter.

On account of the Mi-Careme dinner to be given at the Casino club tomorrow evening for John T. McCutcheon, the first rehearsal of the Junior League Follies has been postponed to Tuesday evening at 8. The rehearsal will take place in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel. Donald Macdonald, who is to have charge of the program and who will be the official coach, is expected to arrive the last of the week from New York. Mrs. James B. Forgan Jr. is president of the league.

The patronesses of Havrah (W. L.) Hubbard's opera interpretations Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Cordon are: Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley, Mrs. Jacob Custer, Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Mrs. Archibald Freer, Mrs. Erich Gerstenberg, Mrs. John J. Glessner, Mrs. Morton Hull, Mrs. James Keeley, Miss Matilda Klemm, Miss Clara Laughlin, Miss Anna Morgan, Mrs. Robert Redfield, Mrs. Bertha Smith-Titus, Mrs. Bert Leston Taylor, Mrs. Samuel Wright, and Mrs. Fanny Bloomfield-Zeisler. Mrs. Redfield has in her charge a group of young girls who will act as ushers. They are Miss Dorothy Hackett, Miss Dorothy Keeley, Miss Theodora Park, Miss Louise Redfield, and Miss Emily Taft.



Mrs. George W. Eggers

Mrs. George W. Eggers will be one of the speakers at the state convention of the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations which will be held at Cairo, Ill. The convention will take place April 11, 12, and 13. The Cairo Woman's club will be hostess.

The Cordon will have a big Mi-Careme dance Thursday evening. Miss Jennette Pratt, chairman of the ways and means committee, has charge of the dance and is planning all sorts of novel features in connection with it. In order to do away with the bother of getting up fancy costumes Miss Pratt has adapted Pierrot and Pierette hats to Bakst color schemes, and these, with other costume accessories, are to be furnished to the guests to be worn with their evening clothes. The dance will be the largest affair the Cordon has thus far given.

At the Chicago Little theater, commencing Wednesday evening, April 5, there will be presented a group of "four plays of today" by Mrs. Arthur Aldis of Lake Forest. The group is made up of "The Letter," "The Bachelor," "Extreme Unction," and "Temperament." Mrs. Aldis herself will appear in "Extreme Unction" and Mrs. John Root and Leicester Spaulding will take part in "Temperament."

Miss Leonore Ray will entertain at a French musical tea on Saturday afternoon at the Woman's Athletic club in honor of Les Matinées Françaises. A French play will be given and dancing will follow. Receiving with Miss Ray are Mrs. Harry Channon, Mrs. Morris Townley, Mrs. Lawrence McIntyre, Mrs. Erich Gerstenberg, Mrs. Robert Peacock, Mrs. George Ogle, Mrs. Charles Williams, Mrs. Frank M. Streenreuter, Mrs. William Bates Price, Mrs. John S. Kehoe, Mrs. George F. Swift, Mrs. J. D. McGowan, Mrs. John Bangs, Mrs. William S. Brainerd, Mrs. T. C. Elston, Mrs. Herbert Hammond, Mrs. Harry Boon, Miss Mary West, Miss Katherine Dean, Miss Lloyda Smith, Miss Amy Dean, Miss Elizabeth Ewing, Miss Corinne Cowdery, Miss Hazel Candlish, Miss Marjorie Westerlund, Miss Esther Schaaf, and Miss Alice Remien. Year Book Shows Steady Gain for Lutheran Church

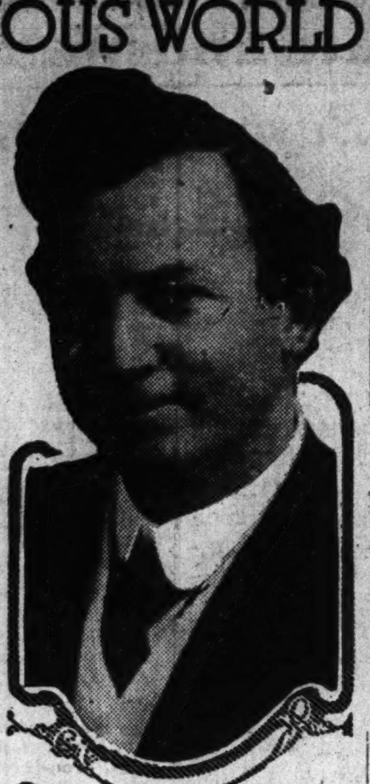
By the Rev. W. B. Norton.



The Rev. Charles K. Carpenter

CHICAGO Lutherans, who are divided into eleven different synods, have united in the publication of a year book which shows the Lutherans are the largest of the Protestant bodies in Chicago and suburbs. The number of baptized members is 134,779 and the number of confirmed members is 88,178. There are 40,000 children under instruction in the parochial and Sunday schools. The number in the young people's societies is 9,000. Young men from Lutheran churches in Chicago and suburbs who are studying for the ministry number 130. The value of the church property is $7,766,475.

The English Lutherans show a specially marked gain. In 1900 there were nine churches. At the beginning of 1916 there are forty-seven churches and six missions. Work, however, is carried on in twelve languages. There are 210 Lutheran churches in Cook county, 153 inside the city limits and 57 outside of the limits. There are fifteen homes or hospices, three educational institutions, three hospitals, and five book stores under Lutheran control.

The synods represented in Chicago and suburbs are: Augustana, Chicago, Danish in America, general, general council, joint synod of Ohio, Missouri, northern Illinois, Norwegian synod in America, United Danish church, United Norwegian synod. The Lutheran Men's league is composed of men from all of the synods and there is also a joint Lutheran ministerial association.

"The Strength of a City" is the subject of the address which President J. Ross Stevenson of Princeton Theological seminary will give at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight. This is Dr. Stevenson's first appearance on the club's program. He is well known in Chicago, however, as a result of eight years' service as a member of the faculty of McCormick Theological seminary, from which he was called in 1902 to the pastorate of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church in New York. Dr. Stevenson is moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly. He is a member of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian association, having special responsibility for the work among students. He has served on various denominational boards, including the boards of foreign missions and education. In the absence of President Clifford W. Barnes of the Sunday Evening club, David R. Forgan, president of the National City bank, will preside. Irving Shuman of the United States subtreasury will be the scripture reader. The organ recital will be given by Edgar A. Nelson. There will be special anthems by the choir of 100. Gustaf Holmquist, the club's bass soloist, who returns after an absence of several weeks on a concert tour, will sing the offertory.

The St. Sebastian Catholic church, Wellington avenue and Blucher street, will be reopened today after having been closed since Dec. 19. On that day a fire occurred just as the parishioners were leaving the church after the 11 o'clock mass. The Rev. John Doody, assistant pastor, discovered the fire and carried out the blessed sacrament. The fire made such rapid progress nothing else could be saved. One of the strange freaks of the fire, regarded as symbolical if not miraculous by many, was the leaving of the gilded cross and the supporting framework intact while the roof crumbled in around it. The opening service will mark the beginning of a mission to be conducted by two Jesuit fathers, the Rev. A. Rosswinkle, S. J., and the Rev. S. Ryan, S. J. The pastor of the church is the Rev. Edmund Byrnes. St. Sebastian's has a modern brick parochial school and priests' house, but the church building which was burned was of frame and was an old edifice. The reconstructed church is built of stucco and has an attractive and substantial appearance.

Next Sunday will be specifically Go-to-Church Sunday in the campaign inaugurated by the Chicago Church federation. Each church is expected to devise plans of its own for increasing the attendance and for stimulating interest in the services which will follow in the churches. On April 3 the different ministerial associations will hold special services for prayer and meditation. The Congregational ministers will meet in the Morgan Park Congregational church. Other associations, as far as announced, will meet in their usual places of meeting.

The Very Rev. H. P. Abbott of Trinity cathedral, Cleveland, O., will be the speaker this week at the Majestic theater, 22 West Monroe street, under the auspices of the Protestant Episcopal church. He will speak every day, including Saturday. The service begins at 12:10 and closes at 12:30. One of the advertising devices used last week in connection with the Lenten services was a "night lentengram," written on paper similar to the kind used by the regular telegraph companies for their night letters, and widely distributed. The lentengram reads: "Arrived today at 12:10 at Majestic theater. Delighted to find a large attendance. Thought I saw you there, but not quite sure. I understand that every member of the attendance committee is bringing one friend each day. Was that your friend at the right?" It was signed by the speaker for the week.

New pipe organs will be dedicated in two Chicago churches today. St. Jerome's Catholic church, Lunt avenue and North Paulina street, will dedicate at 8 o'clock. Hugo Edelman will be organist and director. The Windthorst männerchor and the following soloists will sing: Miss Regina Edelmann and Mrs. H. H. Tevren, soprano; Mrs. R. I. Gavin, alto; Adolph Gill and J. H. Daly, tenors, and Joseph Keller, baritone. The Rev. Thomas Farrell is pastor.

The Rev. Robert R. Bigger of Westminster church, Cleveland, O., has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Sixth Presbyterian church, Thirty-sixth street and Vincennes avenue, and will immediately enter upon his work. The Rev. W. K. Newell resigned as pastor of the Sixth church to become one of the secretaries of the City Missionary society. One of the former pastors of Sixth church was the Rev. William P. Merrill, now pastor of the Brick church, New York.

The Jefferson Park Congregational church, Giddings and London avenues, will also dedicate at 8 o'clock. Soloists will assist. The Rev. Edward S. Guilbert, the pastor, is preaching a series of evening sermons on "Great Poets, Great Authors, Great Orators, and Great Statesmen as Modern Prophets."

The Rev. Charles K. Carpenter is pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Oak Park. He will be one of the speakers tomorow at 10:30 a. m. at the union meeting of the ministers in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Clark and Washington streets. The other two speakers will be the Rev. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Paul Rader, pastor of the Moody church. The subject will be "Evangelism." The meeting is a part of the simultaneous evangelistic campaign now in progress in many churches and in which nearly all churches will join in the closing two weeks of Lent. The Rev. C. K. Carpented held a five weeks' successful evangelistic meeting in his church in Oak Park in January and February. In addition to being a devoted pastor, he is a scientist and a naturalist. He taught science in the University of Michigan before entering the ministry. He has a famous collection of stuffed birds which he keeps in a building expressly built for the purpose at Baileyville, Ill. He is the author of a nature book and has often addressed churches and public schools on the habits of birds.

Mr. Jordan published last week the statistics of the Chicago Disciples' churches, comparing the growth of the churches in the last five years. There are twenty-three Disciples churches in Chicago, including one suburban church—his own at Evanston—with a combined membership of 4,878. In the five years the Austin church made the largest percentage of gain in membership, increasing from 150 members in 1910 to 300 members in 1915. The largest total membership is in the Jackson Boulevard church, which numbers 900. Englewood is second with 678 members, and the Memorial Church of Christ third with 438 members. The Memorial church is also classed as a Baptist church, as it was formed by the union of a Baptist and a Disciples church.

For years it has been the custom to decorate on Memorial day with flags and an army emblem the graves of soldiers of all of our national wars. This year for the first time a Monday is to be set apart for the decorating of the graves of deceased ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church. It is hoped, also, that other denominations will follow the custom. A bronze emblem was designed by the Rev. Varnum A. Cooper, late of Roxbury, Mass., just before his death, which will be used, the first design being placed on the grave of Dr. Cooper. The title inscribed on the bronze will be "Veteran of the Cross."

Dr. Cooper founded the Veterans of the Cross Fellowship, which is intended to include all retired ministers of the Methodist church. He also devised a ritual to be read at funeral services, and the ritual was used at his own funeral. Dr. Cooper gave $1,000 to the retired ministers' fund and led in raising a fund of $200,000.

The emblems will be used May 15 in the Chicago cemeteries, where the bodies of ministers are buried. Rock River conference has an official burying ground in Rosehill cemetery, where several bishops are buried and special impressive ceremonies will be held there. The first picture of the Veterans of the Cross emblem was received a day or two ago by the Rev. J. T. B. Smith at the headquarters of the Veteran Preacher, 820 Garland building.

Robert E. Speer, D. D., one of the few laymen in the history of the church to receive the degree of doctor of divinity, will be the speaker at the Presbyterian Social union at the Hotel La Salle Friday evening, April 7. He was given the honorary degree by Edinburgh university for his services to world missions. He is the author of several volumes.

The following persons have been nominated as the officers of the union for the coming year. Nomination thus far in the history of the social union has been equivalent to an election. The nominations are: For president, Thomas E. D. Bradley; vice presidents, Prof. J. M. Coulter, L. A. Bowman, George Findlay; secretary, T. C. McCulloh; treasurer, Louis Boisot; for directors, the Rev. F. A. Hosmer; H. H. Munger, C. D. Lowry, F. J. Loesch.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills will hold a union meeting in the Hemenway Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago avenue and Main street, Evanston, today at 11 o'clock. He will speak in the afternoon and evening in the Rogers Park Congregational church, Morse and Ashland avenues, and will close the Rogers Park series of meetings tomorrow night. On Tuesday evening he will return to Evanston and hold union services in the Second Presbyterian church, Main street and Hinman avenue.

◆

The Unity Evangelical Lutheran church, Balmoral and Magnolia avenues, will hold midweek Lenten services on Wednesday evenings. The speakers will be: Next Wednesday, the Rev. John F. Seibert; April 5, the Rev. A. J. Hesson, and April 12, the Rev. H. L. Yarger, D. D. The Rev. David A. Davy is pastor.

The Rev. A. H. Gage, pastor of the Garfield Park Baptist church, has been elected president and the Rev. Charles B. Althoff, pastor of the Lorimer Memorial Baptist church, has been elected secretary of the Baptist Ministers' association for the next six months.

Marcy center, 1335 Newberry avenue, will give a reception and utility shower Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. There will be an exhibition of the work of the settlement and a program given by the different classes.

The Evanston Christian church, of which the Rev. Orvis Fairlee Jordan is pastor, will celebrate today the twentieth anniversary of its organization. One of the speakers will be the Rev. Edward Scribner Ames, pastor of the Hyde Park Christian church, who was the organizer of the Evanston church while a student. "Every pastor who has left the Evanston church," said Mr. Jordan, "has succeeded and is occupying a position of influence. The church seems like some countries,—a good place to be born in and to move from." However enviously Pastor Jordan may look upon his predecessors in the pastorate, he has declined offers made to him, one of them being the presidency of one of the colleges of the Christian or Disciples denomination.

The Rev. William A. Roberts has been called to the pastorate of the Ewing Street Congregational church, Gilpin place near South Halsted street. Mr. Roberts is still pursuing his studies in the Chicago Theological seminary, but it is expected he will be soon ordained and serve the church while a student and later as a settled pastor. The Ewing street church is located in close proximity to Hull house. Firman house is operated in connection with the church. The Rev. William R. Marshall, the former pastor, resigned several months ago.

We are making war all over the world on dandruff and unhealthy scalp conditions is recommended by thousands who use it as the one effective preparation to stop the ravages of dandruff and restore to the hair its youthful beauty.

If your hair is healthy, keep it so by the frequent use of this ideal French hair dressing. If your hair falls out, lacks lustre or is too oily, or if your scalp is uncomfortable, use ED. PINAUD'S Hair Tonic—try it for one month and watch the results. Its use is a refined habit.

Should you like to test it first, send a 2c stamp to our American offices today for a little trial bottle.

From the Well Known Oberbeck Furniture Company, Karpen Bldg., 9th Street and Michigan Avenue, Chicago

Here is where we keep a promise. We told you something extraordinary was coming. Here it is. The Oberbeck Furniture Company represents some of the largest and best furniture factories in the United States. Several of their entire sample lines will be given the Chicago public tomorrow at such savings that not a piece should remain unsold by nightfall. The pictures represent but a drop in the bucket, and cannot possibly show the workmanship, the beauty of woods and upholsteries of the pieces themselves. Coming just at the start of the year's greatest furniture season, and immediately after all furniture has been advanced fully 25 per cent, makes this one of the most remarkable offers ever known in Chicago. Everything is ready to handle the throngs—extra salespeople, quick service, easy selection, and the fine spirit of doing a worth while thing in a big way. First choice is, of course, always best.

INSTRUCTION.

Eloquent Oratory

EFFECTIVE SPEAKING—DEBATING is the passport to profit, career, to recognition, to high position, or even fame. To deliver a splendid talk in a masterful manner before clubs, societies, meetings, banquets, or juries creates leadership and choice positions in life. It is a magnificent accomplishment. Forensic oratory, voice power, gestures, expression, concentration, memorizing, personal magnetism, mental efficiency TAUGHT in private lessons, English style. Forceful, convincing effect, self-control, timidity and nervousness turned to courage and will power for speaking to audience or business conversation. Speeches, club papers, banquet toasts, culture subjects, political speeches written to order for speakers desiring private coaching preparatory for special events. Expert literary service, research, for public readings. OXFORD STUDIOS, 22 AUDITORIUM BLDG., 2d floor.

NEW CLASSES IN ENGLISH—

TUESDAY AND THURSDAY EVENING, 6 P. M.

181 N. DEARBORN.

Learn to speak, to write, to appreciate. No other one thing in life gives such advantage as the ability to use correctly that medium through which all thought, oral or written, is communicated.

The business man need not send from his office letters which reflect upon his scholarship. The lawyer need not plead before judges and juries in language that is discreditable. The doctor need not enter the homes of cultured men and women, using English not in keeping with his profession. All can learn to speak and write correctly through a brief, interesting, but thorough course. No waste time. No study of useless technical terms. No books. THERE IS A BETTER WAY.

For particulars concerning afternoon and evening classes or private instruction, telephone

ROGERS PARK 234.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Stores and Offices.

A BIG MAN WANTED

for a BIG job

with a BIG salary.

Sales Manager for a large, aggressive installment home furnishing house in a metropolitan city having a drawing population of 800,000 within 140 miles of New York City. He will have to reorganize and establish harmonizing conditions among a sales force. His aggressiveness will be taxed to uphold a mark set by a record of twenty-six years of extraordinary growth. To do this it will require a Pusher, a man of initiative and executive ability of no mean degree. Preferably a man of large stature; one who can inspire confidence in that "vital first minute." An optimist who always sees the sun shining and can literally "take a-hold" of things and guide them so as to produce decidedly evident results. He will be expected to adjust complaints satisfactorily to both parties concerned and will have to take and handle "turnovers" in an efficient manner. Reply in the minutest detail, including age, references, and connections for the past ten years, physical proportions, photograph, salary at present, and how soon you would be available. Negotiations strictly confidential. Unless you can qualify for every one of the above mentioned requisites, kindly do not apply, as it will result only to our mutual disappointment. Address B A 27, Tribune.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A1 SPECIALTY SALESMEN WHO WILL REALLY WORK FOR $150 AND UP.
We have an advertising proposition which sells in all towns under 20,000 for $39, payable $3.25 monthly. Actual value and cost is several hundred dollars, but unique plan enables us to sell it at our price. Has hearty indorsement of commercial associations. Pays the salesman an immediate commission of $12.50 on each sale and men make as high as six and seven sales a day, as we have nearly thirty lines and you have all the leads you can work. Aside from the value and merit of our proposition, we know how to sell it and equip our men with a presentation and sales arguments that will make $100 and expenses weekly for any specialty salesman worthy of the name. A real topnotcher can go double that. Will put you in near by field with experienced man to start if desired, or let you work near by towns alone until you are thoroughly competent. Exclusive permanent territory to producers, with full commissions on reorders. This is a proposition that requires hard work, application, and salesmanship. Advertising experience not necessary or particularly advantageous. No easy money men, wise [?] guys, dubs, or floaters interviewed. Only men considered now in the $4,000 a year class or better. Call 10 to 11:30, 1:30 to 3, 1526 Marquette Bldg.

VENETIAN BUILDING
[The Woman's Building],
15 E. WASHINGTON-ST.

Leases for one to five years. Rent free to May 1st. Immediate possession.

We are making extensive improvements in this building, and it will pay you to look over the space we have to rent. The service of the building is efficient in every respect, and it will be the policy of the management to give entire satisfaction to every tenant.

The large windows and the fact that the maximum depth of space is only 23 feet make the offices light and well ventilated, and they will be decorated in white enamel or in any manner desired.

The occupancy will be carefully restricted to the highest grade of tenants. We now have many of the best known firms in ladies' lines.

Our office in the building in room 1009 is open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Going to Move This Spring?
If so, why not look into the proposition of acquiring one of these Brick 2 Apartments
in a restricted residence neighborhood in our new subdivision at N. Cicero and Belmont-avs.?

These houses are well planned and well built, with every modern convenience. Choice of hot water, steam, or furnace [separate heating plant for each apartment].

We built these buildings to assist in the proper development of our large Northwest Side holdings, and for that reason we are offering special inducements as to prices and terms.

Our over 25 years' experience and our standing in the community is a sufficient guarantee as to the material and workmanship used in their construction.

These houses will bear the fullest inspection. Take Cicero-av. car to Barry-av. [1 block south of Belmont-av.] and walk east to our Branch Office.

REAL HOMES AND BUNGALOWS

IN AUSTIN.

A locality of Good Homes.

See the newest and up to date features and the most complete and well built homes at moderate prices.

Lots are 33 1-3 feet or larger, on wide, exclusive residence streets, with paving and other improvements all in and paid for, and no vacant lots to mar the beauty of the street.

Prices range from $4,100 and up; $800 to $500 cash and payments to suit.

These bungalows have 5 to 8 large, light, and airy rooms, sun porches, separate shower baths, and the best of hot water or hot air heating plants.

The hardwood trim and beautiful finished oak floors, together with the high grade lighting fixtures, art glass, and decorations are only a part of the features which place in a class by themselves for real comfort and pleasure.

The homes now completed are located on N. Lockwood-av., between Thomas and Division-sts.

An additional tract of 15 acres, embracing Latrobe and Laramie-avs., is now being developed by us, where orders will be taken for bungalows to suit if those we have ready or in course of construction do not fully meet your requirements.

Homes open for inspection every day, including Sundays.

BUILT ON HONOR.

5, 6, and 7 rooms; frame, stucco, and brick; hot air, steam, water or vapor heat; 37½x125 foot lots fenced and graded, $100 to $200 down, $25 to $30 a month, including interest, no more than you are probably paying for rent, and each payment increases your equity. Ready now or built for future delivery on my "$10 down and $10 a month while building" plan, then take possession and start the $25 to $30 monthly payment. Concrete foundations, floors, and walks, all rooms light; completely decorated; inside stairs to attic and basement; large front and rear porches; brick fireplaces; bookcases; mod. elec. fixtures. Dining rooms have oak beamed ceilings and oak paneled walls; handsome buffets. Bedroom has latest wardrobe closet; bath tiled; large pantries, and closets; screens and window shades; near school; no dust; no dirt, but a district of green shrubs, trees, and flowers, yet "in town" with good transportation, all city conveniences and property restricted to desirable class of houses and people. Two blocks west of Austin-av. terminal of Grand-Division-st. car line; or take North-av. car or Chicago-av. car to Austin-av., walk to Division-st. then two blocks west.

Lucky Man

LUCKY IS THE MAN who bought land a few years ago. Just as lucky, in a few years to come, will be the man who buys land today. It is really not luck, but good judgment of one who is willing to put his savings into an investment that is perfectly and will increase in value much faster than to let it lay in the savings bank earning only 3%. Land values increase with population, and therefore each year the increase is greater than the preceding year. The increase is much faster in the Swigart Tract than in older settled localities.

INVESTMENT IN THE SWIGART TRACT is also the short and direct route toward getting a self-supporting farm home, and the Swigart plan of purchase is so easy that any one who is earning wages and is able to save a little can buy. By this plan you can secure 40 acres of land by paying from $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on lands I am selling for $10 to $25 per acre. As I am the owner of many thousands of acres, you are dealing with the owner when you buy from me. After the land is partly paid I insure you for the balance.

YOU OUGHT TO SEE this country. It will open your eyes to opportunities that you have not thought of so near Chicago. My literature will tell you all about the district. Our Excursion Season has commenced, and if you take the trip with us on Tuesday, April 11th, you can see the lands to good advantage. The literature will be mailed upon request, or I will be pleased to have you call for it and see samples of last season's crops, as well as a large collection of stereopticon views. At the same time ask for a map of my district.

George Swigart,
OWNER.

FOR SALE—OWNER OF SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1,000 ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM,
WILL SELL

20-Acre Farm for Only $300

ON TERMS OF $10.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY,
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1,000 acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 acres in peaches, 136 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains, and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes, $300; tomatoes, $100 [$10 per ton at the canning factory], etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 1,000 acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 and 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of my land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm, and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains, and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded, brick bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs, and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables, and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth, and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery, and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death; money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

GET THIS FREE BOOK TODAY.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering, and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, soil, climate, water, rainfall, healthfulness, productivity, products, and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in Chicago and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

MACHINERY AND TOOLS.

MACHINERY AND FACTORY EQUIPMENT. We have just purchased another great industrial plant which included one of the biggest and most modern machine shops in the country. The tool list includes many lathes, screw machines, grinders, boring mills, milling machines, planers, drill presses of all kinds, gear cutters, grinders, punches, shears, etc. The equipment includes belting, pulleys, shafting, and 40 electric motors from 2 to 40 h. p., several steam engines, boilers, tanks, locomotives, and traveling cranes, and all kinds of small tools and equipment. Bear in mind we are not regular machinery dealers, and are disposing of this material at savings of 1-3 to ½.

On another deal we obtained about 300 brand new McVicker gasoline engines, also portable saw outfits, light plants, etc. Here are some of the snaps we now offer:

4 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine	$56
6 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine	$91.50
8 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine	$122.50
12 h. p. McVicker gasoline engine	$183

3 10x12 Ingersoll-Rand air compressors belted to 15 h. p. Fairbanks-Morse gasoline engine, mounted on heavy steel trucks.

1 8x9 Ingersoll-Rand air compressor belted to 12 h. p. Otto gasoline engine mounted on heavy steel trucks.

We can save you big money on any machine tools, contractors' machinery, steam machinery, electric motors, storage tanks and boilers, and factory equipment of all kinds.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

BUSINESS PROPOSAL

A BUSINESS MAN OF AKRON, O., WHO is the owner of the "Little Jane" Electric Clock patent rights, together with an $11,000 set of dies, gigs, tools, etc., necessary for the manufacture of this clock. It has had a two years' test and has proved that it will revolutionize the clock industry of the United States, because it operates directly off of 110 volt city electric light current. He can arrange for its manufacture by one of the largest clock companies in the country, and he proposes to establish the sales office in Chicago, which is centrally located. He wants to get in touch with a man who is financially able to purchase a half interest in the enterprise, and of sufficient experience to take full and active charge of the business. This proposal is first class. The owner can refer to any bank in Akron, O., as to his responsibility and integrity. He will talk business only with a substantial party, who is able to show a business [sales] experience which will warrant the connection. No others need apply. Address E. B. GILL, suite 617-618 First-Second National Bldg., Akron, O., and further particulars will be furnished. With the right party an interview will be arranged.

CAPITAL—

"STEP LIVELY,"

DON'T READ THIS LONG ADVERTISEMENT UNLESS YOU CAN MAKE AN INVESTMENT OF $300 TO GET AN INCOME OF $300 A MONTH FOR MANY YEARS TO COME. Don't say "IMPOSSIBLE," for it is BEING DONE right now and HAS BEEN DONE for the past 5 years, and it's the SAFEST BUSINESS ON EARTH. (Read this again).

NO! It is NOT mining, manufacturing, merchandizing, banking or farming; it is SAFER and MORE PROFITABLE than any of these. (Read this again also.)

The proposition sounds absurd, doesn't it? You doubt it, don't you? Almost every one does until he sees the proofs. But when you see the bank, business, and commercial endorsements and Government reports that back up this investment, all your doubts will be removed; and if you have rich red blood in your veins—if you can believe your eyes and trust your judgment—you will snap up one or more of these $300-units without delay, as many others have done and are doing.

You may pay cash and save a discount, or $75 down and $75 in 30, 60, and 90 days.

These $300-units are going rapidly and will soon be gone. They are being bought by careful, shrewd investors who mean business and act promptly; if you mean business you must not delay, you must "step lively"; and if you don't mean business, please do not bother me.

These units are NOT stock in a company; they contain within themselves the actual tangible value which makes them earn enormous profits; no one can take them from you or dispose of them without your written consent, and they cannot be destroyed by fire or flood or any other calamity. You probably have never seen or heard of an investment like this, in all your life. No misconduct or treachery or inefficiency of others can rob you of, or destroy, your valuable security.

It is difficult to find good investments that are any ways safe. It is much harder to find them than to sell them. It is hard to find one that hasn't some bad spot hidden way down in it, somewhere. THIS IS THE BEST INVESTMENT I EVER SAW. I say it without reservation.

I have bought units for my father, my brother's widow, and my wife, so as to make them independent and happy, and also for myself. Is there any one whom YOU would like to make independent and happy? Think what one or more $300-per-month incomes would do towards providing for him, or her, or them. (Read this paragraph again).

Many investors ask, "Why doesn't some rich man take all these $300-units?" That is a sensible question and deserves a sound answer. Every investor answers it for himself, however, as soon as he unedrstands the investment; he promptly admits that it would not be business-like to let one or a few men take all, and that the very best business plan is to sell to a number of investors, just as is being done.

There is nothing more to be said. It costs me quite a few dollars to reach you in this way, but it will cost you only a two-cent stamp to reach me.

Remember that many good shrewd business men and women are buying these $300-units because they convince themselves from the splendid credentials and backing that this is the SAFEST and SUREST MONEY-MAKING INVESTMENT ON EARTH, and that every $300-unit will pay $300 per month for many years to come; and these people are just as keen and careful as you are.

THE OPPORTUNITY IS GOING FAST.
CAN YOU AFFORD TO MISS IT?
OF COURSE YOU CAN'T. SO,
"STEP LIVELY!"

RETURNING FROM A VOYAGE OF ESPIONAGE—This photograph was made from a French aeroplane. It shows a French dirigible flying over a town in French territory, which is now held by the Germans. The two aircraft are returning from an observation trip over the German lines.

DAYBREAK ON THE SHORES OF SALONIKI—A French sentinel is seen on the shore of the Aegean near Saloniki waiting the coming of the day. The ships in the background are of the great allied fleet now in the waters of Greece. These ships once Greece entered war against the allies would immediately bottle up the Greek ports and put an end to Greece's trade.

BOB SCANLON AND THE FOREIGN LEGION IN FRANCE—The famous French foreign legion is made up of the toughest, most adventuresome, ne'er-do-wells, "gentleman dips," fighters, and soldiers of fortune from all over the world. Among them is Bob Scanlon, the Negro boxer, to whom the arrow points. The scene is in the French trenches around the Argonne.

FORMER ENEMIES FORGET—Grand Duke George Mikhailovitch, special envoy of the czar of Russia, delegated to carry New Year's greetings to the emperor of Japan, is shown here with Archbishop Serge at the door of the Greek Orthodox cathedral in Tokio. The grand duke (in uniform) is addressing the crowd of Nipponese who greeted his arrival. His mission, peculiar in that it was the first time in Russian history, was to invest the mikado with the Russian Order of St. Agnew and the empress with the diamond studded insignia of the Order of St. Catharine, by way of expressing that the czar has forgotten the China straits, Port Arthur, and Manchuria, belligerently speaking, and hopes the mikado has the same.

SIXTY TALES OF FR

ABBE GAVAUD, LOUIS (Medaille Militaire.)
Corp. of the 293rd Infantry. Once when his company was under fearful bombardment from the German artillery, he exposed himself to open fire in order to console the wounded. When the attack was repulsed and he was badly wounded in the arm, he remained on the firing line for three hours. He was finally made captive by a sudden unexpected attack by the Germans. Painfully wounded, he was exchanged and returned to France.

LAPIERRE (Medaille Militaire)
Adjutant of the 38th infantry. Asked, as special favor, to take command of a division which was under grilling fire from the enemy, and led it on a victorious charge, but first lost his right eye and then, later, his life.

MAURICE, PIERRE-JEAN
Met death while engaged in a fierce hand to hand bayonet encounter, at the very edge of the German trenches. He had led his men up to the first German lines, through a melee of fiercest defense, and succumbed only at the moment when he was outnumbered five to one.

DUPIN, EDOUARD
Sergeant of the 147th infantry. In spite of violent fire from the enemy Dupin led his company headforemost into a German trench, installing himself in their midst and withstanding their really violent attemps to drive him out.

BRACCONOT, ADOLPHE
Under Lieutenant of the 64th infantry. Met death while struggling to crush a large number of German sharpshooters who were more than decimating his batallion.

DAGNEAUX, E. (Legion of Honor)
Under Lieutenant of the 156th infantry. Although a man of over fifty he voluntarily entered the army and conducted himself remarkably.

FISTE
Under Lieutenant of the 118th infantry. Headed his company in an assault made on a town held by the Germans and received mortal injuries shortly after the town fell.

FAIHEL, PIERRE (Medaille Militaire)
Sergeant of the 20th cavalry. The commander of his division, falling in battle, he assumed command and held his company under violent fire hardly thirty feet from the Teuton trenches. He was killed almost at the instant that he and his men succeeded in occupying the same trenches.

MARABAIL (Cross of the Legion of Honor)
General, commander of the 67th Reserves. Made of his division a solid unit of impenetrable strength which bowed to no other in bravery or vigor. From the start of the war he distinguished himself as a fearless leader and again and again proved the metal of his courage and brain.

ABBE GAILLOT
Chaplain of an infantry brigade. Displayed marvelous courage in administering succor and aid to the men who lay wounded and dying at the very edge of the German trenches. When the Germans, for the first time, hurled their poisonous gases into the French lines, he warned the commander of the hideous danger in their midst, and then returned immediately into the thick of the fight. Died scarcely a hundred feet from the German lines.

BUGAT, I PUJAL
Captain of the 68th infantry. Against the trenches in which he was in command, the Germans launched a terrific force. The attack lasted for some hours, and although he was wounded in the arm at the first of the fighting, he held his ground, kept his men keyed up to the highest pitch and succeeded in driving the Germans back to their own lines. Met his death at the end of the encounter from a bayonet wound.

CADORET, PIERRE (Legion of Honor)
Lieutenant of the 115th infantry. Rose to distinction in the way that he rose to the task of storming a supposedly impregnable German position. In that charge the captain was killed and Cadoret was promoted to that rank himself.

LACROIX, DEIRMUR
Under Lieutenant of the 8th cavalry. Overwhelmed by the explosion of a shell, covered with blood and scraps of human remains, he continued to stand by his post and direct the firing of the guns against the enemy. Several times he faced an almost certain death by electing to station himself on the point nearest the German trenches, securing invaluable information for the French on the position and strength of the enemy.

FORMENTEL, HENRI (Medaille Militaire)
Sergeant of the 8th battalion. Awarded the insignia of honor for the valorous way in which he led his men in an attack on some German trenches and succeeded in taking those trenches under what seemed insurmountable odds.

DUPONT, ABEL (Medaille Militaire)
Adjutant of the 142d infantry. Spent his strength riotously, and exposed himself to every danger for 48 hours' fighting, his daring and fortitude acting like an intoxicant on the men.

LEANDERE, JEAN
Chaplain of the 8th division of cavalry. Gave himself lavishly in the task of caring for the wounded and dying, exposing himself under violent fire, as often in the first trenches as in the last, and not sparing himself either night or day

FRANCOIS, EMILE
Captain of the 76th Infantry. He drew attention to himself by the way in which he led his company to battle although painfully wounded and suffering frightfully. He was killed finally when making a desperate attack on the first line of the German trenches.

BUCCAIL
Sergeant of the 59th infantry. Led his men in an irresistible charge against the enemy, and although frightfully wounded about the face and neck, would not give up until the German trench was taken and the men prisoners. For at least fifteen minutes he was in the fiercest fighting, wounded thus, and bleeding fearfully.

LOUBON, M. A. (Legion of Honor)
Under Lieutenant of the 43rd colonials. Showed unexcelled bravery under the worst possible artillery fire from the enemy's line, and gave one of the war's most spectacular exhibitions of absolute daring and sangfroid.

GRENIER (Medaille Militaire)
Marshal of the 19th dragoons. Although severely wounded, he remained all day in the firing line with his company, sustaining mortal injuries at the end of the day.

CHOCARNE-MOREAU (Medaille Militaire)
Sergeant of the 6th cavalry. An officer who displayed great valor in leading his men directly up to the German defenses.

BERGES
Marshal of the 43rd artillery. Secured invaluable information for the French in some scouting expeditions which he undertook in the face of what seemed certain death.

DE RIBET, P. (Legion of Honor)
A brilliant and successful lieutenant who was victorious through sheer daring and bravery in a number of furious French onslaughts.

LEVEQUE RAYMOND
Sergeant of the 46th infantry. "I believe in you. Follow me and all will be well." These were the words with which he urged his men forward in making an attack on a village. The attack was successful, but Leveque fell shortly afterwards.

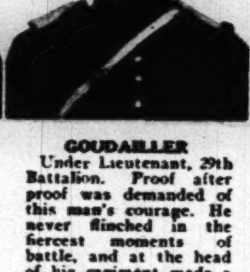
D'EICHTHAL,
Adjutant of the 11th Cavalry. No famed warrior of old ever died more bravely, nor more spectacularly than did this young man, who fell on the field of battle at the height of a victorious cavalry charge.

THOME, PAUL (Medaille Militaire)
Marshal of the 3rd division of sharpshooters. Though suffering from the almost inconceivable shock of having his leg blown off, Thome refused to be taken from the battlefield, and continued to direct the firing of a huge field piece.

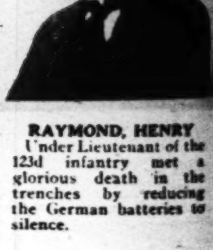
BIAGNE (Legion of Honor)
Captain of the 12th infantry. Not fully recovered from serious wounds in the right arm and leg, he returned to the firing line and threw himself into a violent cannonading attack. Struck down for the third time, he allowed himself only enough time to have the wound dressed and returned to the attack. Succumbed at the fourth wound.



GOUDAILLER
Under Lieutenant, 29th Battalion. Proof after proof was demanded of this man's courage. He never flinched in the fiercest moments of battle, and at the head of his regiment made a desperate assault on the first lines of German trenches. Succeeded in taking a large number of prisoners, and was wounded during the height of the attack.

BARIANT, MARTIAL PHILLIPPE (Medaille Militaire)
Brigadier of the 11th cavalry. In the center of a ferocious German bombardment he exhorted his men to stand their ground unflinchingly and gave to them the example by staying unfalteringly at the head of the ranks.

BERGES, Soldier.
Recklessness and courage combined in Berges during one of the French attacks on the German trenches. Although struck by a bursting shell and seriously wounded, he refused to have his wounds attended to, and for twenty-four hours fought desperately at the head of his men.



RAYMOND, HENRY
Under Lieutenant of the 123d infantry met a glorious death in the trenches by reducing the German batteries to silence.

[illegible]ART, PAUL ([illegible] of Honor)

DELEUZE, EMILE
(Legion of Honor)
Brigadier commander. After sixteen years of service and experience, he threw himself into the trench warfare and won some quick victories for the French

MAURIN-BONNEMAIN, HENRY
Distinguished in twice retaking some German trenches against odds that seemed insurmountable. He was fatally wounded at the moment of the fall of the last barrier against the French advance.

GAILLARD, TONEY
Sergeant of 157th infantry. Evinced a wonderful courage under heavy fire, particularly in holding a point of vantage for nine hours against a furious German bombardment.

POIRSON, C. A.
(Legion of Honor)
Captain. Went bravely to a certain death with "vive la France" on his lips, when his company found itself suddenly surrounded on all sides by the Germans.

HUBY, LOUIS
(Medaille Militaire)
Adjutant of the 143d infantry. With a daring plunge at the head of his men into the German trenches he was seriously wounded. But he refused to have his wounds dressed until he was certain that his men could hold their ground and keep the prisoners they had won.

BERNARD, FRANK
Lieutenant of a brigade and later captain. Won distincton particularly in the way he always undertook the most dangerous expeditions, assumed the most dangerous risks.

NAULIN, STANILAS
(Legion of Honor)
Lieutenant colonel. Later, military aviator. For seven hours he held the first line of trenches under terrific German bombardment, and later achieved singular distinction in a sensational and daring flight over the German troops.

UPONT, ABEL
daille Militaire)
tant of the 142d
ry. Spent his
th riotously, and
d himself to every r for 48 hours
g, his daring and de acting like a cant on the men

LEGARDERE, JEAN
Chaplain of the 8th division of cavalry. Gave himself lavishly in the task of caring for the wounded and dying, exposing himself under violent fire, as often in the first trenches as in the last, and not sparing himself either night or day

THOMAS DE CASTELNAU, RAOUL
Sharpshooter of the 106th cavalry battalion. Seeing that his commander was too badly wounded to direct his men further, Castelnau threw himself into the breach, infused new courage into the panicky soldiers and carried the short engagement to a victorious finish.

PEYRARD, PIERRE
Adjutant 14th battalion. Mortally struck by a bullet through his chest, as he was leading his company out of the first line of trenches directly in front of the German lines. This was the culmination of a series of acts of reckless valor.

BOUCHAND DE BUSSY
(Cross of the Legion of Honor)
He was an example of splendid bravery in defending his trench against a furious Teuton onslaught.

PEHU, ALEXAND
(Medaille Militaire)
Aviator of the 17th artillery. As an aerial observer he performed a number of invaluable services to his country, and was killed in an aero accident while flying over German artillery.

RIGAULT
(Legion of Honor)
His battalion brought suddenly face to face with a German division made a staunch stand and succeeded in routing the Teutons in a few moments of fearful fighting. He was killed at the last of the encounter.

SUREAU, MAURICE
(Medaille Militaire)
Captain of the 5th infantry. Since the start of the war his bravery was notable even in the midst of continued examples of valor, and he met death while defending his trench even after he was mortally wounded.

MORIZOT-THIEBAUT
Lieutenant colonel. "Forward — forward." These were his dying words at the crux of a terrific onslaught of French soldiers against the Teuton trenches. And to his utter fearlessness was largely due the success of the French soldiers

RIBET, P.
n of Honor)
liant and suc-
lieutenant who torious through ring and brav-number of furi-
nch onslaughts.

LEVEQUE RAYMOND
Sergeant of the 46th infantry. "I believe in you. Follow me and all will be well" These were the words with which he urged his men forward in making an attack on a village. The attack was successful, but Leveque fell shortly afterwards.

DE GAULEJAC, G.
Captain of the 18th infantry. Badly wounded in the leg, De Gaulejac carried out faithfully the orders he had received to evacuate his trenches and led his men on a successful retreat, which, if it had not been well handled would have been a murderous affair.

PONTENCIER
Lieutenant of the 72d infantry. Singled out among the infinitely brave commanders of the war by the daring fashion in which he led his men up to the very mouth of the enemy's trench.

LASCROIX
Captain of the 28th infantry. Displayed an utter disregard of death in the carrying out of a perilous reconnoitering expedition which lasted for several days.

BERTUCOT
(Legion of Honor)
Captain 318th infantry. With a record behind him of valiant service in colonial warfare, Boissier won still further honors in this war and died as bravely and as fearlessly as he had lived.

PICARDET, EMILE
Of the 17th infantry. Chief of a strong battalion, he died on returning to the firing line with a wound which was not sufficiently healed.

JOSENHANS
Under Lieutenant of the 46th artillery. Fatally wounded while he was holding his company in an extremely dangerous position which it was necessary that the French should not lose.

SCHMIDT, ANDRE
(Legion of Honor)
Under Lieutenant of the 296th infantry. At the head of his battalion he was suddenly halted by the enemy and forced to give battle. Though unprepared, he fought bravely, and was mortally wounded at the height of a brave and desperate struggle.

RAYMOND, HENRY
nder Lieutenant of the l infantry met a rious death in the nches by reducing German batteries to nce.

MALLIART, PAUL
(Legion of Honor)
Captain of the 23d artillery. Distinguished himself by several days of hard, sustained fighting, at the end of which he was mortally wounded.

JOURNES. FOURNAND
Captain. Personally directed the mining of ground in front of the German trenches, under heavy German fire. Was mortally wounded in emerging from under shelter in the midst of violent firing to make sure that his staff was well protected.

FORTOUL
(Cross of Legion of Honor)
One of the chiefs of the 23rd colonial infantry divisions. Under tremendous fire he conducted himself with great fearlessness, and near the end, struck down by a frightful wound, he fought on to the finish, refusing to allow his wound to be dressed.

BOULLE, LUCIEN
(Legion of Honor)
Captain of the 20th infantry. In the midst of one of the fiercest engagements of the war he was struck by a bursting shell, which tore up the ground about him, buried his companions under a melee of human remains and wounded him frightfully. Despite this, he continued fighting until he fell from utter exhaustion.

DELESALLE, GASTON
(Legion of Honor)
Under Lieutenant of the 110th infantry. Had the reputation of being the bravest of the brave during eight hours of fiercest fighting.

GUASCO, EDOUARD
(Cross of the Legion of Honor)
Soldier of the 90th infantry. Sent on an important scouting expedition, he was badly wounded. He finished the task assigned him, however, and for that was awarded the insignia of honor.

VANGARNER
(Medaille Militaire)
For many months he was conspicuous for his bravery under fire.

POTENCIER, GILBERT
Lieutenant of the 72d infantry. He led his company up to the enemy's trenches and held his position there until the trench was taken and the German defense shattered. He was struck down by a shell and frightfully wounded.

PRINCESS MARY, the only daughter of King George of England, will be 19 years old on the 25th of next month. But for the war she would have just been entering into the gay social life of London, but as it is she is devoting her time mostly to relief work. She is said to have a strain of romance in her makeup, and it was gossiped in England two years ago that she had proposed to Lord Kitchener, as her grandmother, Queen Victoria, did to the Prince Consort.

(Photograph from the Bain News service.)

PRINCESS "PAT," she is called, and she is the idol of the English and Canadians. Her more formal name is Princess Patricia of Connaught, daughter of the Duke of Connaught, who is governor general of Canada. She is the sponsor for the famous "Princess Pat" regiment of the Canadian contingent, which is frequently mentioned in the dispatches from the western front of the war.

Fewer and Better Laws

By George W. Wickersham

Former Attorney-General of the United States

IT WOULD be a good thing if our legislative bodies, not excluding the Congress of the United States, would give themselves a long rest from the business of framing multitudinous new statutes, with which to clutter their own records and the law libraries of the world. They could profitably devote a term of years to analyzing existing laws, simplifying, standardizing and modernizing those which are essential to good government, and ruthlessly repealing those which we could do without. The sweet reasonableness which they would acquire from this task might convince them that problems of such importance as to require brand new legislation are comparatively rare in the life of a State.

To those who find the above idea startling, I can only say that the need for reform is very real. To illustrate: Some years ago, the State of New York appointed a splendid body of men, including lawyers and jurists of the highest distinction, as a "Board of Statutory Revisors." Their powers were limited. They could not suppress any principle or theory that had found its way into the laws of the State. They could not change the meaning of any given statute, either arbitrarily or by interpretation. But they were authorized to condense and rearrange, to revise by striking out overlapping laws, to combine groups of statutes which covered the same subject; in short, to state the laws of the community concisely and faithfully. The result of their labors was the "Consolidated Laws of the State of New York," enacted in 1909 and supplemented a year later. Comprised in 10 or 11 volumes, this was one of the most thorough, practical and truly admirable compilations of the laws of a State that had ever been made.

Yet it was no sooner presented to the people than amendments began to be adopted thick and fast. The work of the Board of Statutory Revisors seemed to be the stepping stone to a renewed and feverish legislative activity. In 1914 an index to the amendments alone filled 86 printed pages.

Of course, it can be argued that until the compilation was made legislators found it difficult to grasp what the law really was. Afterward, they were in a position to study what changes were necessary and how a given statute could be supplemented and improved. There is a good deal of justice in this contention. But no one who has analyzed the voluminous amendments referred to can doubt that in hundreds of cases the legislative power was abused, and the law in consequence placed on a lower plane, both in the matter of efficiency and of dignity before the people.

THERE is a fight ahead for any set of reformers who may try to indulge in a real breathing spell. For, as Associate Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court pointed out in a recent address to the State Bar Association of New York, there is a tendency in all democracies to indulge in excessive legislation. The latter appears to be an expression of the power of democracy. It is useless to cavil at it. But the energy and independent thinking that it represents may be directed into new channels, and in time it may seem more admirable to the citizens to have codified a group of laws than to have added lavishly to their number, with the sole result of rendering them chaotic and difficult to enforce.

Already more attention is being paid in the Congress and in the legislature of the State of New York to the science of the formulation of laws. There is a realization that clear, intelligible English must be used, that other statutes on the same subject must be examined, in order to learn whether the new bill will link up with existing legislation. New York State employs a bill drafting expert at Albany. At Columbia University there is a bill drafting department, and other educational institutions are beginning to study the subject.

It is well that we have these signs of progress to encourage us. For there have been examples in the past not only of frivolous law-making, but of statutes framed for dishonest motives and expressed in such manner that they would be difficult, or impossible, to enforce.

WHEN I was Attorney General, in the Cabinet of President Taft, an eight-hour law was adopted for the purpose of regulating the hours of labor in the War and Navy departments. The first application of the law, upon which the Department of Justice had to pass, was in respect to certain contracts for naval supplies. We found that the new legislation was absolutely self-destructive. The language was illusory. It was almost impossible to ascribe any sane objective or to ascertain its meaning, so as to make it reasonably enforceable. Yet in its interpretation it had to be assumed that Congress intended to enact something. With great difficulty and ingenuity we hit upon a workable interpretation and the government work proceeded despite the statute. Certain members of Congress indulged in animadversions on the Attorney General but the Congress never attempted to interfere with his interpretation. The Statute had been passed in response to the demands of certain organizations of Labor. But those who framed the measure apparently did so without enthusiasm or conviction. Obscurity of language enabled them to do what was expected of them, while handing on the actual responsibility for its practical application to some one else.

AGAIN, take the recent supplement to the Sherman Anti-trust law known as the Clayton Bill. Labor unions declared that it would be of great value to them, because it would legalize the secondary boycott. After it was passed, however, the contention was raised that it was not intended to do any such thing. It has not yet been settled what the effect is. Samuel Gompers says that it has legalized the secondary boycott, and personally, I think that he is right. But authorities differ. The Clayton Bill contains some fine examples of the most vicious methods of legislation, because it was deliberately phrased in language which might mean one thing or another, the responsibility of interpretation being dumped by Congress upon the courts.

An interesting point is the tendency among English-speaking peoples to legislate against human ills, such as poverty, which appeal to the popular imagination, but which no legislation can remove. Our law makers often know perfectly well that they are lending themselves to empty sentimentality, that statutes of this character are not practical. Yet they go ahead, hoping secretly that the Courts will decide that their acts are unconstitutional. Let the judicial establishment, they tell themselves, bear the brunt of defeating legislation wanted by the people. The courts are becoming shy of quashing laws unless they are flagrantly unconstitutional. Many measures which pass the legislatures never have been and never will be enforced. We need fewer laws, more carefully drawn—laws that can be respected and honestly enforced.

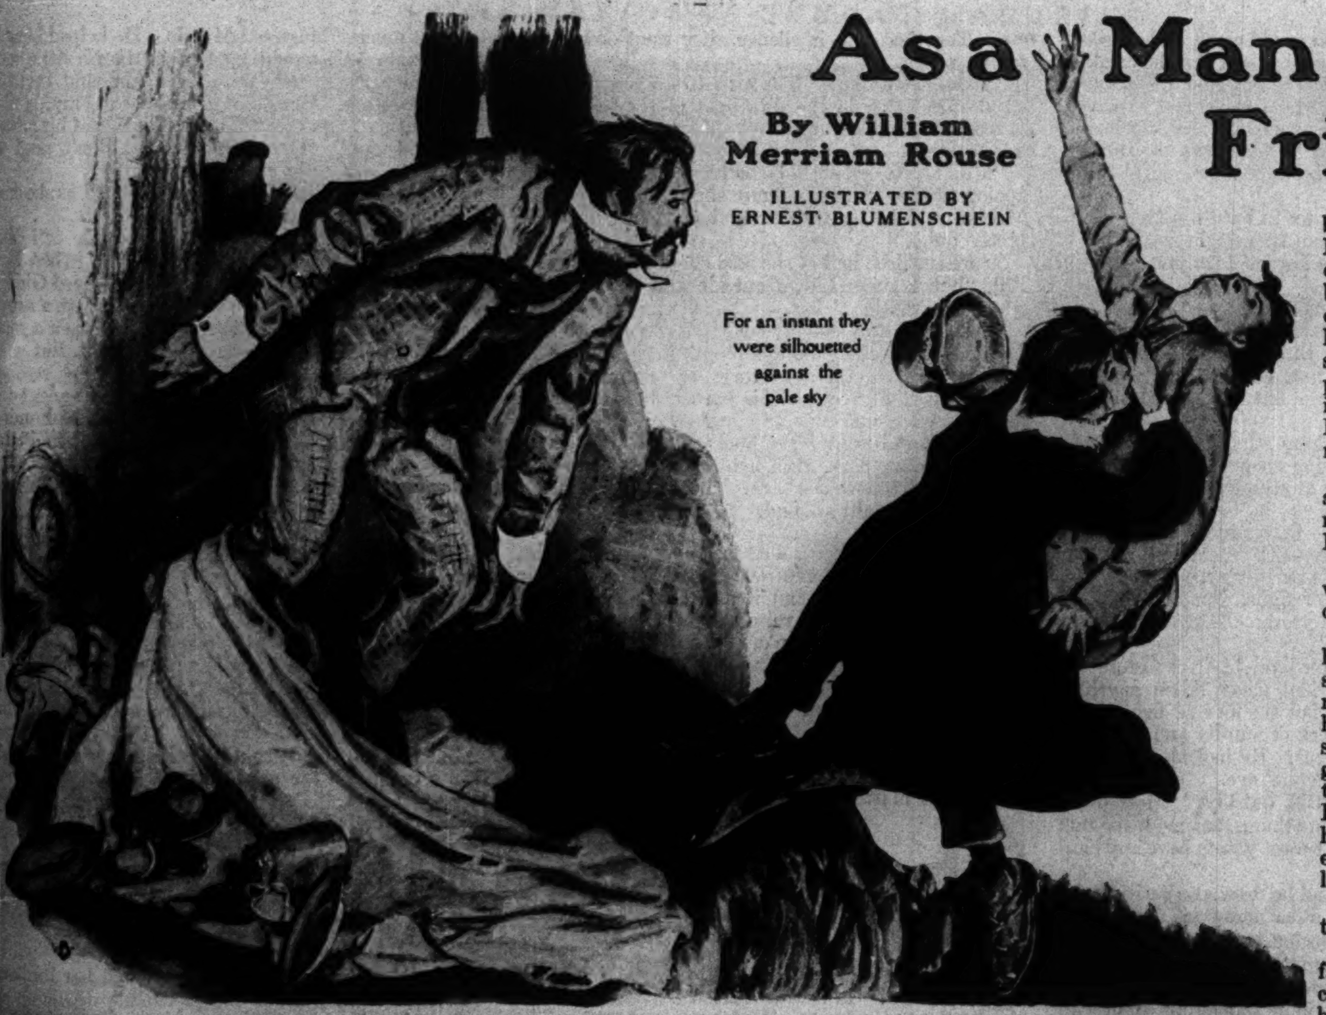
As a Man to His Friend

By William Merriam Rouse

ILLUSTRATED BY ERNEST BLUMENSCHEIN



For an instant they were silhouetted against the pale sky

JOHNNY PETERS and Big Bill Stone had been friends for nearly a dozen years, since first they met as stripling river drivers. They smoked each other's pipes and, after a time, they began to save for the purpose of buying a farm together. Nothing had happened to strain the bonds of their friendship and they had no thought but that the years would bring them peace and independence upon their own soil.

All up and down the Dunder river this friendship was accepted as one of the facts of nature, and held to be mildly amusing; for Big Bill Stone was a tall, thick-chested man who could shoulder a barrel of flour by the chines, while people called Johnny Peters not much bigger than a pint of cider. But Johnny was as grave and earnest about the matter of living as Bill was careless, and he had respect from his fellows in a country where muscle is usually the measure of a man. It was Johnny Peters who carried the five hundred dollars they had saved to make the first payment on their farm.

Late in the spring when the five hundred dollars had been saved the log drive drew near to Mountain Falls, a village well down the river toward Lake Champlain. The heavy booted gang of drivers was again at Old Dan Harmon's boarding house; and again tobacco smoke and vivid curses filled the doghouse, old Dan's basement den where the men gathered in the evenings. The first day that the drivers put their legs under the boarding house tables Mountain Falls had a visitation.

Miss Tina Larue was the visitation. She sent malice and envy hissing through the veins of every woman not too old or ill to care for things of this world, and she made stir the pulse of every male in the village. Albert Murrin, the barber, saw her coming out of the post office, just at dusk, and with bulging eyes he ran down to the doghouse. A poker game stopped when he flung himself breathlessly in.

"Whose house has ketched afire?" asked old Dan, holding his cards face down against his venerable stomach.

"It ain't fire," answered Murrin. "It's a girl!"

Harmon snorted and called for three cards; but the other men pricked up their ears. Big Bill Stone, who had been watching the game, was interested.

"This ain't a Mountain Falls girl, I tell you!" The barber directed his remarks to Dan. "She's a better looker than I've seen since I was down to the city last time. And clothes! Say!"

The draw had become confused and somebody asked for a new deal. With a sigh Harmon put down his cards.

"Let's get the girl off our minds so's we can 'tend to business," he said. "She's been a actress and she ain't as young as she looks. Her name is Tiny Larue and she's come here to start a millinery shop. She boards here and eats with my old womern after the boys get done. Now go ahead and deal!"

Dan Harmon, cooled by sixty winters, might dismiss her thus; but not Albert Murrin. He had been as far north as Plattsburg and as far south as Albany, and he wore patent leather shoes and a white collar every day. After a little fidgeting Murrin went out. Bill Stone, with a wink and a nod to Johnny Peters, rose up and followed.

THEY trailed along fifteen or twenty feet behind the barber. It was where the lights shone out from Aiken's store that they saw him straighten up and lift his hat with a flourish, as he stepped aside for a young woman who could be no other than Miss Tina Larue. Murrin got for his pains a sidelong glance from eyes that gleamed bigger and darker than any of the eyes in Mountain Falls. Stone crowded behind Peters on the narrow board sidewalk; there was a whif of some strange smell in his nostrils, and then the vision was gone.

"Great guns, Johnny! She's a regular picture off a circus poster ain't she?"

Johnny Peters did not reply at once. He had turned full around and was staring after the woman, with the natural gravity of his face changed by an emotion that Big Bill had never seen there before. Dusk swallowed up the slender figure. The little man drew in his breath sharply.

"I wouldn't call her a circus poster if I was you, Bill," he said. "She's the prettiest looking woman that I ever saw."

Without another word Peters made off toward the boarding house and Big Bill followed, too astonished to speak. He knew the signs, both from experience and observation, but ten minutes before he would have bet his share of the farm money that no woman in the world could ripple the even current of his partner's life. And now it had been done by one who, instinct told him, was no fit mate for any earnest man. But Stone wisely forbore to speak his thoughts and he let Johnny go to bed without mentioning Tina Larue, or womankind.

The next day there was restraint between them as they worked, growing more marked as the day wore on. They broke a jam together with no more than half a dozen words. And that night Johnny clumped up to their room immediately after supper. Bill followed, for he hoped that somehow there would come a chance to say part of what was in his mind about the play actress. He sat down on the bed and pretended to be busy with a boot lace. Peters went to his trunk and carefully laid out a stiff-bosomed shirt and white collar. Five minutes later he stood with creaking shoes and shirt bosom and plastered his dripping hair into an elaborate cowlick. Big Bill could hold himself no longer.

"I didn't know they was a wedding tonight," he remarked in the wrong tone. His partner wheeled quickly.

"What do you care whether they is or not?" he demanded.

Stone grunted and held his peace; but when Johnny set forth for the lower regions of the boarding house he walked behind, despite discouraging backward glances. It was in the hall that Peters found old Dan Harmon and stopped before him, fairly wriggling with embarrassment. He swallowed hard.

"Dan, I want you to introduce me to Miss Larue!"

Old Dan had the poker face, and seldom did its lines change. But now his mouth hung open for an instant and little wrinkles of amusement gathered about his eyes.

"Sure, Johnny!" he cried, to the flaming countenance before him. "You come along with me—I guess she's in the parlor now."

Peters stabbed his partner with a look that halted him, and followed the old man down the corridor and through a chenille-draped doorway. Came out the even tones of Dan and then a flat little feminine voice that was not without allurement. In a moment Harmon was back, wearing a frank grin.

"Little Johnny has ketched it as hard as Bert Murrin," he said. "The fools ain't all dead yet!"

Big Bill turned on him a level glance, keen and cold. He reserved to himself the right to criticise Johnny.

"Is it any of your business?"

Harmon turned away with a growl and went heavily down into the basement. Bill Stone flung open the front door and took himself out into the spring night. Now he knew to a certainty that trouble had sought out Johnny Peters and himself. But he thought less of their future and the farm than of what a Tina Larue could do to a man like Johnny Peters, who had been saving up emotion all his life. Bill felt worse rather than better when, after half an hour's tramp, he went back to the boarding house.

THE voice of Peters came out of the parlor, speaking more words in five minutes than he was wont to use in an hour.

"We got five hundred dollars," Johnny was saying, "and the farm picked out. After we get paid off on the drive we'll have money enough extra to buy a hoss, and a cow, and some tools."

"Oh, how I should love a farm, Mr. Peters!" The exclamation made Bill snort in disgust. "But I'm afraid it won't ever be my fate to have one."

"You—you can't tell, Miss Larue." The voice of Johnny quivered with hope.

"All that money saved up!" She threw no small degree of admiration into the words. "Of course you've got it in the bank, where it's safe?"

"Not much we ain't!" Johnny was secretly proud of his trustworthiness. "I carry it sewed inside my shirt. Banks bust up sometimes, and once in a while Bill Stone, my partner, he gets kind of thirsty and goes and spends all he's got. So I carry the money."

"You're a real level-headed man, Mr. Peters," she cooed.

Bill felt that he could endure no more. He went upstairs and kicked a chair across his room.

"The dam little fool!" he growled. "Something's got to be done for him, and done quick!"

Through two hours of waiting for Johnny he thought his hardest, but no solution would come. There seemed to be only the obvious course, so when the creaking footsteps of his partner sounded he braced himself to take it. Johnny Peters' whole being had expanded and his face glowed with an elation that made him seem five years younger as he came into the room.

"I want to talk to you about that Larue girl," began Bill.

Instantly Peters mouth set in hard lines.

"You better call her Miss Larue!" he warned.

"All right, then. 'Miss Larue.' Do you figure on marrying that girl?"

Johnny hesitated for a moment.

"If you wa'n't my partner I guess you know what I'd say to that question. But I'll tell you this much, Bill. I don't believe a fine, educated girl like her would have a critter like me; but if she will I'm going to marry her!"

"Ain't it struck you, Johnny, that maybe she might like the idee of your having some money saved up? And that you don't know anything about who she is, or what she's been?"

Bill was standing now. Peters seemed to increase in stature. He stepped across the room and, reaching up, shoved a fist under his partner's nose.

"You take that back or fight, you big hog!" he grated, through clenched teeth. "Take it back or fight right here and now!"

Big Bill actually wobbled on his feet before the sudden alternative. He had never taken anything back for any man before, but the idea of fighting his little partner seemed to reek of murder and treachery and all other things hideous. He looked at the fist, and the fighting light in Peters' eye.

"I take it back," said Bill, quickly. "Most likely it was just jealousy, or something, that made me talk that way, Johnny. I don't want you to have any hard feelings."

Johnny's fist dropped and he drew away with a riot of emotions chasing each other across his face.

"Huh!" He stared. "Jealousy or something, hey?"

"I was kind of stirred up," Stone admitted. Then he began to peel off his clothes for he wanted to let the incident end without more dangerous argument. They went to bed in silence.

WITH morning a change seemed to have come upon Peters. He ate morosely and went away from the boarding house muttering to himself and dragging his clanking cant hook. It was an hour or more before Stone saw him again. Detailed to work in opposite directions, clearing the Dunder's bank of stranded logs, they came together above the village. At sight of Big Bill Johnny dropped his cant hook and walked toward him, with a face that seemed to have been wiped clean of all that had darkened it that morning. He held out a cracked and stubby hand.

"Bill, I acted like a skunk," he said. "I'm mighty sorry for it. I didn't guess at first that you—you liked Miss Larue, too. Liking a girl kind of upsets a feller. I didn't guess until you said you was jealous."

Mechanically Big Bill Stone wrapped a great paw around the hand of his partner. Mechanically he opened his mouth to reply, but for the moment no words would come. Things seemed to have turned bottomside up. Then he understood. In making his apology to Peters he had mentioned jealousy, meaning that he was jealous of their long cherished friendship. And Johnny had thought that he, also, had fallen victim to the powdery charms of Miss Tina Larue. He gathered himself.

"Sure. That's all right, Johnny." he answered. "I hadn't ought to poked my nose into your business."

"I don't blame you a bit, Bill." Peters was determined to leave no word of reparation unspoken. "It come to me in the night what you meant, and if you can get her they won't be no hard feelings between us. I don't want you to think about me being your partner, at all. Only I hope it will be one of us and not Bert Murrin that gets her. A girl that don't know about men is liable to be fooled by a soft spoken feller like him."

Even as Big Bill swallowed a laugh at the thought of Tina Larue being fooled by anybody, inspiration came to him. Words had formed for a denial of any desire to marry the woman, but he choked them back. Here was a chance to save Johnny Peters from himself. Bill Stone resolved to court Miss Larue and risk the damage to her heart and his own. He did not believe it would be great.

"You're all right, Johnny," he said, slowly. "You're fair and square about it."

Their hands gripped once more, and fell apart. It was not in either of them to talk much of emotions, and Bill turned to his work with a slight feeling of sheepishness. But the big logs of pine and spruce and hemlock rolled easily for him that day and when night came he put himself to the task of donning his best clothes with all the care that Johnny gave to that process. Together, but in silence, they went downstairs to the parlor.

The room was dark. The men drew back and looked at each other in the dim light of the hall lamp. Peters scratched his head and shifted from one foot to the other.

"Miss Larue said she'd be here tonight," be blurted, apologetically. "I don't figure she'd break her word. Mebbe we'd better wait around and come in again pretty quick."

"Sure she'll be here if she said she would," growled Bill, "but I guess I'll go outside and get some air while I'm waiting."

He bolted before Johnny could offer to go with him, for a suspicion was gaining strength in his mind. He hurried toward the one-story, two-room building where Albert Murrin had his barber shop and living quarters. Inasmuch as Mountain Falls regarded a barber as a Saturday night luxury it was not strange to find the shop dark. But light came from a window of the living room at the back. This was the condition Stone had thought to find.

WITH care he approached the window and caught, as he did so, the murmur of voices. The curtain had been pulled down but it fell short a few inches. And the sash had been raised slightly, so that what was said in the room came out with distinctness. Bill knelt and saw Tina Larue and Albert Murrin facing each other across the table. A bottle and a package of cigarettes lay between them. Miss Larue blew a smoke ring.

"The boob is so easy it's no fun," she said. "He'll pass over his money the minute I snap the whip. What's the matter with you? Scared?"

"Not much," blustered Murrin. He helped himself to a drink. "It would take more than a little runt like him to scare me—more than him and that big Stone together. But what I can't see, Tiny, is why you want me in on this. Why don't you get his money and light out? A woman like you don't need no help."

The eyes of Miss Tina Larue narrowed as she drew a thoughtful inhalation from her cigarette.

"You're right, bo," she answered, slowly. "I don't need any help to turn a trick like that. When I got canned out of the chorus of 'The Green-Eyed Girl,' in Plattsburg, I drifted down to this dump with a couple of twenties. Honest, I thought I would open a millinery shop, or something like that, on tick. But when I see that the boobs was ninety-nine per cent strong I couldn't work anything but them. Now we get this little guy's roll and then we take that three hundred you say you've got and throw a big front in Plattsburg. That's where I need help. Bo, there's a big slob up there with five thousand iron men. He's soft on me and he's just waiting to be trimmed."

SHE drove out the last words, leaning over the table. Doubt, greed, admiration and timidity played across the face of Murrin. He cleared his throat.

"Well, Tiny, if you don't believe you could get that Plattsburg feller's money without me——"

"Solid wood," she cut in, and, reaching out, rapped his head with her knuckles. "Maybe I'd like to have you help me, whether I need it or not. Money ain't everything."

She flashed a smile that revealed many marvelously white teeth and the persuasion of Albert Murrin was complete.

The Lie and the Woman

By Mary E. Wilkins Freeman

ALL men are liars, it has been said; and what of women? Is it true that the average woman lies to her husband? Assuming that she does, habitually or otherwise, let the whys and wherefores be considered. Taking for granted that the wife is a sane, intelligent woman there must be some sane and intelligent reason for her lies. Moreover she must be reasonably confident before entering upon her career of falsehood that it will prove successful. In other words she must be sure of her husband either not recognizing her lie as a lie, or she must be sure of his acquiescence in its necessity. His failure to recognize her falsehood might not prove his foolish gullability. Falsehood might easily involve his own mental state when dealing with her and he might not be quick to appreciate any change of the moral wind.

ALSO, many men, especially American men, do not look for the absolute truth in minor matters in their womenkind. Any statements that can even partly assimilate with facts coming from women pass readily for truth itself. And allowing that the husband does realize that his wife is telling him a lie, he may take it very easily, if it does not involve stern essentials. He may recognize it as a part of the veneer of domestic relations which keep the gloss and pleasantness intact and prevent splinters of friction. He may, in fact, consider that lies are politic—a part of the diplomatic system of matrimony without which it can hardly be conducted with that smooth running of wheels of dignity before the world which is desirable. The wife herself may so consider it. She may even reason that a lie to her husband is one of the most purely unselfish deeds of her life, that she may disturb, if she have a conscience, the props of her soul, but is willing to do so in order to make everything pleasant and comfortable for the man whom she sincerely loves.

Many women have their faith rooted and grounded in the doctrine that it is a sin peculiar to the female of the species to disturb in any fashion the serenity of the masculine mind. A lie, to avoid such a calamity, becomes to their conceptions, rather an attenuated truth than a lie. Deception is used for the building of a sugar-candy palace of household peace and they comprehend in it not the slightest departure from rectitude.

Suppose Johnny, to his mother's way of thinking, needs a new velvet coat for the winter. She realizes how beautiful the youngster will look in that velvet coat, with his rosy cheeks and his brave sparkle of blue eyes and toss of golden locks. She realises not only the harmony to result from the combination of the baby boy and velvet, as no man can, but she also realizes with sure intuition how very proud and happy the sight will make the man. Consequently she caters to his unconscious wish by dwelling upon kitchen utensils and prosaic shoes and stockings and more or less deceptively obtains enough money to defray the expense. She probably intends to tell her husband, as a great joke, about the justifiable deception she practiced upon him. She may never tell him at all, in which case she will not remember it as a death-bed confession.

Or the wife may know of some very desirable change in the home which will add materially to the comfort and happiness of her husband. For that she will lie as she would go to the stake. She may plan to later on tell him the entire truth about the matter, but she may easily and unremorsefully not carry out her plan.

She may, although it requires a type of woman on a somewhat lower plane, because her motives are necessarily mixed, esteem it an act of virtue to ask for money for sugar and butter and then spend it upon dress for herself. She may quite honestly wish to look beautiful and as well attired as other women to her husband and salve her conscience in such wise, but her motives are suspiciously mixed since she can hardly avoid deriving satisfaction from the admiration of other women, even though she be too fond of her husband to even detect approbation in the eyes of other men.

Often, I think it to be true that a wife is driven to subterfuge to obtain the little frills of life which are the bread and butter of her soul, but which she can no more make her husband understand than a telegraph pole. The poor child really needs those little frills of femininity, and if she cribs a little from the dish-towel money and the rubbers and flannels money it may not be such a dreadful iniquity.

HOWEVER, underneath all probably lies a subtler reason for the deceptions practised by good wives upon good husbands. We all, men and women alike, whether we know it or not, whether we confess to the cleansing of our souls, or go through the world obdurately blind, lie to our own selves more than to any other human being. Between us and our own souls we heap falsehood after falsehood, for men and women are adepts one and all at self deception.

The wife, being more in unity with her husband, if she be a true wife, than with any other being, paradoxically tells him more lies. She is able to tell them without being conscious of falsehood, since she regards them in a double light, and the lies told to herself and her other self become equivalent, in the opinion of many a good woman, to essential truths and are not lies at all.

After all, a lie, if it be not malignant and deliberately intended to work injury, may through the alchemy of love and good intentions become a negative virtue. But such a statement is not intended to condone the lies which wives may tell their husbands. It is only intended to suggest a rational and not altogether unforgivable cause for the lies.

THE FALL OF A NATION

A Story of the Conquest of America

By THOMAS DIXON

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE State Ball began in the banquet hall of the Governor's Palace at 9:30 to the minute. Waldron led the procession with Virginia Holland. He moved with the easy grace of a master, never missing for an instant the perfect rhythm of her lithe, graceful body.

The surprise of the evening for the Governor General had been the appearance of every American woman wearing the shining helmet of the soldier of the ranks in token of their full surrender to Imperial authority.

"A beautiful idea—those helmets!" he whispered as they swept through the throng.

"You are pleased?"

"I am more than pleased. I am supremely happy tonight. I know that only your brilliant imagination could have conceived so graceful a tribute to my imperial master——"

"I am glad——"

"You are closer to me tonight than ever before," he said softly. "I feel it. I know it."

She turned her head and breathed her answer:

"Yes——"

The dancing ended at 11:30. Waldron gave his arm to Virginia and led the way to the banquet tables. An orchestra of stringed instruments, concealed in bowers of roses, was playing. The waiters moved with swift, noiseless tread.

On the stroke of twelve Waldron rose, lifted his glass and gave the toast—the exact form of which he had sent to every toast master in America:

"To the Lord of War—Lord of Life and Death—Master of the World—the Emperor!"

Virginia's left hand clasped the glass, her right gripped with nervous intensity the dagger that held the bodice of her gown. The searchlight on the Madison Square Tower flashed and every whistle in the city and harbor sounded a simultaneous tribute.

It was the signal to strike. Every American woman turned in swift unison and plunged six inches of steel into the man beside her. A strangling cry of surprise and horror swept the magnificent room. The lights went out. In total darkness again and again the death-stinging blows found their mark. And above the curses, groans and shouts rang the shrill battle cry of the Daughters of Jael:

"For our God and Country!"

Virginia alone had completely failed. Something in the look of the man and his utter pride and trust in her at the crucial moment caused her hand to fumble. Waldron's keen eye caught the tremor of her fingers and one glint of the steel blade of the jeweled dagger. The uplifted glass came down with a crash and his iron fist closed on her right hand.

"So!" he hoarsely ejaculated.

She fought with tigress strength to free her hand and failed. With her left hand she sought the second heavier knife that had been sheathed in the waving cockscomb of her helmet.

"Fiends of hell!" Waldron shouted through the darkness. "Lights! Lights!"

His servants threw the switch in vain. The current had been cut.

With muttered curses he choked Virginia still, carried her in his arms into his library, tore the dagger from her bodice, found the knife in her helmet and flung her across the room.

"Move a muscle now—damn you! And I'll blow your brains out." He had found the pair of automatics in his table drawer.

He called from the doorway and two guards who had rushed in from the lawn answered.

He pointed to Virginia.

"If she moves, shoot her dead in her tracks. Stay until I return."

He sprang up the narrow steps to the wireless tower. His operator sat lifeless in his chair.

He seized the keys and called Central in the Woolworth Tower.

"The garrison to arms! At once—every man to his place and every ship's decks cleared!"

The Tower answered O. K.

VASSAR in the Tower, sprang to his feet trembling with alarm.

She had failed at the Palace. What did it mean? Her life was in peril. There could be no doubt of it.

He called every wireless station of the enemy on the North Atlantic. Not one answered.

"Good!" he muttered.

He called his three new stations in New Jersey and Westchester for mobilizing his cavalry and autos bearing his picked men. They answered in quick succession. He called his cavalry (armed as yet only with lances) to ride for their lives and meet him at the Palace of the Governor General.

He summoned the nearest operator to his relief in the Tower:

"Come, for God's sake, instantly," he called to Brooklyn, "and bring me a car—there's trouble at the Palace——"

"Coming!" the answer sang.

In fifteen minutes an automobile dashed across the bridge and drew up at the Woolworth building.

The new operator took his instructions and Vassar turned to the chauffeur:

"Quick now—to the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory. We have men and guns there." . . . .

Angela had waited in the machine for her leader to come from the Palace and drive to the first cavalry rendezvous in Westchester. Her part had been played. Her chauffeur lay still and limp in the shadows of the lawn. His belt holding the automatic, was about her waist.

She heard the shout of Waldron for the guards and knew that the complete plan had failed. The great man's servants were trained soldiers. They were fighting desperately inside.

With quick wit she threw in the clutch and the big touring car shot down the road and over the smooth open way of Riverside Drive. In fifteen minutes she overtook the first division of horsemen on the outskirts of the city, galloping to their appointed rendezvous.

"To the Palace of the Governor! Quick!" she shouted to the Captain. "Take my car. I take your horse—hurry! Our leader a prisoner—or dead—they fight and fight—quick!"

The Captain sprang from his horse, called a chauffeur, leapt into the car and gave his horse to Angela. She had learned horsemanship, among other things, in these two years of training.

"You know the rendezvous?" the Captain called.

"Si-Signor!" Angela answered. "I know. I have been to every spot. I was to drive my leader there. I go! I tell them. You go to her quick—for God and liberty—quick!"

Urged by her low nervous voice, the horse dashed down the roadway through Yonkers and on to summon the men—their guns were waiting in the Armories.

Waldron returned to the banquet hall—an automatic in each hand. The lights were on again. His assistant engineer had found the break and hastily repaired it.

The magnificent hall was deserted. Only the dead and dying officers in gorgeous uniforms lay in pools of blood on the slippery floor. The Daughters of Jael had done their worst and gone—their task to kill, disarm the enemy and deliver the equipments to our waiting men. They were hurrying now to their appointed places with these precious weapons of defense. Every sword and automatic had fallen into their hands except those worn by the sleeping guard in their quarters and the half dozen men who were scattered over the lawn.

Waldron quickly brought order out of chaos, barred his doors and found that he held his castle still with eight faithful soldiers and a dozen wounded servants.

He entered the library and took his place as the special guard of Virginia.

He deliberately took her in his arms and kissed her unresisting lips. Her mind was still stunned by the anguish of her failure. There was no longer feeling in body or soul. Nothing mattered.

"You're mine now!" he cried fiercely. "I'll hold you Cossack fashion this time! I would have made you a queen. You have chosen to be a slave instead——"

He paused in breathless rage, stepped close and struck her a stinging blow with his open hand. She

Are you giving your baby what he really needs?

Are you giving him sunshine? He will unfold and bloom in it like a flower.

Are you giving him the sunniest room in the house—with bare floor and painted walls? Are you giving him a perfect digestion?

With all their love, so many mothers do not know what to give their babies. Yet today, with our National Government searching for the truth each day—with doctors and scientists watching and thinking—you can know—without a shadow of doubt, what is best for your baby. His little feet need not stumble through the guess-work of earlier times.

This is what the U. S. Government says to you—and every mother—"Milk as ordinarily marketed is absolutely unfit for human food."

Nurse your baby as long as you can—then wean him gradually on the nearest thing to your own milk.

Nestlé's Food

(A complete food — not a milk modifier)

Nestlé's has in it the fats, proteids and carbohydrates that your baby needs. Don't try to use raw cow's milk as a make-shift. It won't do. Unclean—often filled with germs of consumption, typhoid—and that greatest of terrors—summer complaint—cow's milk carries off more babies than any other cause. Cow's milk fills the needs of calves—not of babies.

In Nestlé's—milk from healthy cows, purified—free from germs—the calf needs are modified—the baby needs are added.

Reduced to a powder—it comes to you in an air-tight can. No hand has touched it—no germ can reach it. It is a complete food—so you add only water and boil one minute—and you will know that you are giving your baby the food its little body needs.

Send the coupon for free sample box of Nestlé's—enough for 12 feedings—and the Specialist's book on the care of babies. Don't delay. Your baby's health depends on the food you give him now.

fell across a divan and he stood over her prostrate body with clinched fists.

"To think," he growled, "that I made this idiotic blunder to win your smile! Well it's mine! I've won it—do you hear? You've failed! My men are coming—do you hear?"

The slender, graceful form lay limp and still—the face chalk white. She had swooned at last. The blow was more than unconquered pride could endure.

He gazed a moment with bloodshot eyes, dropped suddenly on his knees and took her in his arms.

"But I love you—I love you!—You're all mine now—all—all mine body and soul! My little Lucretia Borgia—ah? Well, you've found your master. And you're worth the fight—a prize worthy of a king!"

CHAPTER XXXV.

WALDRON left Virginia to recover as he knew she would—hurried again to the tower to recruit his garrison. The answer came at once:

"The men are on the way, sir."

They were! Ten thousand cavalrymen with guidons streaming from their lances! A thousand automobiles were sweeping with them in companies of twenty—each machine packed with sturdy infantrymen. Their battle standards flew from speeding cars and made a thrilling sight as they raced through the villages on the way.

The car that led the first company of cavalry, which Angela had summoned, reached the shelter of the porte-cochere before Waldron's guards realized their presence.

Supposing the Imperial troops had answered the summons the big doors were open. The entrance was forced before Waldron saw they wore the uniforms of the United States Army.

He slammed the massive doors of the library, dragged Virginia through another exit and reached the upper story by the rear stairway.

The Captain held the lower floor. Waldron's guard armed with rifles and automatics, commanded the landings of the two stairs. Vassar found his men holding a council of war when he jumped from his car and entered upon the ghastly scene of the banquet hall.

As company after company of his horsemen swept into view and surrounded the house, he knew that the end was sure. Through half an hour of fierce fighting the Governor General held the upper story of the great house until his ammunition was exhausted. Before his last shot was fired Vassar rushed the main stairway, smashed into the room in which the Governor General stood with folded arms, and raised his pistol to fire.

Virginia lifted her hand:

"He could have killed me. He didn't—and you shall not! Let the law take its course."

Waldron clicked his heels, bowed to her and took his place between two guards. He spoke to Virginia without moving his big neck.

"My one regret, fair lady, is that I—lose you!"

The guard spoke in low command:

"Forward—march!"

Virginia threw herself into Vassar's arms.

"I failed, my love!"

"Your army has not failed, dear heart!" he answered. "You have lifted a fallen nation from the dust!"

It was true.

A hundred cities ran red with blood—but day dawned with the flag of freedom flying from every staff save in Norfolk and Boston.

In both these important ports the plot had been betrayed and hundreds of suspected women arrested and imprisoned. The serious part of it was that in these two harbors were stationed four huge dreadnoughts and forty submarines with accompanying hydroaeroplanes.

In New York the insurrection had swept all before it. The crews of the submarines were wiped out to a man of all who had gathered at the dance and banquet halls—Angela's work had been perfect. Not a sailor from the fleet set foot again on their decks. The Americans had dressed in the uniform of the enemy and captured every ship before daybreak, in hand to hand encounters.

The enemy aviation corps had been practically annihilated. Their machines were circling the skies at dawn passing the signals to our commanders. Every Arsenal fell and every ammunition factory, without exception.

When the sun rose on the harbor of New York, Old Glory flew from every ship and every fort and an army of a million men, half of them with the best rifles in their hands, and big guns lumbering in their lines, were mobilizing under General Wood to capture Boston and Norfolk.

The battles that followed were brief, bloody and glorious in their end. Norfolk was abandoned and the fleet was concentrated on Boston.

The Imperial Army and Navy fought with reckless courage and abandon, but they were outnumbered two to one. Their submarines stubbornly held on and sent six battle ships with five thousand of our bravest men to their graves before they went down.

The captains of the dreadnoughts, when they saw the end had come, turned their great guns on the city, laid it in ruins, swung their big prows into the teeth of the American fleet and went down with colors flying and their men shouting:

"For God and Emperor!"

On the day our army marched into the city with bands playing The Star Spangled Banner, three hundred thousand homeless Bostonians stood with uncovered heads on the Common, amid smoking ruins, and sang the songs of the nation. Again and again they repeated their favorite:

"My country t'is of thee,
Sweet land of Liberty,
Of thee I sing!"

When the triumphal procession swept down Fifth Avenue in New York for review by the President, who had been released from Fort Warren, Virginia Holland rode at the head of a division of fifty thousand sun-tanned, armed, athletic Daughters of Jael.

The orderly outrider on her left was a slender Italian mother on whose breast was pinned a tiny blood-stained flag of the Republic.

Congress met in December. The Senate used the East Room of the White House. The House of Representatives met in the Belasco Theatre. These two buildings stood intact.

John Vassar was elected Speaker of the House without a dissenting voice. His bride, from her seat in the gallery, watched through tear-dimmed eyes as he took his seat on the dais, and a wistful girl with smiling face sat beside her.

The first bill for consideration was passed without debate in just the time it took to call the roll—the bill which Vassar had introduced five years before. It covered an appropriation of $500,000,000 for the navy and provided for a mobile army of trained citizen soldiers of a million men with heavy artillery and perfect equipment.

The cost of our defeat and humiliation through two years of slavery had been more than thirty billions of the wealth of the people. This fabulous sum could have been saved by a paltry half billion invested in a navy.

Taught wisdom at last in the school of humiliation, defeat and ruin, a mighty nation lifted up her head in the sunlight of Freedom, and girded herself for a glorious future.

As a Man to His Friend

"Say, you look good to me!" He started to get up. Miss Larne was on her feet first, and going toward the door.

"Can the spoony stuff for now," she exclaimed. "I got to hurry back and throw some more highbrow talk into my five-hundred-dollar boob."

Big Bill Stone had but a moment in which to fling himself around the corner. The woman came out. She passed the corner where he was crouching and he heard a little, half-suppressed laugh.

"This smart guy is easier than the other one," she giggled to herself. "A couple of days more and I'll be in Albany eight hundred to the good, and they'll be rubbing the sore spots."

Then she was gone, tripping toward the boarding house. Bill followed, now with a clear understanding of her intent despite the strange language in which it had been spoken.

Stone found the parlor brightly lighted. With flaming face Johnny Peters sat at one end of the ratty sofa; Miss Tina Larue demurely at the other. A moment of embarrassed silence and then Johnny rose loyally to his promise of the morning.

"Bill, shake hands with Miss Larue," he said, and turned to her. "Bill Stone is my partner and him and me are going to get the farm I told you about."

Miss Larue was polite, whatever restraint it cost her. In the presence of a woman who was all Johnny thought this one to be, Bill Stone would have become silent and clumsy. But knowing Tina Larue, he found it easy to talk. He outdid his best previous tales of log jams that were broken at the risk of sudden death, and of fights in camps where the strength of the boss's arm was the only law. At the end of an hour Peters was wrapped in a heavy gloom from which no effort of the now uneasy Tina could draw him. Bill perceived that it was time to go, and he departed, well-satisfied thus far. In his room he smoked and meditated until Johnny came up, more cheerful and yet by no means buoyant.

"I wish I had your gift of gab," he sighed, as he struggled out of his stiff collar.

"Shucks!" answered Bill, dismissing the compliment. Then he plunged toward the thing he had in mind. "Johnny, will you do something for me and not ask any questions?"

"Sure, I will," replied Peters. "You know that, Bill."

"What I want is for you to let me keep that five hundred dollars for a week. Then I'll give it back."

The eyes of his partner, wide with astonishment, were upon him.

"You're sure you ain't going to have a spell of thirst come on?"

"Certain sure. I promise not to drink a drop nor go away from here till I give the money back—every cent!"

"If you promise, it's all right!" With many grunts Johnny dug inside his shirt and ripped out the pocket that held their capital. He handed over the thin package of bills, but there was a shade of misgiving in his voice as he said: "You want to be almighty careful of that, Bill."

Stone answered with a rumble of assent as his fingers closed eagerly over the money. Things were going as he wanted them to go. He grinned into the darkness as he went to sleep that night.

THROUGH the next morning Bill Stone waited impatiently for some break in the work, but it was not until close to noon that one came. With a word to the boss he drove the peevie end of his cant hook into the ground and set off at a half trot for Dan Harmon's boarding house; throwing a backward glance to see that Johnny, whose forenoon had plainly been one of unhappy thought, was not in sight.

Big Bill was just in time, for Tina Larue was coming down the steps of the boarding house. He stopped, pulled off his cap, and smiled with all the amiability of which he was capable. She hesitated, and astutely he saw that she was debating whether it was worth while to waste some moments on him.

"I wonder if maybe I couldn't walk along a little ways with you, Miss Larue," he asked. Most earnestly he wanted to let her know that he was now the bearer of the farm money.

"Why, I'm sorry." She flashed a brilliant, consoling smile. "If it wasn't that I'm going to stop in at two or three places to see about getting a shop, you could."

She swept on and left Bill disgruntled but helpless. He turned, at a medley of voices, and saw the river men streaming in to dinner. Johnny Peters, with a funereal face, was at his side.

"Come around the corner a minute, Bill," said Johnny. "I want to tell you something almighty important."

Stone followed him with sinking spirits. Caught in his attempt to cultivate the woman, he now feared that Peters would believe him taking unfair advantage. It was not until the little man was well on with what he had to say that this fear passed.

"I just found out why you wanted the money last night." Johnny's face remained inscrutable. "Albert Mustin

No Pain or Suffering —Just "Played Out"

Lack of energy, brain fag, or whatever you choose to call that played-out, run-down condition that makes work a burden, is generally due to the exhausted condition of the nervous system.

The power of resistance is not in the muscles, but in the nerves. Men and women of today need nerves of steel, whether their occupation is controlling a business, keeping books, teaching school or looking after household affairs. When the effects of concentration, worry and overwork become evident, proper nourishment for brain and nerves must be provided, or a complete nervous breakdown will result.

Heed Nature's Warning in Time

Don't wait until the doctor says "overwork" and orders a "complete rest," but heed the old adage about "a stitch in time"—and order today a dozen bottles of Pabst Extract—the "Best" Tonic. It will strengthen the worn out nerves, impart new life and energy to the weary tissues and increase your ability for successful effort in all endeavors. Pabst Extract combines the tonic properties of hops with the rich food elements of barley malt in just the right proportion. The lupulin of the hops stimulates the flow of digestive juices and aids assimilation, while the barley malt builds new blood and starts the red corpuscles charging through your system again.

Pabst Extract is Not an Alcoholic Beverage

Nor does it contain any harmful, habit-forming drugs. Pabst Extract is made from the choicest hops and barley, fortified with calcium hypophosphite and iron pyrophosphate. It is endorsed by thousands of physicians—it is specifically classified by the United States Government as a medical preparation and not a beverage. Its use is recommended for nervous disorders, dyspepsia, insomnia, anaemia, old age, motherhood and for convalescents.

NORTH BROS. MFG. CO., Philadelphia

come hanging around me this morning when you was down the river, and he let the cat out of the bag. Some way he's found out about me carrying our money around with me. He talked like he wanted to find out if it was really true. Anyway, Bill, I'm dead sure the skunk is planning to rob me. You knew that last night, Bill Stone, and the reason you asked for the money was so I wouldn't get whacked over the head."

Johnny Peters' eye was accusing, and Bill, whose understanding had been following a sentence or two behind the news, suddenly realized that chance and Johnny's unshakable loyalty were playing into his hand.

"I ain't afraid to take chances myself," went on Peters, his face lighting with affection, "but I sure do like the kind of partner you are."

"Did you let him know I had the money," demanded Stone.

"Yes, like a lunkhead." The little man was deeply self-reproachful. "I blurted it out before I knew he was trying to pump me. And anyway it didn't come to me that he was planning anything like robbing us till after he'd gone."

"Don't you worry about that, Johnny!" Big Bill laughed with more pleasure than his partner knew. "I can eat up seven or eight fellers like Bert Murrin. Let's go and grub up now—I'll be careful how I go out nights."

It was a cheerful meal for Bill Stone, and he chuckled to himself at intervals. Murrin had the kind of mind that would doubt everything except what he ought to doubt, and so he had gone investigating for himself the story of the partnership money. Of course he would report his findings to Tina Larue.

Bill went back to his work that afternoon, still with little chuckles welling up within him. And while he was trying to shape plans for his next move the initiative was taken from him. He was crossing the boom that held five thousand logs banked up in the gorge below the falls when he saw a ragged youngster wave to him from shore. With a grin the boy gave him a small pink envelope. Stone drew in a whiff of that perfume which Miss Larue used so unsparingly and then he read:

"Sorry I had to turn you down to-day. I will have a nice little lunch on top of the gorge across from the village tonight, if you want to come and see the sunset with me, instead of your supper."

It was signed "Tina Larue." Bill turned to the waiting boy.

"You go back and say 'Sure, as quick as I can get cleaned up after work.' Scamper."

Albert Murrin had reported and Tina Larue was turning the battery of her attentions upon Big Bill. Already he tasted the satisfaction of his coming triumph, when he would prove to his friend that the woman was false.

While the river gang ate supper that night Bill struggled into his best clothes. With complete belief in his own strength and cunning he had sewed the money into his shirt and he was patting it affectionately as he passed Johnny, standing dejectedly out in front of the doghouse. Peters said nothing, but the look of him cut Bill to the heart. Little men who kept straight and did not talk much took things the hardest, he reflected, and hurried on, wishing earnestly that he could lessen the pain to his partner.

Stone crossed the bridge and followed along the river bank until he found himself above the deepest part of the gorge and just below the little cluster of buildings that was Mountain Falls. There, in a small natural clearing, waited Tina Larue; with a white cloth spread over a rock and a dainty lunch that Bill could have swept into him as a mere appetizer. She used her smile, and waved a hand indefinitely at the mountains.

She had chosen her setting well. Mauve and pink and gold spread up over half the heavens from the peaks of the Adirondacks. The valley of the village was filled with the light greens of spring. Behind the trysting place was a dark background of pines and firs; and from their feet the rock wall of the gorge went down sheer for more than fifty feet to the log-filled river, where already dusk was gathering.

"Some place, what?" She spoke in the flat tone of that conversation in Albert Murrin's room; but the next moment she had caught herself up sharply and was using the honied accents of the boarding house parlor. "Isn't it delightful, Mr. Stone?"

"It's pretty, all right," answered Bill, as he sat down beside the stone table. "Kind of makes a feller feel as though everybody in the world had just got to be good—looking at the mountains makes you feel that way."

He caught a little glint in her eye and when she replied he thought it was with a tinge of contempt.

"Oh, yes; and I suppose pretty soon you and Mr. Peters will have a place where you can see such things every night."

Bill enthused over the coming farm; and then he let himself blunder along after the woman's deft questions, telling how he had taken the money from Johnny for safe keeping, because he was the stronger and how, at that very moment, ten fifty dollar bills were sewed into his undershirt. It began to grow dusk, so that Miss Larue's face was a somewhat blurred oval. Her voice grew sharper. Big Bill answered placidly and waited, with a sense of enjoyment in the adventure, to see what her next move would be.

The denouement came with startling swiftness. Suddenly Tina Larue coughed. Even as it struck her companion that her cough had an artificial sound, she repeated it. Then he saw her head turn so that she was looking behind him. A vague sense of danger tensed his muscles, but before he could rise a million little points of fire dotted his vision, and he fell forward, rolling toward the edge of the cliff. The next instant he was on his knees, swaying, and he heard the woman fling out an angry exclamation.

"I told you to strike hard, you fool!" she cried. "He's an ox! Give it to him again, quick!"

But Big Bill was on his feet now, and an upflung arm struck away the club that was swinging down toward his head. He threw himself into a clinch with the man who had aimed the blow. The indefinable smell of the barber shop told him that it was Albert Murrin whose arm had been nerved by Tina Larue. They swayed back and forth, feeling for holds. At the moment Bill Stone was no more than half himself, and so Murrin's fresh and no inconsiderable strength gave him trouble.

They staggered nearer the precipice. Bill felt the woman clawing at his back; bringing her fists up behind his ears with what strength she could muster. But now his head had cleared and power came seeping back into his muscles. He braced his legs. With a mighty heave of his shoulders he shook himself free of both man and woman.

Then before his eyes the hand of death was stretched out. Albert Murrin, with hands clutching at the air, tottered on the very brink of the gorge. The woman was carried forward by the fury of her last attack on Stone until she came within reach of Murrin. Each grasped at the other. For an instant they were silhouetted against the pale sky and then they disappeared, plunging down toward the blackness of the log-filled river.

Big Bill had sprung to save them, but they fell even as his arm was stretched out. He stood there a moment, numbed by the tragedy. Then broken cries came from behind and he turned. Johnny Peters, shaken by dry, deep sobs, grasped his partner's arm.

"I seen it, Bill! I seen it!" he cried. "I suspicioned Murrin and so I followed him. I seen her trying to save you! And now she's dead! Oh, my God, Bill! How you must feel!"

Stupidly Bill stared down into the face lifted to his. Without speaking he let himself be dragged along the river bank and over the bridge to the village. Then he and Johnny and old Dan Harmon were at the head of a posse of men, picking their way carefully by lantern light over the mass of logs in the gorge. When they found what they sought, lying broken and still at the foot of the rock wall, the men gathered in a hushed circle. Johnny had told, in fragments, the story as he believed it to be. Dan Harmon was the first to speak.

"Be you sure, Peters," he began, "that this Larue girl wasn't playing in all the time with——"

The great fist of Big Bill Stone came down upon the old man's shoulder and closed with a grip that gathered up a mighty handful of cloth and flesh.

"I'm sure!" he rumbled. "And I don't want to hear anybody say I ain't!"

It was after others had taken care of what had been Tina Larue and Albert Murrin that Big Bill and Johnny Peters walked slowly toward the boarding house.

"It makes a better feller to know a girl like that," whispered Johnny. "It kind of gives him something to remember and tie to—and I'm glad I done right by her, Bill, while she was alive. I guess I couldn't stand it if it wa'n't for thinking of how she'd like to have a feller act."

Bill Stone knew now to a certainty that all his life he would have to mourn for a love that never had been; that always he would have to seem to cherish a memory that he loathed. He must keep the faith of Johnny pure and unwavering, for it was the breath of life to him. Bill took his resolution to do this joyously, for suddenly it had come to him that he was blessed with one of the choicest gifts of God—the friendship of a true man. Johnny Peters would never seem little to him again. And as Big Bill comprehended the fulness of his riches he felt himself standing upon the heights of the spirit.

The Hen and the Golden Egg

By Kate V. Saint Maur

WHAT is called custom hatching can be undertaken by one who doesn't even own a hen—the operator being paid for his care of the eggs during the period of incubation. But the average operator of a large hatching machine usually does keep flocks of hens, so that he can incubate eggs from his own plant during March, April and May, and sell chicks as soon as they are hatched.

Many people prefer these two comparatively new branches of poultry work rather than raising quantities of chickens to sell as broilers, since it does not involve the feeding of young chicks or cleaning of brooders. The main factor is a quantity of healthy hens to supply the eggs, and it is advisable that the breeding stock should be of some popular variety. A good incubator cellar is indispensable. Then, of course, you have got to have several medium-sized machines and a certain amount of judicious advertising.

In place of medium-sized machines many operators are installing large sectional hatchers, holding from a thousand to twenty thousand eggs, and say they are no more difficult to take care of than a small one. The machines are arranged in sections holding one hundred and fifty eggs each, so one section can be started at a time without interfering in any way with the others, which means that a supply of chicks can be kept up all season.

All manufacturers of large hatching machines supply plans for cellars at very reasonable prices, and such a building costs little on the ordinary farm, where there is generally enough building stone right at hand, and some one on the place or in the neighborhood who understands enough of masonry and building to do the work without calling in expensive expert labor. But I advise the beginner to start with two or three small incubators in the house cellar. Personally I don't care for a large machine and have nothing but 120 and 260 egg incubators on my place.

The usual price charged for hatching eggs for customers, where they find the eggs, is seventy-five cents a tray, and day-old chicks from ordinary stock vary in price from ten to fifteen cents.

No matter what sized incubator is being used, strict cleanliness must be observed. Scrub it out with hot water and soap; clean and light the lamp, and when nearly dry, spray the interior with some strong disinfectant. Then close the incubator and heat it up. Keep it hot for a day, then run it for a day or two with the door open, that it may thoroughly dry out. An incubator that has stood in the cellar from last hatching time is very apt to be musty or moldy, and pains must be taken to have it sweet and clean. Chicks hatched in a foul incubator are very apt to be diseased, and if the machine is very bad the eggs are apt not to hatch at all.

Eggs also should be cleaned before they are placed in the incubator. This can be done by dipping them in a bath of ninety per cent grain alcohol. There is no danger incurred in dipping the eggs, and it destroys any germs of white diarrhoea which may be lurking on the shell.

Fruits and Their Uses—Salads

WHAT to do with the odds and ends of fruit which accumulate in every household is often a vexing problem to the housewife. Two bananas, an orange, the remains of a can of peaches a few nut meats and two or three cherries with some juice left in a bottle make rather a discouraging show on the pantry shelf but with a little thought and some work they may be transformed into a very delicious salad or "fruit cup." Fruit salad and fruit cup are pretty much the same thing differing principally in their place on the menu and the method of serving. The salad is usually served with French or mayonnaise dressing while the cup has fruit juice, liqueur, or some sauce poured over before serving. The salad follows the meat course, preceding the dessert which indeed it often takes the place of. The "cup" precedes the soup and at informal "little" suppers is very often the principal dish on the bill of fare.

There are many different combinations of fruit which may be used. The important thing to remember in making these combinations, is not to give prominence to any one fruit. The salad must not be top-heavy with apple nor must it be too much speckled with maraschino cherries. It must not be dressing soaked but every part must have been touched by the dressing. Mix the fruits lightly using a silver fork. Thoroughly chill before serving.

The dressing is a very important part of the salad inasmuch as that adds greatly to the nutriment as well as the flavor. Only the finest olive oil must be used and it is a wise economy to pay a good price in order to have the best. Inferior oil falls short in point of nutriment and many an otherwise delicious salad is hopelessly spoiled by the flavor of a cheap salad oil. Two tablespoonfuls of vinegar to four tablespoonfuls olive oil is the proportion for French dressing although this may be increased or decreased to suit individual tastes and one-half teaspoonful salt and one-quarter teaspoonful pepper are added for seasoning. This formula is good for meat and vegetable as well as fruit salads but for the fruit the pepper may be left out. Mix until quite smooth. Mayonnaise dressing is one over which many young cooks used to stumble but [illegible] mayonnaise threatens to become a lost art since some clever man discovered that he could save the housewife much work and worry by making and bottling this delicious dressing. He was wise enough to know that to be successful he must use only the best ingredients and exact proportions and to leave out anything for thickening except eggs, with the result that today few housekeepers take the time and trouble to make mayonnaise knowing that they can keep a bottle handy at all times of perfectly safe dressing.

A very good wine dressing for fruit cup is made by mixing one-half cupsugar, one-third cup sherry wine and two tablespoonfuls Madeira.

Pineapple and Date Salad

Lettuce
Hawaiian Pineapple
Dates
Maraschino cherries

Take for each service a lettuce leaf. On this place a slice of pineapple. Split open and stone the dates and lay them in a circle on the pineapple. In the center pile a few maraschino cherries. Serve with a French dressing made of

2 tablespoons best oil
2 tablespoons vinegar
4 tablespoons pineapple juice, salt and pepper

—Mrs. C. E. P., Laconia, N. H.

Fig Sweet Salad

[illegible] California black figs
[illegible] nuts
Pineapple
Brandied cherries

Stew and sweeten the figs. Chop with the nuts. Add the dressing and serve piled on slices of Hawaiian pineapple.

Dressing

Beat the yolk of one egg thick adding gradually one-third of a cup of powdered sugar. Beat and fold in the white of one egg and one and a half cups of whipped cream.—L. S. C., Brookfield, Ill.

Mixed Fruit Salad

2 tablespoons granulated gelatine
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup ginger ale
½ cup apples
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup Malaga grapes
½ cup celery
4 tablespoons pineapple pulp

Dissolve the gelatine previously soaked in cold water in one-third of a cup of boiling water; add the lemon juice, ginger ale, sugar and a few grains of salt. Fold in the grapes, skinned and seeded and cut in halves, the celery in crisp shreds, the apple chopped fine and the pineapple diced. Chill in individual molds and serve with mayonnaise dressing.—(No name or address given.)

New Fruit Salad

¼ lb. marshmallows
3 bananas
1½ cups of white cherries stuffed with nuts
4 oranges
2 cups pineapple

Slice the bananas and dice the oranges, pineapple and marshmallows. Drain the juice from the fruit, powder lightly with sugar. Mix. Chill thoroughly and serve on lettuce with whipped cream to which has been added a little mayonnaise dressing.—A. J. W., Topeka, Kansas.

Fruit Salad

1 pint cranberries
6 oranges
4 bananas
1 cup walnut meats
3 cups sugar

Scald the cranberries adding a tiny bit of soda to the water. Make a syrup with the sugar and one-half cup water. Throw the cranberries into the syrup. When the syrup is cooled, pour over the other fruits. Serve very cold.—G. W., Waterloo, Ia.

Apple Duff

4 good sized apples
¼ pound raisins
Cinnamon

Make a dough with one cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half cup sweet milk, tablespoon lard and a pinch of salt. Roll out on board and spread on it half of the apples sliced. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Bring the dough up over the apples and pinch the edges together. Put into a well greased pan. Put the rest of the apples around the dough in the pan, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, add a little boiling water from time to time and bake for one hour in a slow oven. The apples and raisins baked around the dough provide a delicious sauce for the pudding.—Mrs. F. L. S., Muncie, Ind.

Winter Marmalade

1 quart white grapes
4 large greening apples
2 oranges
½ lemon
1 pint water
2 lbs. white sugar

Cook grapes with a pint of water, rub through a strainer. Cut oranges and lemon in very thin slices. After removing seeds and white skins from pulp, use rind from one and one-half oranges (grated). Put oranges, apples and lemon in a bowl, cover with water, let stand over night. Next morning add 2 pounds white sugar. Cook 10 minutes, then set away until next morning. Boil slowly for an hour, add the juice from the grapes and cook slowly another hour or until thick enough. Stir as little as possible. Cook in granite pan. Juice from any kind of grapes may be used, but the white grapes make a pretty coloring to a delicious dish.—Mrs. J. C. K., Burdick, Ind.

THE DISH OF SUNDAY NIGHT

The Sunday night supper of childhood is something one never forgets. Sunday is the home day—children's day. And the late dinner suggests a bedtime dish.

We suppose a million dishes of Puffed Wheat in milk are consumed every Sunday night.

Bubbles—Light as Air
Fragile as a Snowflake

The bowl of milk belongs to Sunday night.

Into it pour these bubbles of whole wheat—crisp and toasted, eight times normal size.

They crush at a touch when you eat them. And they melt away into granules bewitchingly delicious.

Each is a whole wheat kernel, with 125 million food cells. Every food cell is exploded by steam, so it easily and wholly digests.

Never was a wheat food so hygienic—never one so nutritious—and never one so enticing. It remains for always, in homes that know it, as the queen of all dainty dishes.

Most luxury-loving homes, the country over, know Puffed Grains as breakfast delights. But they are more than food confections. They are scientific foods.

Prof. A. P. Anderson is their inventor. And the object and result is to perfectly fit whole grains for food.

Wheat and rice, in this puffing process, become the best-cooked cereals known. There is no other way of serving these grains which compares with this puffed form.
